Executive summary

Context

This report assesses the extent to which domestic abuse safe accommodation-based support provision in London meets the statutory duty placed by the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 on tier one local authorities.

Domestic abuse safe accommodation-based support means providing domestic abuse specific support services to people who are in domestic abuse safe accommodation.

In London, the Greater London Authority (GLA) and Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime (MOPAC) are working in partnership to meet the requirements of the Duty. MOPAC and the GLA commissioned Crest Advisory to conduct an independent needs assessment to help them meet the Duty and provide recommendations to inform the refreshed London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy.

Approach

A mixed method approach was adopted for this needs assessment which meant combining qualitative and quantitative methods for data collection and analysis.

We conducted quantitative analysis of published and local data including but not limited to: Crime Survey of England and Wales (CSEW), police recorded crime, homelessness case level collection (H-CLIC) and On Track which collects detailed case information on victims/survivors of domestic abuse. The qualitative analysis included a document review, interviews and focus groups with relevant stakeholders, and interviews and surveys with victims/survivors. Engagement totalled over 40 participants.

Partnership working and the Whole Housing Approach were both considered as deep dive areas to support wider analysis and inform the Mayor's future commissioning plans.

Findings

Rates of police recorded domestic abuse crime in London have increased over the last three years, though are still proportionately lower than its most comparable forces. In parallel, the number of households in London owed a prevention or relief from homelessness duty due to domestic abuse increased by 15% between 2020/21 and 22/23. This suggests that there has been an increase in DASA-based support demand over that time.

Victim/survivor experience

- Overall, victims/survivors that were engaged described their experience of receiving safe accommodation and accommodation-based support as positive. Those that had negative experiences described issues around the quality of accommodation and the lack of long term provisioning of counselling/therapy.

Demand

- Safe accommodation-based support service providers are clear that both volume and degree of need for both housing and DASA-based support have increased in recent years. This may be connected to long-term austerity which led to the withdrawal of early intervention services meaning there was a lack of early, preventative support as well as the impact of COVID-19 and cost of living
- The minimum identified demand for safe accommodation and safe accommodation-based support across London in 2022/23 was 11,472 referrals. However, this is likely to be an underestimate due to recording practices and missing data
- Of the unsuccessful referrals to Mayoral commissioned DASA-based services, almost a third were due to capacity and a fifth due to not being able to meet the needs of victims/survivors
- Practitioners described an increase in victims/survivors presenting with complex needs. Whilst the definition of 'complex needs' varied, all relevant practitioners discussed the need for intensive, specialist and longer lasting support

Provision

- In 2022/23, 80% of referrals reported by Mayoral commissioned domestic abuse safe accommodation services were successful. This is encouraging but as these numbers are based only on Mayoral commissioned service data, it is therefore likely to not reflect all unmet demand
- The Mayoral services commissioned under Part 4 of the Domestic Abuse Act (2021) offer a wide range of support to victims/survivors
- Victims/survivors are staying longer in safe accommodation due to the complexity of their needs and to the lack of move-on accommodation. This creates bottlenecks and decreases availability of support upstream
- Temporary accommodation is over-used to plug the gaps in availability of safe accommodation. It is often unsuitable and of poor quality. It is also a barrier to victims/survivors receiving DASA-based support

Challenges to commissioning

- Three key challenges to the Mayoral commissioning landscape emerged as most important: issues with the definition of safe accommodation, short funding cycles, and the geographical nature of provision

- Greenwich, Westminster and Havering saw the highest rates of households approaching their councils for homelessness support due to domestic abuse in 2022/23, with much higher rates than the national average
- Although there are geographical areas of high need in London, most victims/survivors are placed in safe accommodation in a different borough to the one they live in. This causes challenges for London boroughs in predicting demand for DASA-based support and commissioning local services to meet this demand. Practitioners shared that this could create tension between local authorities

Recommendations

Commissioning focus

- More refuge spaces should be commissioned, as capacity is the greatest barrier preventing successful referrals
- More commissioning of suitable safe accommodation and safe accommodate based support for women with more than two children and/or older male children is necessary
- There is not enough specialist provision for certain acute needs and victims/survivors with multiple disadvantages, especially for those with severe mental health needs. More appropriate support should be commissioned. This may include providing specialist provision or specialist staff in general provision
- MOPAC and local authorities should partner with more specialist providers around mental health and substance use. They should explore opportunities to bring these providers into safe accommodation settings to increase the opportunity for victims/survivors to be in safe accommodation that meets their needs
- This report has found that by the time victims/survivors' access DASA and DASA-based support their needs are acute. It would be beneficial to invest in preventative support and early intervention to reduce the severity of need in the DASA cohort

Commissioning approach

- Yearly funding cycles should be extended for all providers to ensure staff do not leave their post because their futures feel uncertain or that delivery time is overly spent on bidding for funds
- Feedback from victims/survivors who have received support from specialist by and for organisations, linked to their ethnicity, sexual orientation, and immigration status, has been very positive. Commissioning of these services should be maintained, and where possible grown, and funding cycles extended to ensure stability

Balancing the London DASA ecosystem

- MOPAC and GLA should explore alternative borough-based funding to incentivise all boroughs to invest more in local DASA provision even if their local victims/survivors receive support elsewhere and if they accommodate demand from other boroughs

- Boroughs should be encouraged to commission specialist provisions on a joint basis, including dedicated acute mental health support or dedicated substance use support to address the geographical challenges of commissioning
- MOPAC and GLA should consider smaller-scale, localised alternatives to the pan-London Housing Reciprocal

Addressing housing provision

- Work should be done to further align housing and DASA strategies by MOPAC and GLA
- A business case should be created to improve availability and quality of move-on accommodation and temporary accommodation. This will require an up-front cost but improve flow through the system to avoid the current bottlenecks in refuge spaces or overuse of unsuitable temporary accommodation which does not allow survivors to receive adequate support
- Sanctuary schemes and other kinds of safe accommodation should be piloted to reduce demand on refuge, second stage accommodation and semi-independent accommodation. This is especially important when considering refuge is not always suitable and/or the preferred option for some victims/survivors
- MOPAC and GLA should continue to work together to best support rough sleepers as a result of domestic abuse
- MOPAC and GLA should continue to lobby government for more social housing and affordable housing

Updated guidance

- MOPAC/GLA should lobby government for the DASA definition to be updated, in particular to enable support being given to victims/survivors at every stage of their journey, including when not able to be in safe accommodation due to shortage of safe accommodation provision
- Lobby government for clearer guidance on how to better provide support for those with insecure immigration status
- 'Complex need' is a term used to describe many different circumstances and this can create confusion. Multiple disadvantage should be better defined to support the commissioning and delivery of provision

Further research

- The evidence base for what safe accommodation provision and DASA-based support would meet the needs of the groups below and commission provision should be improved accordingly:
 - male victims/survivors
 - older female victims/survivors
 - children as victims/survivors of domestic abuse in their own right

Data recording

- Data recording around DA and DASA provision should be improved by becoming more systematic. On Track Data is very rich and could be a model for other partners
- A system for recording multiple disadvantage experienced by people is vital to ensure bespoke support can be commissioned and their needs better met

Partnership working

- To improve partnership working, all local authority housing teams, and housing associations in London, should be encouraged to undertake Domestic Abuse Housing Alliance (DAHA) accreditation. DAHA results in improvements in organisational culture and partnership working between statutory and non-statutory partners
- Children's Services should be encouraged to improve their systems, processes and cultural practices when it comes to victims/survivors of domestic abuse, and their children. The Mayor should advocate that every London borough has an adequately supported co-located Independent Domestic Violence Adviser (IDVA)

Whole Housing Approach (WHA)

- The WHA presents a significant opportunity to refresh the approach to protecting and supporting victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including by allowing them to remain in their accommodation and for domestic abuse perpetrators to relocate instead. This can reduce the need for safe accommodation and may decrease the need for long-term support services
- Should the Mayor wish to focus strongly on the whole housing approach, a more thorough review is recommended
- The Mayor should promote the WHA more widely in their strategy and communications. This could involve webinars or sharing WHA resources, for example. The Mayor should aim to build momentum and awareness around the approach
- To encourage implementation each local authority should identify which aspects of the WHA approach they want to focus on. The Mayor could provide recommendations around this
- The Mayor should identify how funding could be made available to support each local authority implementing the WHA

Introduction and approach

Context

'The Crime Survey for England and Wales estimated that 2.3 million people aged 16 years and over experienced domestic abuse in the year ending March 2024.'¹

In 2021, the Domestic Abuse Act² (forthwith the Act) was established to tackle domestic abuse and hold statutory agencies accountable in protecting and supporting victims/survivors of domestic abuse. Part 4 of the Act places a duty on each local authority to provide safe accommodation-based support to victims/survivors of domestic abuse. This needs assessment is associated with Part 4 of the Act and therefore is the only Part discussed in this report.

Under Part 4, local authorities are expected to:

- assess the need for accommodation-based domestic abuse support in their area for all victims/survivors and their children, including those that require specialist support and those who come from outside the area;
- develop and publish a strategy for the provision of such support to cover their locality, having regard to the needs assessment;
- give effect to the strategy through commissioning/de-commissioning decisions;
- monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of the strategy;
- report back to central government;
- establish a Partnership Board.

The first DASA needs assessment in 2021

As the tier one authority in London, the Greater London Authority (GLA) works in partnership with the Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime (MOPAC) to deliver these duties. As part of this duty, they commissioned the needs assessment in 2021, which identified that although they were meeting the Council of Europe's recommendations on the number of safe accommodation places for its population, the needs of victims/survivors were not being met.

The 2021 needs assessment found:

² Domestic Abuse Act 2021

- there needed to be a better understanding of demand and supply of safe accommodation, and safe accommodation-based support. There were key data gaps around specific cohorts of victims/survivors and the use of sanctuary schemes;
- that the current limitations of safe accommodation provision were leading to an increased risk of victims/survivors returning to the perpetrator or experiencing further mental health impacts;
- there were no common standards for the provision of safe accommodation across London, which had led to variable levels of support for victims/survivors;
- provision across London was currently commissioned and managed in silos, predominantly by each local authority, despite the majority of victims/survivors moving across London to flee domestic abuse;
- implementation of the new legislation needed to balance improving the quality of existing provision whilst pursuing opportunities to expand it.

This needs assessment is a refresh of the 2021 needs assessment, that was originally undertaken following the introduction of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021.

Aims of this refreshed needs assessment

In 2023, the GLA and MOPAC commissioned Crest Advisory to conduct an independent updated needs assessment which looked at how the demand and provision of safe accommodation-based support has changed since 2021, specifically regarding:

- domestic abuse victims/survivors' needs;
- provision and service gaps;
- the impact of newly commissioned services;
- the impact of COVID-19 and the cost-of-living crisis.³

This refreshed needs assessment is focused on Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation-based support (forthwith DASA-based support). However, in most cases, victims/survivors must be in safe accommodation to access DASA-based support. Therefore, this needs assessment has also looked at access to DASA-based support as a proxy for understanding DASA-based support demand.

The importance of this needs assessment is three-pronged:

1. Meets the duty requirement of completing a needs assessment
2. Meets the duty requirement of completing the reporting template
3. Informs the London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy refresh

³ The evidence reviewed did not enable us to determine to what extent changes in need and provision were definitively caused by COVID-19 and the cost-of-living crisis. Where these issues are relevant, they are referenced in relevant sections of this report.

Approach

The needs assessment was carried out over five months from October 2023 to March 2024 and had five distinct phases. We undertook a mixed methods approach which meant combining qualitative and quantitative methods for data collection and analysis. Table 3 shows the activities and timelines for each research phase.

We conducted quantitative analysis of published and local data including but not limited to Crime Survey of England and Wales (CSEW), police recorded crime, homelessness case level collection (H-CLIC) and On Track which collects detailed case information on victims/survivors of domestic abuse. See annex 1 for details on all the data sources used for this report.

The qualitative analysis included a document review, interviews and focus groups with relevant stakeholders, and interviews and surveys with victims/survivors. See table 1 for further details.

Victims/survivors

Interviews were held with 8 victims/survivors of domestic abuse. This includes a male victim/survivor, and victims/survivors from Black, Asian and minority ethnic backgrounds.

Data sources

The diagram above shows the datasets analysed in this needs assessment. There is no single source of data that consistently captures demand and provision for safe accommodation-based support. This needs assessment analysed seven key datasets to create as complete a data picture as possible. Key sources included housing data and service provision data. There is likely overlap between cohorts as shown below, but the scale of overlap is unknown.

Data caveats and barriers

The true demand for and provision of safe accommodation and safe accommodation-based support cannot be quantified with current recording processes.

There is no single source for unmet demand and provision of DASA or DASA-based support. This is due to the differing data recording processes and funding streams. Therefore, the following limitations should be considered:

- baseline demand is based on recorded referrals which may not include demand where victims/survivors have not been referred or include multiple referrals for the same person and has necessitated aggregating multiple sources to cover different services;
- demand by characteristic or need is not consistently recorded therefore existing data only paints a partial picture;
- unmet demand is visible through unsuccessful referrals but does not include those who have not been referred and may not include those who have been successful in other services;
- analysis of provision is based on each source and there may be some unknown overlap.

Data analysis is used to give the scale of demand, provision and unmet need. However, these limitations should be considered when examining the quantitative analysis in this report and taken together with the findings from the qualitative analysis.

Challenges to data recording contributing to data caveats

Data recording processes:

- some services do not record the reason why a referral is unsuccessful. This is important to be able to understand whether future commissioning needs to be tailored towards increased capacity, or a change in service delivery to better meet victim/survivor needs;
- some services cannot quantify unmet need because they advertise a bedspace when a space becomes available, meaning the demand whilst there are no bed spaces available is not measured;
- there is a lack of standardised definition and data classifications, for example types of services and characteristic breakdowns, which make comparisons across services challenging. Often data are attributed to an “other” category without clarification;
- many services cannot capture detailed data on victims/survivors who are unsuccessful in their referrals. Providers explained this is because it is not appropriate to ask for a victims/survivor's details after they have just been turned away from support.

Data recording in practice:

- the safe accommodation and safe accommodation-based support ecosystem is fragmented and there is no ownership and limited understanding on how data through parts of the system connect. This causes barriers to following victim/survivor journeys or understanding overlap or gaps in demand or provision data;
- there can be a lack of buy-in to record data to a high quality. This research highlighted some key reasons for this:
 - A lack of capacity to deliver the service so efforts are focused on delivery, specifically impacting smaller providers
 - A lack of skills to record data to a high standard
 - Uncertainty on how the data will be used;
- The quality of data recording varies dramatically across services. Many datasets contain a significant number of empty data or not applicable which make conclusions and comparisons challenging. This is specifically the case for data recording of victims/survivors' demographics and needs, due to recording practices it is not possible to capture cross sections of multiple needs and characteristics across multiple datasets.

Part 4 of the Domestic Abuse Act (2021)

In 2021, the Domestic Abuse Act⁴ was established to tackle domestic abuse and hold statutory agencies accountable to protecting and supporting victims/survivors of domestic abuse. The Domestic Abuse Act 2021 made tailored support possible by allocating responsibility to local authorities to provide support to victims and survivors of domestic abuse in safe accommodation for the first time.⁵

The Act includes but is not limited to:

- The legal definition of domestic abuse which determines children as victims of domestic abuse in their own right (Part 1);
- The appointment of a Domestic Abuse Commissioner (Part 2);
- New protection notices and orders (Part 3);
- Duty on local authorities to provide safe accommodation-based support to victims/survivors of domestic abuse (Part 4);
- Protection for victims and witnesses going through legal proceedings (Part 5);
- New criminal offences including controlling or coercive behaviour (Part 6).

This needs assessment is associated with Part 4 of the Act and therefore is the only Part discussed in this report. Part 4 places a Duty on each local authority to provide safe accommodation-based support to victims/survivors of domestic abuse.

Part 4(57)(1) of the Act states ‘each relevant local authority in England must —

- (a) Assess, or make arrangements for the assessment of, the need for accommodation-based support in its area,
- (b) Prepare and publish a strategy for the provision of such support in its area, and
- (c) Monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of the strategy.

Part 4 (57(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)—

“accommodation-based support” means support, in relation to domestic abuse, provided to victims of domestic abuse, or their children, who reside in relevant accommodation;

“relevant accommodation” means accommodation of a description specified by the Secretary of State in regulations.⁶

There are different types of safe accommodation that fall under the legal definition in the Domestic Abuse Act 2021. These include, but are not limited to:
Refuge accommodation	Single gender or single sex accommodation in shared or self-contained housing at a confidential address.
Specialist safe accommodation	Single gender or single sex accommodation to support those who share particular protected characteristics and/or vulnerabilities requiring additional support. This includes ‘by and for’ services.
Dispersed accommodation	Safe self-contained accommodation where a communal space or peer support may not be appropriate. This can also be ‘semi-independent’ support where victims/survivors need less intensive support than is offered by refuges.
Sanctuary schemes	Enhanced physical security measures provided to a home or the perimeter of the home.
Second stage accommodation	Accommodation for victims/survivors provided for a period before they move to fully independent and settled accommodation.
Single gender or single sex accommodation that is secure, dedicated to supporting victims/survivors, and has domestic abuse support tied to the accommodation, can also be defined as ‘safe accommodation’. This includes temporary accommodation that fits these requirements.

Support services (forthwith DASA-based support) include, but are not limited to:

- bedspace in safe accommodation;
- housing access support;
- services specialised to victims/survivors with protected characteristics;
- services specialised to victims/survivors with protected complex needs;
- trauma-informed service support;
- therapeutic support;
- domestic abuse prevention and awareness;
- financial advice;
- child and family support;
- advocacy and outreach;
- specialist training;
- capacity building.

⁶ Domestic Abuse Act 2021

The London context

The Greater London Authority (GLA) and Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime (MOPAC) work in partnership to meet the requirements of the Duty by commissioning safe accommodation support services.⁷

The GLA responsibility	MOPAC responsibility
The GLA has a duty as a local authority to commission domestic abuse safe accommodation (forthwith DASA), and safe accommodation-based support in London. In 2023/24, the Ministry of Housing Communities and Local Government (MHCLG) allocated £21,160,496.00 to support the GLA in the delivery of the Duty and committed to allocating £21,559,735.00 for 2024/25. The allocated funding is used to fund the continuation contracts and the call off contracts. The GLA provides grant funding to 21 London boroughs and 9 providers for them to continue to provide support services as they have done in 2021/22 prior to the introduction of the Duty. These are called continuation contracts, and last 12 months.	MOPAC conducts a procurement process on behalf of the GLA and London boroughs to onboard suitable providers onto the London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Framework. These are called call off contracts and last 13-month contracts. The framework has 3 lots: Lot 1: Safe accommodation direct services (excluding 'by and for' providers, but including local authorities) Lot 2: Safe accommodation direct services – 'by and for' providers. All activities under lot 1 and lot 2 can include safe accommodation and safe accommodation-based support Lot 3: System and infrastructure-related services. Activities under this lot include establishing and maintaining better links between statutory and voluntary services; increasing awareness; policy development; and improvement including data collation, staff training and support.

⁷ It is recognised that other workstreams exist to support victims/survivors experiencing domestic abuse including those who require accommodation, however, this SNA focuses on DASA support and its relevant funding sources.

London context of demand and provision

This chapter highlights there are two key trends that provide context to the DASA landscape:

1. An increase in police recorded domestic abuse crime in London
2. Decreasing availability of affordable housing London, which puts additional pressure on social housing

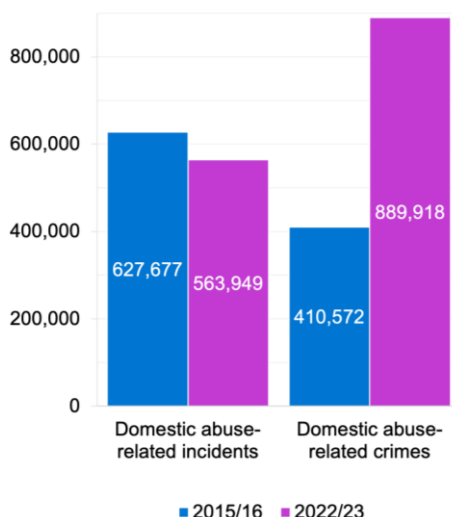

This would suggest that there may be additional demand on DASA provision compared to when the previous needs assessment was completed in 2021.

In 2022/23, there were 563,949 domestic abuse-related incidents recorded nationally, continuing the downward trend seen before COVID-19. Domestic abuse-related crimes remained similar to the previous year (889,918 compared with 889,311); however, they were 14.4% higher than the year ending March 2020, which was the point at which the previous needs assessment analysis was conducted (Go to annex 2 for a trend graph).

As seen in figure 1⁸ below there is a long-term increase in domestic abuse-related crimes with an 117% increase between 2015/16 and 2022/23. Increases seen in previous years may be, in part, driven by increased willingness and confidence of victims/survivors to report domestic abuse-related crimes.

The rate per 1,000 population of domestic abuse crimes recorded by the Metropolitan Police from 2019 to 2023 has increased by 8.1% (see figure 2⁹). A quarter (25%) of domestic abuse offences in 2023 were related to violence with injury.

Police recorded data highlighted that in London there were 27.9 domestic abuse incidents and crimes per 1,000 population. This is lower than comparable forces¹⁰, with 37.2 per 1,000 in West Yorkshire, 32.3 in West Midlands and 30.4 in Greater Manchester. However, the rate of domestic abuse crimes per 1,000 population recorded by the Metropolitan Police from 2019 to 2023 has increased by 8.1%. London's volume of DA is significantly higher than its most comparable forces but proportionate to population it is lower than other forces (See figure 3¹¹).

London's housing market has faced significant challenges in recent years. Affordable housing has decreased which practitioners suggest has increased the demand on social housing (see annex 2 for data illustration).

"There's a lack of generally affordable housing" - VCS practitioner

"The massive housing crisis. That is that is happening everywhere. It's not just you know, [Borough] specific. It's national" - Statutory practitioner

Overall demand

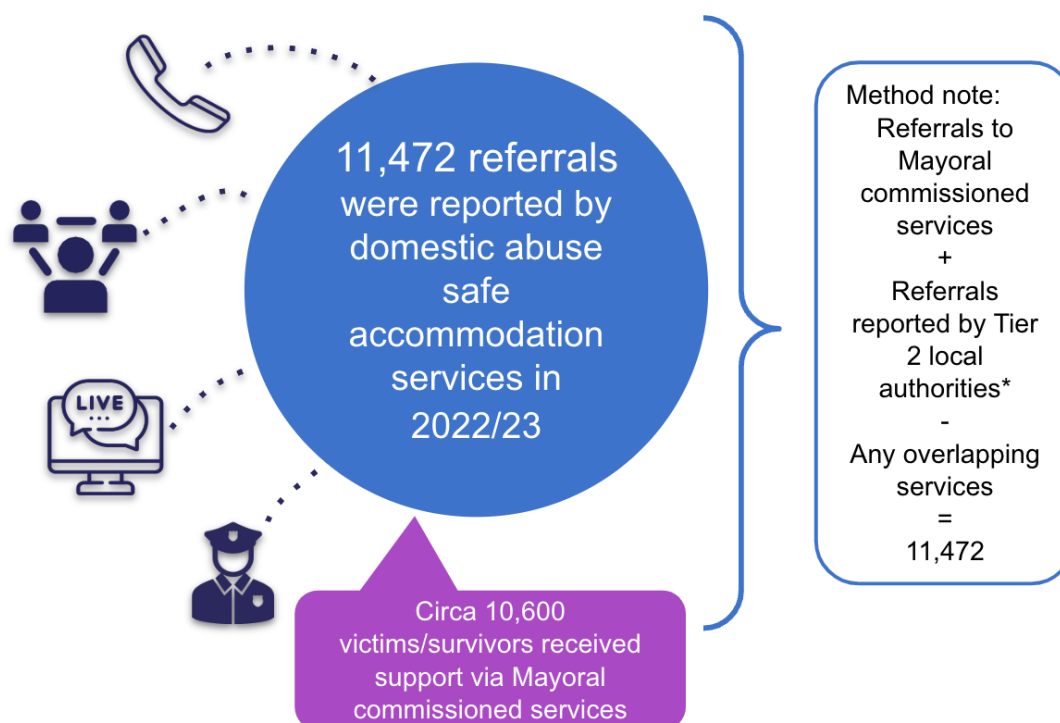

This chapter offers a reserved figure to illustrate the demand for DASA and DASA-based support in London by using 2022/23 referrals as a proxy. This is likely to be an underestimate due to organisations being unable to accept referrals where needs cannot be met by the service. Additional data suggests that needs are becoming more acute by the time victims/survivors are in contact with services, alongside the general increase in the volume of demand.

Mayoral commissioned domestic abuse services included in Crest's data collection reported 11,472 referrals¹² in 2022/23. This figure is to be taken as a minimum as it does not include all safe accommodation services in London, meaning the demand is likely to be much higher.¹³

Services' current monitoring methods and access to relevant data sources mean it is difficult to clearly distinguish the change in demand for these services over time and since the Act was introduced. One specific challenge in understanding true demand is that for many refuges, referrals are only received when a vacancy is open, rather than rolling referrals.

¹³ Source: Mayoral commissioned services monitoring; Tier 2 local authorities' MHCLG data submission

*The MHCLG return did not receive responses from all local authorities. Of the local authorities who did submit a response, not all services were able to provide relevant data, meaning this is likely not a full reflection of the true demand.

Volume and need

DASA-based support service providers are clear that both volume and degree of need for both housing and DASA-based support have increased in recent years. This may be connected to long-term austerity, COVID-19 and cost of living.

Service providers are experiencing a growing need for safe accommodation services, coinciding with rising constraints on their ability to deliver services to the capacity and quality they would like.

"We're clogging up the hotels because it's the only available space. But this is disruptive for families as our local authority will only allow hotels to be blocked out for a week." - Statutory practitioner

"We have a bed blocking problem – with the lack of move-on, [this] means the refuge is constantly full. As soon as someone's out, another one is in." - VCS practitioner

Service providers reported increased demand for safe accommodation services, especially during the peak of COVID-19. A lack of commissioning to address this rise in demand is resulting in service providers not being able to deliver the quality of service they would like and feel they are capable of providing.

“Across the board there’s been increased demand that spiked in COVID-19 that hasn’t really let up since” - VCS practitioner

Some attribute this increase during COVID-19 to heightened awareness of domestic abuse, possibly linked to a Home Office campaign. Others suggest that needing to stay home for public health reasons during the pandemic resulted in increased risk for domestic abuse victims/survivors. Providers also explained that this spike has not subsided and is potentially linked to an increased awareness of available support that is starting to reach the unmet need.

“In the housing department, since we got DAHA accreditation and the Domestic Abuse Act [2021] came in, we’ve seen a huge increase in those impacted by domestic abuse approaching the local authority for safe accommodation.” - Statutory practitioner

“The demand continues to increase but the service provision and money doesn’t. So we’re never going to meet that demand.” - Statutory practitioner

Homelessness need as a result of domestic abuse

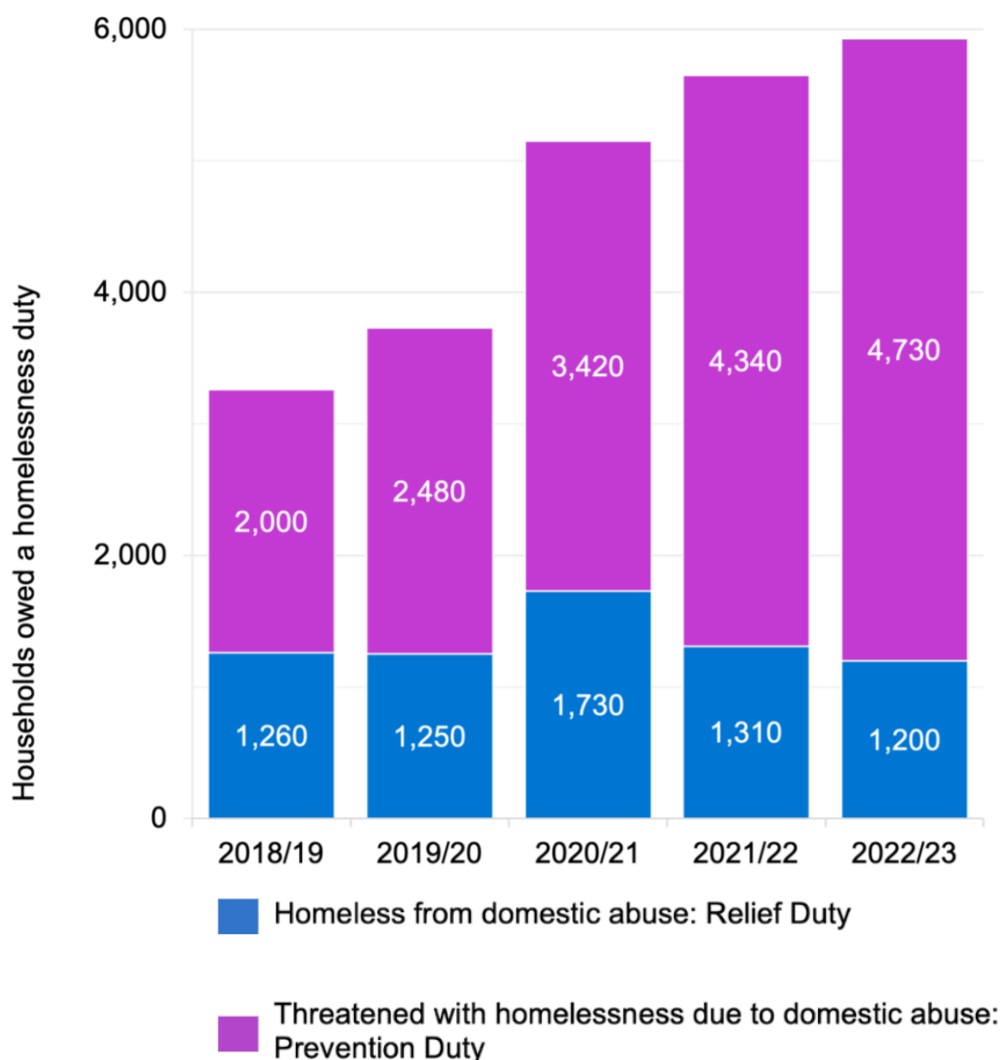

From 2020/21 to 2022/23, the number of households in London owed a prevention or relief duty from homelessness as a result of domestic abuse rather than other causes, increased by 15%. This illustrates the increased volume of demand for DASA provision.¹⁴

The Homelessness Reduction Act 2017 requires local authorities in the UK to take proactive measures in preventing and addressing homelessness. Over the last five years, there has been an increasing demand for this support across the homelessness sector as a whole, as well as for households impacted by domestic abuse.

In 2022/23, 57,140 households were owed a prevention or relief duty, 5,930 of these households (10.1%) were owed a duty as a result of domestic abuse.

Figure 4 Volume of households owed a homelessness duty (prevention or relief) due to domestic abuse 2018/19 to 2022/23

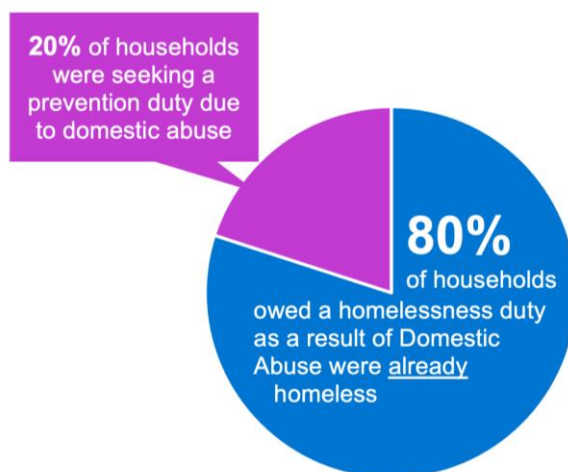

In London, there has been an increase in households seeking homelessness relief, outstripping the increase in those seeking homelessness prevention over the past three years. This suggests that the needs of those requesting housing support due to domestic abuse are increasingly acute by the time it comes to the attention of local authorities.

In 2022/23, 80% of households impacted by domestic abuse seeking homelessness support in London needed relief duties compared to 66% in 2019/20 (see figure 5).¹⁵ There has been an increase in households seeking support that are already homeless due to domestic abuse, compared to households at risk of homelessness. Under the Act, Tier 2 local authorities now have an automatic duty to prioritise those fleeing domestic abuse as well as lifetime security for tenancy to avoid homelessness.

The Homelessness Duty 2018 put emphasis on local authorities to intervene at earlier stages to prevent homelessness. However, the need for safe accommodation support by domestic abuse victims/survivors after they have been made homeless has been growing. The increase is greater in London compared to the rest of England (see table 6).¹⁶ In addition, the median price of a house in London is 13.3 times the average annual salary, compared to 8.3 for the rest of England.

Demand for housing support among victims/survivors that are rough sleeping has risen since the pandemic. As an extreme form of housing need, this demonstrates an increase in the acuteness of need. Figure 7 demonstrates the findings below.¹⁷

68 domestic abuse victims/survivors were rough sleeping in London in 2022/23, from a total of 10,053 rough sleepers (0.7%). The volume of rough sleepers over the past 3 years has been consistently higher than the previous 6 years. The further rise in rough sleepers in 2020/21 coincides with the onset of the cost of living crisis.

CHAIN data shows that in 2022/23, 68 rough sleepers in London left their last settled base due to domestic abuse, consistent with the previous assessment. This accounts for 0.7% of all rough sleepers in London.

CHAIN attributes the 2021/22 reduction in rough sleepers to COVID-19 associated homelessness initiatives, such as the Everyone In initiative, and increased use of the Severe Weather Emergency Protocol. The higher 2022/23 total is likely due to increased living costs and the gradual winding down of emergency provisions.

The rough sleeping trends on CHAIN in London mirror the pattern of all rough sleepers in London, showing a consistent increase over the past decade, with two exceptions in 2017/18 and 2021/22. 10,053 people were rough sleeping in London in 2022/23, which is 54% higher than it was ten years ago.

Demand and provision of DASA-based support by characteristics and specific need

This chapter explores the characteristics of victims/survivors needing or accessing safe accommodation support, specifically:

- gender;
- age;
- ethnicity;
- sexual orientation and gender identity;
- disability;
- substance use;
- mental health needs;
- women with insecure immigration status;
- women with children.

The summary of demand provision by characteristic and need can be found in table 2. This analysis draws on data sources and engagement with support services. However, there are victims/survivors who are not included in the data because they are not approaching services, meaning these findings on barriers and needs may only form part of the picture.

Table 2 Summary of demand provision by characteristics and need

	Demand	Provision
Gender	Women are disproportionately victims/survivors of DA and need support. There is an unmet need for male housing services.	Safe accommodation provision is not sufficient in meeting demand from female victims/survivors. More research is required to understand how to meet male victims/survivors needs.
Age	The 20-30 age range has the highest demand for support. Practitioners believe the needs of older victims/survivors is not understood.	Victims/survivors in early adulthood are more likely to receive support. More support is required for children who are victims/survivors of DA.
Ethnicity and language	Those seeking DASA and DASA-based support are broadly proportionate to the London 2021 census. Some data is unknown.	Lack of overall provision affects all ethnicities. However, victims/survivors from Black, Asian and minority ethnic groups are more likely to require support services tailored to their needs.

Sexual orientation	LGBTQ+ victims/survivors are more likely to experience homelessness and be male compared with other victims/survivors. While data indicates that need is largely met, practitioners reflected a high level of unmet demand.	LGBTQ+ victims/survivors are more likely to require specialised, tailored support services. Expert views indicate that more provision is required to fully meet need.
Disability	The needs of disabled victims/survivors are often not met. This can be for a number of reasons, including provision being physically inaccessible.	As well as commissioning specialist services, more consideration should be given to how current provision can be made accessible for disabled victims/survivors.
Substance misuse	Victims/survivors with substance use needs can require a more intense level of support which can make meeting their needs difficult.	Practitioners indicate that many refuges don't have the specialist skills to support substance related needs and there is a lack of other appropriate provision.
Mental needs	Demand for mental health support is high. Demand is also more acute and complex.	Provision for mental health needs is high but not enough to fully meet demand. The most severe levels of need were often not met.
Immigration status and no recourse to public funds (NRPF)	There is considerable demand for support for victims/survivors who have an insecure immigration status.	Despite an increase in bedspace available for those with an insecure immigration status, there remains an unmet need. This is partly due to the challenges in securing funding available to victims/survivors with NRPF
Women with children	There is substantial demand for DASA from women with children. Nearly half of all women supported by Women's Aid had children.	Refuge capacity for women with 2+ children has been decreasing over the last 6 years. There is little provision for this group and women with older male children.

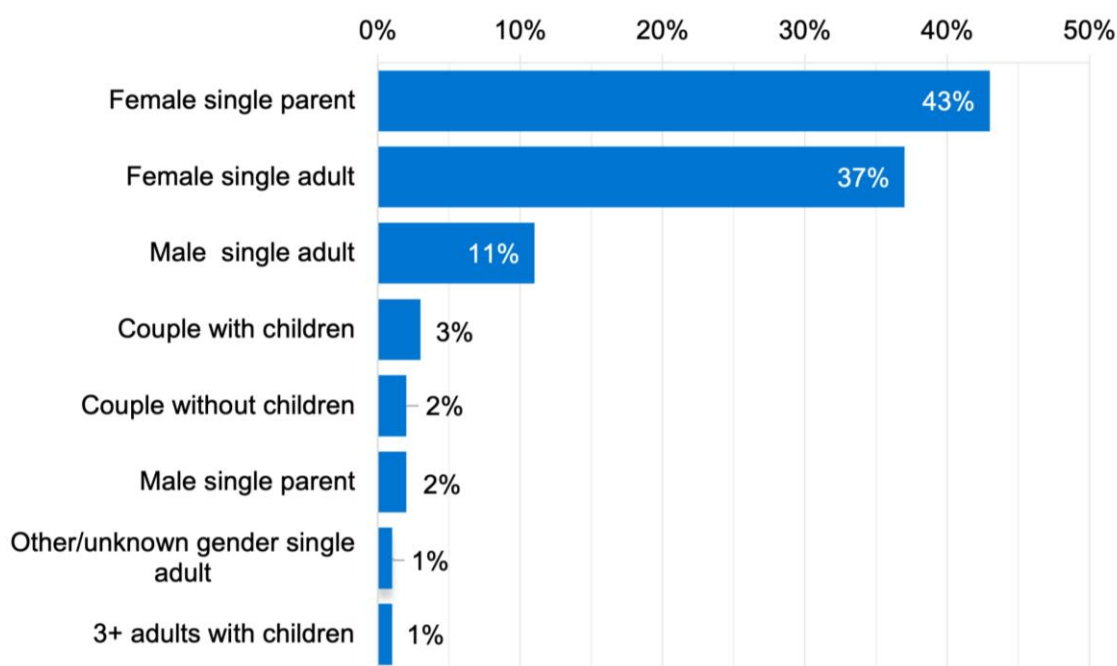

Protected characteristics

Gender

The majority of victims/survivors of domestic abuse are women and they make up the largest proportion of victims/survivors needing safe accommodation. However, provision of safe accommodation does not currently meet demand for women.

Women, both with and without children, have the highest need for housing support from their local authority when they are at risk of homelessness or already homeless because of domestic abuse; 80% of main housing applicants owed a duty and safe accommodation support were female. See figure 8 for further detail.¹⁸

Figure 8 Proportion of households owed a homelessness duty because of domestic abuse, by gender and family make up 2022/23

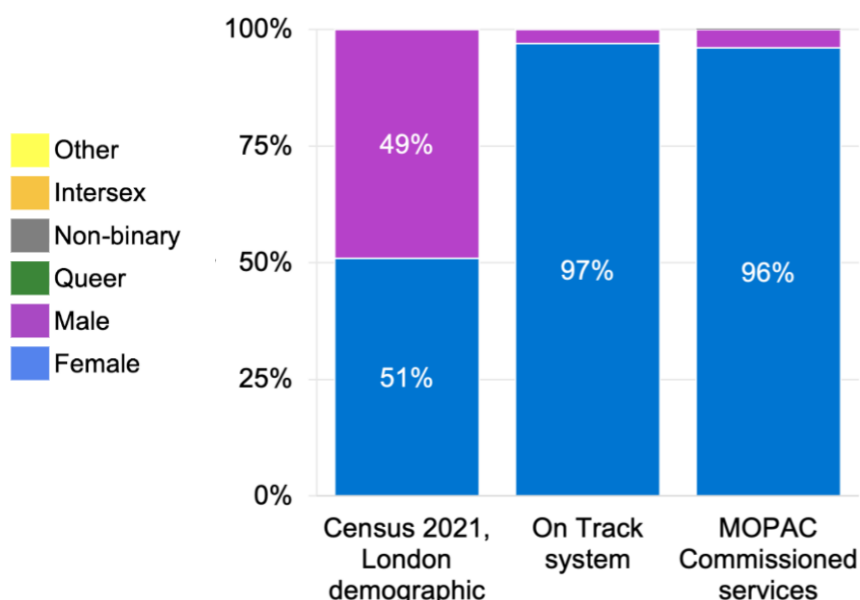

Comparing the gender of victims/survivors seeking and accessing support services on the On Track data system to the Census data on London's population highlights that women are overwhelmingly more likely to be requiring and receiving support from DASA and other domestic abuse services. See figure 9 for further detail.¹⁹

Figure 9 Gender distribution across London's population (Census 2022), victims/survivors accessing services registered on On Track, and in Safe Supported Accommodation (2022/23)

There is a need for services for male victims/survivors, particularly those who are rough sleeping.

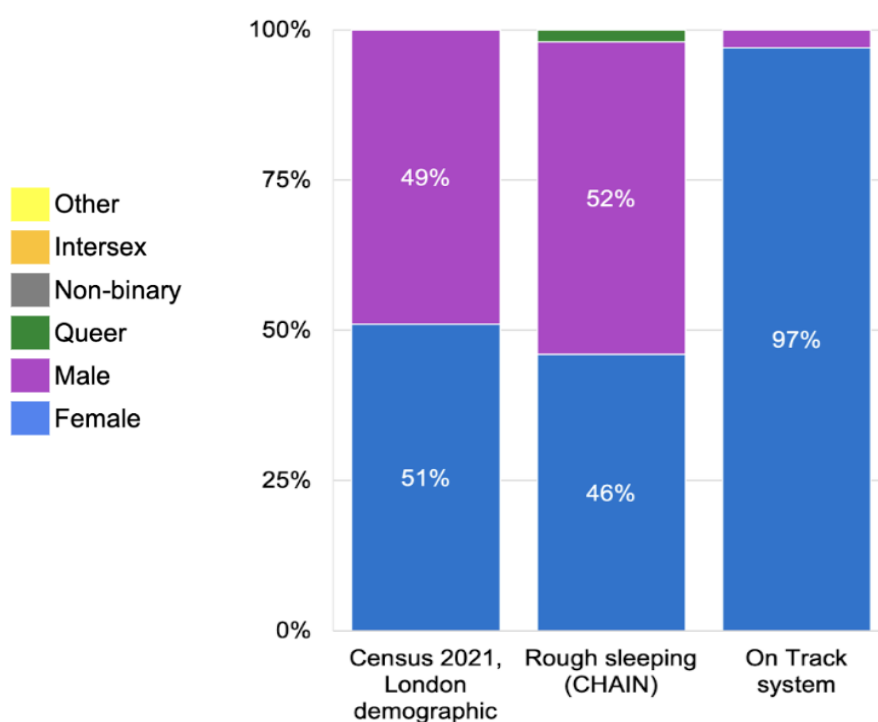

CHAIN data shows that the majority of domestic abuse victims/survivors rough sleeping in London are male, an increase in the proportion of men rough sleeping from 2020/21. Local authorities' efforts to prevent children from sleeping rough (who are most often with mothers), and a shortage of emergency support for men, may explain this increase in the proportion of men rough sleeping. See figure 10 for further detail.²⁰

However, women are more likely to experience 'hidden homelessness', where they stay in 'precarious or insecure arrangements with relatives, friends or acquaintances, because they have nowhere else to go'. They are therefore less likely to be captured as 'rough sleeping' in existing data collection methods.

A service provided by Victim Support is one of few services which offer male specific DASA support. They provide tailored support for up to 150 male victims/survivors (including people with insecure immigration status) a year. This support can include emergency safe accommodation, help with accessing move-on accommodation, resettlement support, and IDVA support.

Quantitative analysis suggests there is an unmet housing need for male domestic abuse victims/survivors in London – more research is required to understand how best to respond to the unmet need.

The provision of safe accommodation bed spaces in London for men impacted by domestic abuse is limited. See figure 11.²¹

ManKind is a specialist charity in the UK focusing on male victims/survivors of domestic abuse. The data they collected shows a national increase in refuge bed spaces that are accessible to men. Yet, there have been no recorded single sex dedicated refuge spaces available for male victims/survivors in London over the past five years.

Women's Aid present similar findings. Wider support services have increasingly offered support to men from 21% of services in 2016 to 28% in 2023. However, within this time there was no record of refuges or single sex dedicated bed spaces for male victims/survivors available for analysis.

²¹ Source: ONS Domestic Abuse 2022/23 release - ManKind data

Service providers echo this, explaining that finding a safe space for male victims/survivors is challenging, particularly for men with intersecting protected characteristics and support needs.

“We have a real difficulty in providing men with a safe space. We have to use hotels and hostels. But these are such a mixed bag of people with various different complexities and needs. It’s a massive issue for us, just as it is for every local authority in the country.” - Statutory practitioner

Those aged mid 20s-mid 30s are the age group with highest demand (see figure 12)²². Practitioners were clear that a gap in knowledge and provision exists for older victims/survivors.

“We have people of all ages but are skewed towards young people...It’s also worth remembering that the benefit cap which affects people that are under 35, in terms of housing benefit, and youth services traditionally go to 25. So there is this 25 to 35 year age group of people.” - VCS practitioner

Method note: Direct comparisons across datasets are not able to be made, as different datasets measure different age categories.

Need	Domestic abuse victims/survivors are disproportionately likely to be aged mid 20s to mid 30s compared to the general London population. This mirrors the average ages of the rough sleeping population, those seeking homeless duties or support services through On Track. Victims/survivors aged mid 30s to mid 40s also have a high level of need compared to the general London population, again mirroring the age distribution of those seeking homeless duties and support services through On Track.
Known provision	1,043 victims/survivors under the age of 25 were supported by Mayoral commissioned services. 72 victims/survivors over the age of 65 were supported by Mayoral commissioned services.
Known unmet need	188 (20%) women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid were under 18.

demographic (CHAIN) System

Children as victims/survivors of domestic abuse in their own right: Since the Domestic Abuse Act 2021, children exposed to domestic abuse in the family home are now considered victims/survivors in their own right. However, our findings suggest that the safe accommodation-based support for children is limited. Any support provided to children is usually an extension of meeting the needs of the female victim/survivor. Although there are some commissioned services for children in refuges, which include therapy and counselling, support still largely centres on the woman victim/survivor and their needs. One provider described support for children as an 'add on' rather than a core part of provision.

Practitioners suggested that the system might not be set up for prioritising children and their needs. Safe accommodation, such as refuges, are unlikely to have the skills and expertise to effectively support children. These needs may be better met outside of refuges, by other partners, such as children's services or voluntary sector organisations that work with children.

"One of the gaps in terms of safe accommodation could be not having particular teams focused on children. It could be recruitment issues, but also, it's quite new as well. I think the other thing with children is it's such a diverse group, like from, you know, like a toddler is going to want something very different to a five year old to a teenager." - Statutory practitioner

Since the Act was introduced, refuge data shows there has been a decrease in the proportion of women placed in refuge with children despite children being defined as victims/survivors in their own right in 2021. 719 children were placed in refuges in 2022/23, a decrease from 1,011 in 2018/19. Similarly, 47% of women placed in refuges had children in 2022/23, a decrease from 56% in 2019/20. See figure 13.²³

Child victims/survivors of intimate partner violence: The picture of children experiencing intimate partner violence is less clear; it is not known how many children are experiencing intimate partner violence, or if those that do have a housing need.

Ethnicity

Based on the known data, those seeking safe accommodation and safe accommodation-based support are broadly proportionate to the London 2021 census. However, lack of capacity affects all groups, including minority ethnic victims/survivors. See figure 14 for further details.²⁴

Need	All minority ethnic groups of victims/survivors make up just under half of the need for safe accommodation when looking

	at those rough sleeping, needing a homelessness duty and accessing support through On Track. This need is proportionate²⁵ to, and reflects, London's population as outlined in the Census. Whilst this does not indicate disproportionate level of need, our research highlights the different experiences of minority ethnic victims/survivors, and the need for services to be tailored.
Known provision	4,576 victims/survivors from Black, Asian and minority ethnic groups were supported by Mayoral commissioned services. 550 (53%) women placed in refuges through Women's Aid via On Track were from Black, Asian and minority ethnic backgrounds.
Known unmet need	466 (48%) women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid via On Track were from Black, Asian and minority ethnic backgrounds.

Minority ethnic groups

Victims/survivors from minority ethnic groups²⁶ may need specific support services that reflect the different ways and contexts in which they experience abuse. These needs are mainly catered for by 'by and for' services who have specialised knowledge and a better understanding of victim/survivor needs than mainstream services. Specialist provision is valued and should be maintained according to monitored need.

²⁶ These grouped identities are not absolute and do not reflect all individual experiences

Figure 14 Ethnicity distribution across London's demographics (Census 2021), domestic abuse victims/survivors sleeping rough in London, households owed a duty due to domestic abuse and victims/survivors in the On Track system, 2022/23

Black, African, and Caribbean groups: Providers noted how different power and family dynamics, religious beliefs, or social stigma within Black, African and Caribbean communities can act as a barrier to accessing DASA-related services. Providers noted that this is compounded by the lack of trust in DASA-related services, which can be more pronounced in these communities due to the systematic inequalities they face.

“In the Black African communities, specifically, there's this whole shame around exposing your problems” - VCS practitioner

Traveller groups: Providers emphasised that Catholic beliefs can stigmatise divorce which can impact on reporting of domestic abuse among traveller groups. Large close-knit families also make resettlement more difficult and can make it harder to keep victims/survivors protected from their perpetrators. Providers also spoke about how Traveller women can get turned away from refuges due to having many children or there being a one Traveller only policy in place.

“So we’ve heard of ... the one woman policy and then the strict refuge criteria in terms of just the number of children that you’re allowed to bring in, and like male children over a certain age, things like this.” - VCS practitioner

Latin American women: Practitioners working with women from Latin America suggested that Brexit had created an additional layer of complexity and need for this cohort. Many of victims/survivors hold European passports. If they do not have settled status, but they have pre-settled status, they can face challenges in accessing services in the UK.

Sexual orientation and gender identity

LGBTQ+ victims/survivors may need specific support that reflects the different contexts in which they experience abuse. While data indicates that need is largely met, practitioners have reflected that there is a high level of unmet demand.

“I can’t explain to you the level of need, like it’s way beyond any level of service that we can provide... I could literally double my staff team, and still not have enough resource” - VCS practitioner

“One of the things I found when we accept providers, referrals from organisations that are not LGBT, just LGBT specific, it misses a lot of the nuances around our community” - VCS practitioner

Need	Providers suggest that mainstream organisations had limited awareness of people's varying needs within LGBTQ+ communities. LGBTQ+ people are at higher risk of experiencing homelessness, poor mental health, and substance use issues. The way these issues intersect and are experienced by LGBTQ+ victims/survivors will be unique to their community. ‘By and for’ providers added that their service users tend to be younger and predominantly male. Whilst some providers reported that there could be a gap in provision for trans and non-binary people, MOPAC has commissioned the Outside Project to deliver the refuge accommodation to trans and non-binary victims/survivors. The project has supported 29 victims/survivors since its launch in July 2023.
Known demand	182 (4%) of victims/survivors referred for support through On Track services were LGBTQ+. 28 (1%) of victims/survivors trying to access refuges through Women’s Aid were lesbian or bisexual.

Known provision	1,040 (11%) of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services were LGBTQ+. 14 (≈ 1%) of victims/survivors were placed in refuges through Women's Aid were lesbian or bisexual.
Known unmet need	14 (≈ 1%) women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid were lesbian or bisexual.

Disability

Disabled victims/survivors²⁷ have specific needs but according to practitioners, they are not fully met, and more specialist commissioning should be considered, taking into consideration physical and other needs.

"I had one client, he was in a wheelchair, they were putting him in a hotel where there was one lift and the lift stopped working. So how was he supposed to get up?"
- VCS practitioner

Need	Mainstream refuge provision can be physically inaccessible to disabled victims/survivors and staff may not have the relevant skills and expertise to support them. Disabled victims/survivors often require a greater degree of flexibility in support provision. For example, certain disabilities may render 'safe accommodation' inappropriate and mean support is better placed at their home. Additionally, staff sometimes misunderstand the needs and behaviours of disabled victims/survivors, especially those that are non-physical.
Known demand	604 (10%) of households owed a duty had a physical ill health or disability. 1,398 (8%) of victims/survivors referred through On Track services had a physical disability.
Known provision	1,456 (16%) of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services had a disability. 22 (2%) of women placed in refuges through Women's Aid had a disability.
Known unmet need	11 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to disability. 40 (4%) women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid had a disability.

²⁷ As described under the Equality Act 2010

Victim/survivor survey case study: disability as a barrier to accessing accommodation can cause victims/survivors to remain in unsafe conditions

Person A who has caring responsibilities and is unable to work due to disability, still lives with the perpetrator as support services cannot guarantee they will be housed near their key support family member. Due to A's disability, the idea of moving away and being isolated is a worse situation than their current one.

They have been waiting on the outcome of their housing appeal since submitting it at the beginning of 2023, despite being told they would hear back no later than September 2023. They have yet to receive any communication on this matter and have been re-experiencing suicidal thoughts as a result. A expressed a desire for tailored support specific to their disability as well as a case worker willing to chase applications on their behalf as they have great difficulty doing so.

Overall A has had a very negative experience of applying for housing, given that they still have no housing support over a year since submitting their application.

NeedsLanguage

According to the On Track data, victims/survivors referred to support with English as a second language make up almost a fifth of all victims/survivors needing or accessing support. In 2022, 17% (1,026) of victims/survivors had English as a second language, showing a slight decrease from 19% in the previous two years (see figure 15)²⁸. The most common second language for ESOL victims/survivors between 2020 and 2022 was Bengali, with 416 known victims/survivors having this as their first language, followed by Arabic, with 272 known victims/survivors. On Track data also highlighted that 9% of victims/survivors required an interpreter (see figure 16)²⁹.

Substance use

Victims/survivors with substance use needs require support from specialist staff which is often not available in mainstream refuges. They sometimes need to be placed in environments separate to other victims/survivors. Practitioners suggest there is not enough support available to meet demand.

“Mainstream refuges might risk assess that the substance use is just too high for them to manage with their levels of staffing” - VCS practitioner

Need	Some voluntary sector and statutory partners spoke about increases in demand from victims/survivors with substance use needs. However, the lack of data means it is unclear to what extent there has been an increase across London. It remains difficult to accommodate victims/survivors with substance use needs in a mainstream refuge. The refuge may not have the resources or the skills to support this cohort, for instance due to lacking addiction specialists or 24-hour staff. Equally, it might not be appropriate for the other victims/survivors in the refuge, particularly those with children, to be in close vicinity with someone with high needs around substance use.
Known demand	113 (2%) of households owed a duty had a drug use need. 15 (22%) victims/survivors rough sleeping in London had a drug use need. 231 (5%) of victims/survivors referred for support through On Track services had a substance use need.
Known provision	36 (3%) of women placed in refuges through Women's Aid had a substance use need. 365 (4%) of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services had a drug support need.
Known unmet need	53 (6%) of women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid had substance use need. 4 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to drug needs.

Mental health

Demand for mental health support alongside safe accommodation is high. Referrals to DASA and DASA-based provision include details on mental health needs and mental health disability. The proportion of successful referrals with these needs is higher than those who were unsuccessful. This shows that provision is being delivered.

36% of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services in 2022/23 had mental health needs. On Track data suggests victims/survivors with more severe mental health needs face barriers to accessing support. Whilst other characteristics in this analysis cannot be directly linked to unsuccessful referrals, Mayoral commissioned services highlighted that 19% of all unsuccessful referrals were due to services not being able to meet victims/survivors' needs, and of all of these unmet needs, 17% were unable to meet mental health needs. See figures 17 and 18 for further detail.³⁰

Figure 17 Proportion of total, successful and unsuccessful referrals to accommodation services in On Track for victims/survivors with mental health support needs, 2022/23

Figure 18 Proportion of total, successful and unsuccessful referrals to accommodation services in On Track for victims/survivors with a mental health disability, 2022/23

However, although there is some mental health provision to meet this need in safe accommodation services there is not enough overall. Moreover, victims/survivors with more acute mental health needs require specialist support that is not routinely provided within mainstream safe accommodation.

“A lot of our clients aren’t eligible for traditional refuges, because of substance use or mental health or other things.” - VCS practitioner

Need	Some practitioners spoke about the increase in demand from victims/survivors with mental health needs. It is unclear whether this reflects the frequency or severity of cases with mental health needs, which should be explored in future research. 'Mental health needs' is quite nuanced as it captures a wide array of conditions and needs. At the lower end of the spectrum, practitioners described victims/survivors whose needs could be met by therapy and counselling. Mental health conditions at the higher end of the spectrum of needs were frequently labelled as 'disorders' and were often deemed too complex to accommodate in mainstream refuges.
Known demand	943 (16%) of households owed a duty had a history of mental health problems. 46 (67%) victims/survivors rough sleeping in London had a mental health need. 1,933 (40%) of victims/survivors requesting support through On Track services had mental health support needs.
Known provision	2,189 (24%) of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services had a mental health need. 160 (16%) of women placed in refuges through Women's Aid had a mental health need. This has gone up by 48% from 108 in 2019.
Known unmet need	68 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to mental health needs. 150 (16%) of women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid had mental health need.

Insecure immigration status

Victims/survivors with insecure immigration status face systemic barriers accessing support services. Provision has been improving but practitioners reflect that meeting this need is very complex and is not fully sufficient.

"NRPF is a very difficult area for service provision. For one of our NRPF ladies, we've spent [2 months] trying to find her somewhere but we've still got nowhere for her to go and she's now returned to live with the perpetrator. We did everything we could but these are the patterns we're seeing." - VCS practitioner

"Support and options available for people have no recourse public funds, it's just terrible." - VCS practitioner

Need	A large number of service providers discussed the challenges in providing safe accommodation and support to victims/survivors with an insecure immigration status. Many of these victims/survivors have no recourse to public funds and are unable to access state welfare, including income support, housing benefit, universal credit, and local authority housing. The current commissioning system provides little support for this cohort meaning that they must cover the costs themselves or rely on limited charitable donations. Without added financial support, women also struggle to obtain basic necessities such as food and clothes. Moreover, a victim/survivor's insecure immigration status is often used by perpetrators as a means of coercion and control. This can mean victims/survivors are reluctant to report their abuse to relevant authorities for fear of the impact on their immigration status or that their children could be taken away.
Known demand	2,072 (4%) of victims/survivors referred through On Track had no recourse to public funds.
Known provision	87 (8%) women placed in refuges through Women's Aid had no recourse to public funds. 1,497 (3%) referrals through On Track by victims/survivors with no recourse to public funds to were successful.
Known unmet need	107 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to no recourse to public funds. 81 (8%) women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid had no recourse to public funds. 575 (1%) referrals through On Track by victims/survivors with no recourse to public funds to were unsuccessful.

Bedspace capacity in refuges for women with no recourse to public funds (NRPF) is low but has been increasing. However there remain significant barriers to access funding even when spaces are available.

The percentage of refuge vacancies available to women with no recourse to public funds was 9% in 2022/23 according to Women's Aid data. This is higher than previous years, following a steady increase from 3% in 2016/17. See figure 19.³¹

While available bed spaces have been increasing for women with NRPF, these vacancies only note that a woman with NRPF will be considered. It does not assure acceptance, as many vacancies require funding to be secured before considering women with NRPF. Service providers emphasised this remains a barrier for these women accessing refuges.

“Obviously the women with no recourse to public funds, we can only support them if they have funding secured through another stream” - VCS practitioner

An example of a system barrier is that the Home Office can take a long time to respond to an immigration case, during which time, victims/survivors need to be supported, but cannot access funds.

Women with children

There is substantial demand for DASA for women with children. However, practitioners shared that finding provision for women with more than two children and women with older male children was particularly difficult.

“The idea of leaving your 14 year old son behind and taking the rest of your kids just doesn't seem like an option at all because the perpetrator could come home and then take their anger out at the 14 year old boy. So yeah, if there are like larger families of having four or five, six kids plus, refuge can't always accommodate” - VCS practitioner

Provision for families with more than two children or older male children should be expanded. Refuges are not always suitable and other forms of safe accommodation should be considered.

Need	There were two main identified challenges around supporting women with children. Firstly, many refuges do not accept women with older male children. Secondly, safe accommodation often does not have the space to accommodate women with multiple children. These issues mean that when a woman with children is trying to flee domestic abuse, she has to make a decision on whether she accepts safe accommodation and is separated from her children. Children can also add a layer of complexity to the support required. For example, women may need help with navigating family court cases.
Known provision	481 (47%) of women successfully placed in refuges through Women's Aid had children. 719 children were placed in refuges through Women's Aid. 4,020 children were supported by Mayoral commissioned services.
Known unmet need	15 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to family size or children's ages.

Bedspace capacity in refuges for women with two or more children has been decreasing over the last 6 years, whilst bedspaces for women with three or more children remains limited.

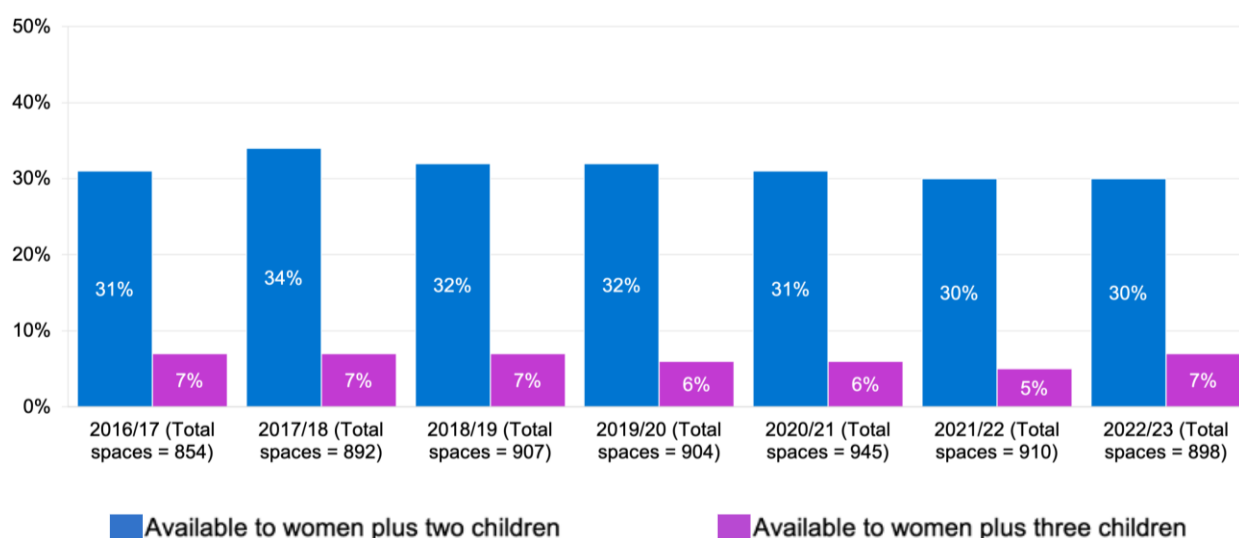

Data from Women's Aid shows that in 2022/23, the percentage of refuge vacancies available to women with two children was 29%. This is lower than previous years, following a steady decline from 34% in 2017/18. See figure 20.³²

For women with three children, the challenge in finding suitable bed space is greater. The capacity for bed spaces for women with three or more children has remained consistently low. In 2022/23, the percentage of refuge vacancies available to women with three children was 7%.

³² Source: Routes to Support. Data note: Routes to Support holds information on victims/ survivors seeking refuge through Women's Aid

Service providers explained that these barriers for women with two or more children increase when also intersecting with other needs (such as mental health or insecure immigration status).

Complex needs

A number of practitioners described an increase in victims/survivors presenting with complex needs. Whilst the definition of 'complex needs' varied, all relevant practitioners discussed the need for intensive, specialist and longer lasting support.

Although a large number of practitioners discussed the increase in victims/survivors presenting with 'complex needs', the way complex needs was defined varied. The three most common definitions of complex needs were:

1. Victims/survivors with high support needs that cannot be accommodated in a mainstream refuge (usually victims/survivors with high mental health needs or substance use issues)
2. Victims/survivors experiencing multiple disadvantage. These are victims/survivors that suffer from multiple and intersecting inequalities such as poor mental and physical health, substance use, different types of violence and abuse and involvement with the criminal justice system
3. Victims/survivors with overlapping and intersecting characteristics or needs. For example, male victims/survivors of domestic abuse that have no recourse to public funds. These victims/survivors require specialist support across a number of different areas

Despite the variation in definition, it has been widely acknowledged that complex needs do not affect survivors in isolation. Instead, victims/survivors often suffer from multiple inequalities that coalesce and compound each other in different ways to create unique experiences of domestic abuse. As a result, all practitioners reported that victims/survivors with complex needs require more intensive, specialist and longer-lasting support. However, resourcing or funding is not always sufficient to effectively provide this.

“I think complexities have definitely gone up... we’ve seen a distinctive increase of mental health and substance use” - VCS practitioner

“The complexity of cases has changed towards being more complex, and taking more time” - VCS practitioner

“All women we support have some level of alcohol or substance use support needs and we are a 24 hour service. [These women will have been excluded from mainstream] because of their substance use so mainstream refuges might risk assess that the substance use is just too high for their levels of staffing ... or they’ve been previously evicted from other accommodation maybe due to arrears or anti-social behaviour. That excludes them from quite a lot of services.” - VCS practitioner

Overall findings

Mayoral commissioned safe accommodation and DASA-based support services are not entirely meeting demand. Service capacity is a barrier, as is services’ ability to meet the needs of victims/survivors.

In 2022/23, 2,115 people were unsuccessful in receiving support from safe accommodation services. 29% of these referrals were unsuccessful due to capacity constraints. However, 19% were unsuccessful because the services were not able to meet the needs of the victims/survivors. See figure 21.³³ (See annex 2 for further details)

Where safe accommodation services were unable to meet the needs of victims/survivors, in 26% of cases, this was because the victims/survivors had no recourse to public funds while 17% was because the victims/survivors had mental health support needs. See figure 22.³⁴ Other reasons included:

- assessment showed referred person was the aggressor as opposed to victim/survivors;
- no current domestic abuse;
- current address too close to available refuge spaces;
- unable to complete risk assessment;
- incomplete information given to victims/survivors;
- culturally sensitive issues.

Provision: flow through the system

The following chapter explores the flow of DASA-based support demand through the system to better understand the nature and challenges of provision in the London ecosystem.

This section examines provision through the lens of the journeys that victims/survivors take to access, receive and move on from safe accommodation and accommodation-based support

Accessing support: understanding referrals

There are a number of access routes into safe accommodation. Our research shows that referrals come from a wide range of sources including statutory agencies, personal support systems, and from victims/survivors themselves.

"Professionals... they give a number to the service user, and then the woman call us" - VCS practitioner

"First of all, I searched Google for Women's Aid numbers. There's a lot of numbers like some numbers in East London, West London" - Victim/Survivor

"I searched through them online" - Victim/Survivor

The referral pathways outlined below have been identified through our interviews with practitioners (local authorities, Mayoral commissioned services, and other VCS providers), interviews with victims/survivors, data submissions from tier 2 local authorities, and On Track.

Variation in the success rate of different referral pathways

There is substantial variation in the success rate of different referral pathways. As we can see in table 3 and the highlighted rows, between 2020 and 2023 there were only 541 self referrals into domestic abuse services, accounting for 3% of all referrals. However, 83% of self referrals were successful. In contrast, over the same period of time, there were 2,765 referrals from MARAC to domestic abuse services, accounting for 16% of all referrals. Only 28% of these referrals were successful – the lowest success rate of all referral pathways.

Our analysis of On Track data and our engagement with practitioners indicate that there can be several reasons why a referral may be successful/unsuccessful. This includes capacity and an ability to meet victim/survivor needs.

However, the reason why the success rate varies between different referral sources, or if and why the quality of referrals vary between different referral sources, is not known. This should be an area of further research.

Variation in how needs are assessed at the point of referral

A number of practitioners that were engaged discussed how victim/survivor needs were not always fully identified at the point of referral. This was partially due to victims/survivors not always knowing what their needs were when they approached a service. A number of victims/survivors that were engaged said that when they initially sought support, they just wanted to feel safe – they were not necessarily looking for anything else (e.g. mental health support).

“To be honest, I really do not know what I was looking for... I just picked up the phone just to ask for help” - Victim/Survivor

Some practitioners reported that victims/survivors did not always feel comfortable discussing all of their needs at the point of referral, especially if they had not built up a trusting relationship with the referring provider/practitioner.

“That's the sort of immediate thing that's been referred for, but then actually, you do a little bit of digging, and there's a huge housing need. There's mental health...substance use...all the kind of rest. So it's like, the domestic abuse support can often be the entry point” - VCS practitioner

Practitioners also discussed how assessments can misidentify needs. This could be because referrals were made on the basis of a person's protected characteristic, rather than their circumstances. For example, a person may be referred to an LGBTQ+ support service because of their sexual orientation, but their most pressing need, which needs to be met, is housing.

“Very often referrals from mainstream organisations focus a lot on the fact that someone is LGBTQ+ like that seems to be the biggest issue that they see” - VCS practitioner

Additionally, practitioners reported that in some cases, people could be referred to a specialist 'by and for' service on the basis of their protected characteristic, but they hadn't experienced domestic abuse.

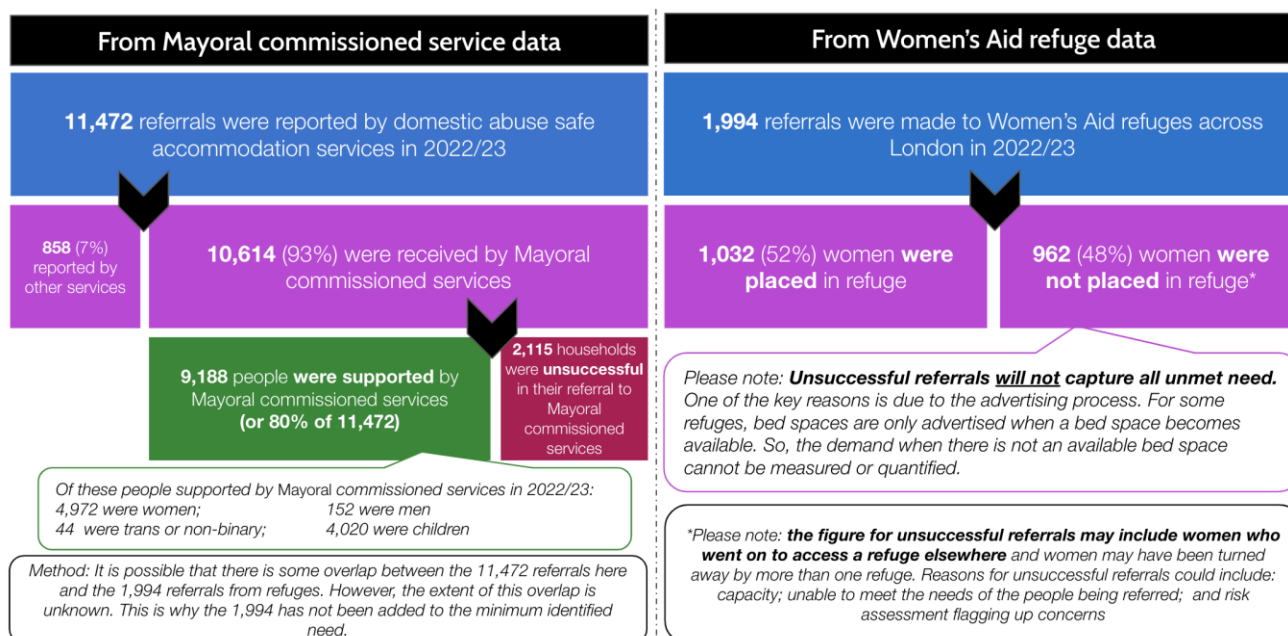

Safe accommodation and support types available

In 2022/23, 80% of referrals reported by domestic abuse safe accommodation services commissioned by the Mayor were successful. This is encouraging but as these numbers are based only on Mayoral commissioned service data, it is therefore likely to not reflect all unmet demand. See table 4 for a breakdown of successful/unsuccessful referrals from Mayoral commissioned service data and Women's Aid refuge data.³⁶

³⁶ Method: It is possible that there is some overlap between the 11,472 referrals here and the 1,994 referrals from refuges. However, we do not know the extent of this overlap. This is why the 1,994 has not been added to the minimum identified need.

*Please note: the figure for unsuccessful referrals may include women who went on to access a refuge elsewhere and women may have been turned away by more than one refuge. Reasons for unsuccessful referrals could include: capacity; unable to meet the needs of the person being referred; and risk assessment flagging up concerns

Table 4 Breakdown of successful/unsuccessful referrals from Mayoral commissioned service data and Women's Aid refuge data

The Mayoral services commissioned under Part 4 of the Domestic Abuse Act (2021) offer a wide range of support to victims/survivors. See table 5 for further details on how many of the supported victims/survivors received which type of support.

The highest volume of provision of safe accommodation-based support is general support, followed by advocacy and specialist support. However, services have reported that many deliver a wider range of types of support to meet victims/survivors needs. Victims/survivors can receive multiple types of support whilst in accommodation.

Table 5 Further details on how many of the supported victims/survivors received which type of support (including percentage)

Of the 9,188 supported victims/survivors recorded by the Mayoral commissioned services ³⁷ and placed in safe supported accommodation:
6,686 (73%) received general support	4,074 (44%) received domestic abuse prevention support
5,801 (63%) received advocacy support	3,158 (34%) received advice services such as financial and legal
4,870 (53%) received specialist support (according to the MHCLG definition) ³⁸	2,803 (31%) received children's support
4,522 (49%) received housing-related support	1,364 (15%) received counselling and therapy
2,284 (25%) received other support including:
Life skills Education Employment Training Sexual health Safeguarding	Risk planning Peer support Donations Mental health Access to benefits

Prior to accessing safe accommodation in 2022/23, most women stayed in unsafe circumstances, which could add further strain on their wellbeing. Table 6 indicates the breakdown in percentage of the different types of accommodation being accessed by women before accessing safe accommodation.³⁹ It shows 51% of women accessing safe accommodation in 2022/23 were staying in unsuitable accommodation before they received a bed space.

4% Moved on from another refuge	15% House owned/rented in perpetrators name
1% Hospital/Rehabilitation	9% Emergency temporary accommodation
1% Supported accommodation	2% Rough sleeping

Most women (25%) relied on the support of friends and family before accessing a refuge space. Women's Aid research found that sofa-surfing with relatives or friends is often problematic for women fleeing domestic abuse, citing issues of overcrowding, broken friendships and, in some instances, further abuse.⁴¹

Table 6 indicates 9% of women needed emergency temporary accommodation. This research has found that often temporary accommodation is used as a fall back to meet overflow of demand. However, Women's Aid research emphasises that hotels and emergency facilities often lack the essential support and safety needed for vulnerable women in such situations.

Refuge accommodation

Most safe accommodation in London is provided by refuges. Practitioners suggested that refuges were often a higher commissioning priority and expressed a need for investment in a wider range of accommodation.

As of March 2023 there were 1,745 bed spaces for adults and children across London for domestic abuse victims/survivors in Mayoral commissioned safe accommodation services. The majority (56%) of these were provided through refuges (see figure 23).⁴²

Specialist accommodation also accounted for 18% of bedspace capacity by Mayoral commissioned services, including accommodation for victims/survivors who share particular protected characteristics and/or vulnerabilities requiring additional support.

The Domestic Abuse Act 2021 acknowledges that victims/survivors may require a diverse range of safe accommodation. However, service providers have highlighted that commissioning priorities mean there are barriers to services providing other forms of accommodation, such as support in the community.

Practitioners told us that refuge capacity often does not meet demand and that in many cases, even where a refuge space may have been available, it could not sufficiently meet victim/survivor needs.

Refuges are providing the most capacity for safe accommodation in London. However, Routes to Support data shows that in 2023/24 so far, 50% of referrals to refuge placements have been unsuccessful (see figure 24)⁴³.

In 2022/23, 2,115 people were unsuccessful in receiving support from safe accommodation services. 29% of these referrals were unsuccessful due to capacity constraints. However, 19% were unsuccessful because the services were not able to meet the needs of the victims/survivors. See figure 25 for further details.⁴⁴

“If there aren't enough [safe accommodation spaces] in the first place, you can't even get to those conversations around additional support needs, because you can't meet the primary need of a safe roof above their head” - VCS practitioner

London's provision in relation to England

⁴⁴ Source: Routes to Support. Data note: Mayoral commissioned services holds information on the 63 services in the Mayoral commissioning portfolio

While it is clear that there is not enough refuge provision to meet demand, it is worth noting that London has proportionately higher refuge availability than elsewhere in England and has a volume of bed spaces 2% higher than Council of Europe recommendation.

In 2022/23 London’s volume of refuge bedspaces was 2% higher than the recommended volume by the Council of Europe. Refuge capacity in London has been higher than anywhere else in England since 2010, relative to population size. London has also been meeting the Council of Europe minimum recommendation since 2018. However, this is a rough measure of minimum requirement that has not adjusted for actual need.

There was a spike in refuge capacity in 2021 when refuge capacity was above the Council of Europe minimum recommendation by 5%. However, this has dropped again in the following years in 2022 and 2023.

The percentage shortfall is calculated using the Council of Europe minimum recommendation of one space per 10,000 population.⁴⁵ This shows the difference between the number of refuge spaces in an area and the recommended number of refuge spaces for that area, as a proportion of the recommendation. In instances where the percentage shortfall is a negative value, the number of refuge spaces exceeded the minimum recommendation (see annex 2 for more details).

Sanctuary schemes

Sanctuary schemes were discussed as one alternative to refuges. They fulfil the legal definition of safe accommodation and allow victim/survivors to stay in their own home.

What are sanctuary schemes?	Benefits of sanctuary schemes
Sanctuary schemes are defined as ‘a multi-agency victim/survivor centred initiative which aims to enable households at risk of domestic abuse to remain in their own homes and reduce repeat victimisation through the provision of enhanced security measures (sanctuary) and support’. Operationally speaking, it refers to a range of security measures which provide enhanced security measures to one's own home or the perimeter of the home, such as the installation of additional locks or a sanctuary safe room.	Interviewees have confirmed that sanctuary schemes are effective at providing support to victims/survivors who do not want to leave their home. It also mitigates the disruption associated with moving between a home to a refuge, then temporary accommodation, then permanent accommodation. For one victim/survivor, using a sanctuary scheme meant that they could continue pursuing their education whilst living at home, which was previously a barrier to seeking a refuge place.

⁴⁵ Source: Women's Aid Federation of England - data from Routes to Support, the UK violence against women and girls service directory. Method note: Council of Europe's measure of minimum shortfall, sees negative percentages indicating a higher volume of available refuge bedspaces.

Sanctuary schemes are mostly delivered by local authorities in London of which the housing department is usually the main funding source. Other agencies, such as the Police, VCS, or housing associations can also be involved. As of March 2023, sanctuary schemes amounted to 3% of Mayoral commissioned domestic abuse safe accommodation spaces. The type of sanctuary scheme installation varies according to a victim/survivor's needs. In Hammersmith & Fulham, the £16,000 provided for sanctuary installation costs was spent on securing a total of 36 homes in 2022/23, for which one a Safe Room was built at a cost of £2,789.40.	Practitioners have also suggested sanctuary schemes are most effective when implemented alongside perpetrator management programmes as it encourages the perpetrator to leave the home and gives the victim/survivor the choice to stay safe within their own home.

“We did a report on how long people are staying in the accommodation once the sanctuaries [have] been installed and they're there for a long time. They're not there like it hasn't worked for moving after six months, 12 months, 18 months there, a long time” - Statutory practitioner

“We have a budget for Sanctuary schemes, which is quite large to say the least, and it's working well” - Statutory Practitioner

Despite the existence of sanctuary schemes, it is unclear what the demand for, and provision of, sanctuary schemes looks like in London due to the limited availability of data.⁴⁶

- According to the London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation strategy (2021), sanctuary schemes need to be made available in all boroughs. However, it is unclear how many boroughs are implementing sanctuary schemes and in what way. Our engagement has showed that there is significant variation in how sanctuary schemes are delivered locally. For example:
 - for some local authorities, the schemes that exist are old, not advertised, or do not adequately address the needs of victims/survivors. However, there is high awareness in some areas, resulting in high demand, and long wait lists;
 - some local authorities have quite restrictive criteria and only offer it to women deemed high risk. Other local authorities are less restrictive and will install if it's safe for the victim/survivor and aligns with their wants and needs.

⁴⁶ For more details on provision go to annex 2

- Anecdotally, we have heard that sanctuary schemes have been effective. However, there has not been a recent evaluation of sanctuary schemes, and there is not a lot of data on their long term impact. According to the Whole Housing Project evaluation (2021) there is currently limited consensus on what makes a Sanctuary Scheme effective

“So we got a dedicated provider and actually did that work ourselves and paid for it ourselves, because the local scheme didn't have that sort of offering that would meet the needs of what we wanted” - VCS practitioner

“For example, I think one of the things we were looking at is ring doorbells, for example, if that could be a part of sanctuary scheme provision as well and some don't have that.” – Statutory practitioner

Victim/survivor experience of DASA-based support

Positive experiences

Survivors shared that safe accommodation and DASA-based support, in many cases, met their needs. In some cases, victims/survivors felt the support they received had a highly positive impact on their journeys.

Safe accommodation-based support can have a profound impact on victims/survivors of domestic abuse. As a form of ‘crisis’ intervention, safe accommodation-based support addresses many of the immediate needs of victims/survivors and provides them with a safe environment where they can feel heard and believed. Accommodation based support (such as financial support, advocacy and counselling) also has an important and positive impact on victims/survivors. Several victims/survivors who were engaged described how this support went above and beyond what they were expecting to receive.

“I have had help with clothing, food and equipment and I have had so much emotional support. Being able to meet with [staff member] once a week has made me feel that someone is on my side, that someone believes me and will offer real tangible support. I didn't know anyone in this area and the support from (staff member) has been so helpful and made me feel settled. Being able to receive support has been life changing I have never had this before and I feel less alone”
- Victim/Survivor (MOPAC Monitoring form)

Victim/survivor case study

Person B is currently in a refuge with dependent children. They have been in the refuge for 4-6 months since starting support within DASA services. They have stated that it meets all their needs. B's feedback of their experience with the system has been highly positive. They reported improvements in mental health and a feeling of safety and security as a result of their time in a refuge, and they sought additional support for 8 distinct needs including domestic abuse prevention advice, legal advice, financial advice, and counselling for children. They had no suggestions of improvements that could be made to any part of the existing system and are incredibly grateful for all of the support they have received thus far; stating that the refuge has been like a rehabilitation centre for them and their children.

Benefits of practical and emotional support

Practical and emotional support provided to victims/survivors empowered them to become independent and rebuild their lives in the longer term.

Alongside a bed space, victims/survivors also highly valued the practical and emotional support provided by services. Practical and emotional support provided to victims/survivors empowered them to become independent and rebuild their lives in the longer term

“When I look back at where I was almost two years ago, I realise how much [DASA service] have helped me. I was nearing a breakdown and unrecognisable. I was supported to heal at the refuge, and began to learn my rights, improved my English, accessed support and legal services and have become more independent. I’m no longer dependent nor scared of my perpetrator, I feel so very lucky and grateful for all of the support I have received” - Victim/Survivor (MOPAC Monitoring form)

“I was told the abuse was my fault, I have now learnt that he was the abuser and I have the confidence to never go back.” - Victim/Survivor (MOPAC Monitoring form)

“I received an email showing I was awarded housing benefits for the hotels where I had rent arrears. Thank you for all your support and help. It feels like a huge weight has been lifted off my shoulders and life is changing for the better post-abuse. I appreciate your assistance in helping me keep my kids safe” - Victim/Survivor (MOPAC Monitoring form)

Support with securing housing, domestic abuse awareness, prevention work, and wider financial and day-to-day support, were all reported by victims/survivors as essential in allowing them to move away from abuse and become more independent. Victims/survivors also reported that the emotional support they received helped them build their confidence and empowered them to rebuild their lives.

Negative experiences

Not all experiences were positive.⁴⁷ A number of victims/survivors responding to our survey, discussed unmet needs stemming from the quality of the accommodation, shared living conditions and a lack of amenities. Others highlighted that the duration of counselling and therapy was not long enough meet their needs.

In terms of housing needs, 6/13 responses to our survey question regarding their experience of the DASA-based support focused on the facilities themselves, noting inadequate amenities and discomfort with shared living arrangements.

In terms of accommodation-based support, counselling and therapy were the most common support types in our survey, that did not meet victims/survivors' needs. The majority of comments focused on the short duration of support, lack of meaningful outcomes, and inadequate quality of counsellors/therapists. Interviews with victims/survivors added that there could be long wait times to receive counselling and therapy.

"We offer counselling in house, and we offer 16 sessions... unfortunately, this is not enough. I mean, 16 sessions is very, very little... you can barely touch the surface, when you do two months of therapy" - VCS practitioner

Person C with two dependent children, sought a temporary safe space in a refuge which they were granted after a 2-4 week wait. They occupied the safe space for 7-12 months. They had a negative experience with seeking housing as they did not feel they were given much information or alternative options for housing. Their refuge met some of their needs, however they did not like having to share facilities with other families and would have far preferred separate units for each family. They have since moved on from the refuge to a new home provided by a housing association, however the home is too small for their needs and C is currently sleeping in the hallway so their children can have a room each. C fundamentally disagrees with the idea of refuges with multiple occupancy and shared utilities as the experience of such housing situations can be as damaging as the abuse.

Temporary accommodation to address shortfalls in availability of safe accommodation

Temporary accommodation is a form of temporary housing which is used while a local authority finds more permanent accommodation. It is designed for households experiencing homelessness. Types of temporary housing include a room in shared housing; a flat or house from a private landlord; short-term council or housing association tenancy; and hostels, bed and breakfasts (B&B) or hotels. Research by Shelter in 2023 found that 16% of households in temporary accommodation, nationally, are in a hostel, B&B or budget hotel.⁴⁸

Victims/survivors' journeys can vary significantly, and temporary accommodation can be used to plug the gap at any point.

“Those that are supported by others in the community, a lot of those are going to temporary accommodation, but some will go into temporary accommodation whilst they wait for refuge.” - VCS practitioner

This needs assessment found that temporary accommodation can be used at several different points of victims/survivors' journeys. Below are some example illustrative journeys.

As highlighted earlier, Routes to Support data shows that, in 2022/23, 9% of women entering refuges came from emergency temporary accommodation.

It is recognised that not all victims/survivors' journeys look like this – journeys can vary significantly, with victims/survivors entering different forms of accommodation at different periods of time (including friends/family and returning to live with the perpetrator). The diagram above is meant to illustrate that temporary accommodation is used when there is no safe accommodation or long-term accommodation (e.g. privately rented accommodation or social housing).

The use of temporary accommodation in London

Practitioners highlighted that temporary accommodation is being used to support victims/survivors where safe accommodation services cannot meet the demand.

⁴⁸ Shelter, Still Living in Limbo: Why the use of temporary accommodation must end (2023).

In 2022/23 over a third of temporary accommodation provided to households impacted by domestic abuse was nightly-paid self-contained. Households with children were more likely to receive private sector leased or LA/HA stock accommodation.

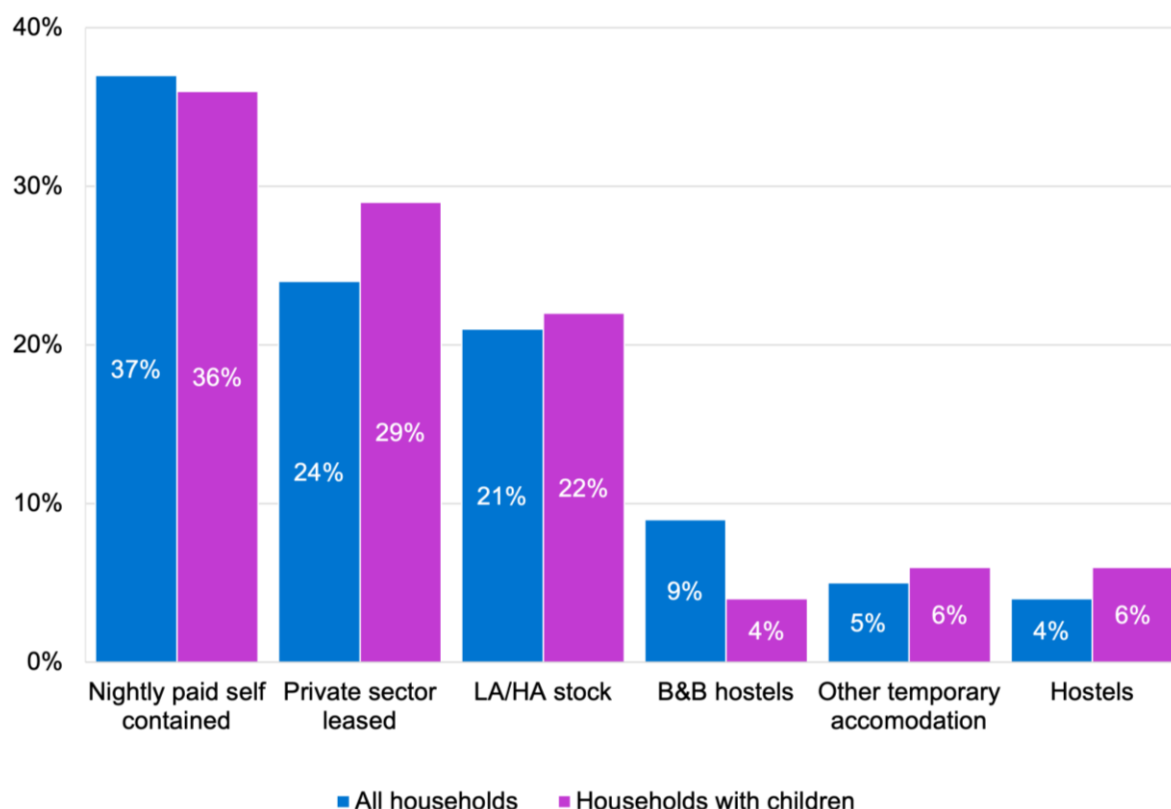

In London, households impacted by domestic abuse with children placed in temporary accommodation were most likely to be in nightly-paid self-contained accommodation (37%), or private sector leased (29%). By contrast, in the rest of England, households with children in temporary accommodation are most likely to be in local authority or housing association provided accommodation (35% or 1,380 households).

In 2022/23, London single households impacted by domestic abuse were most likely to be placed in nightly-paid self-contained accommodation (37%), or private sector accommodation (24%). In contrast, in the rest of England, single households in temporary accommodation are most likely to be in local authority or housing association provided accommodation (30% or 1,980 households), or bed and breakfast (21% or 1,340 households). See figure 26 for further details.⁴⁹

Stakeholders shared significant concern over the quality and suitability of temporary accommodation for victims/survivors.

Quality: Both victims/survivors and service providers told us about the poor quality of temporary accommodation, which often lacked the most basic necessities. Although this is not unique to victims/survivors of domestic abuse, the impact, particularly on well-being and the recovery process, can be particularly acute on victims/survivors due to their vulnerability.

“I have my kitchen, but no fridge ..., no microwave, no oven, no ventilation” - Victim/Survivor

“I don't have mattresses to sleep... the room is very dirty” - Victim/Survivor reflecting on their first night in temporary accommodation

“Conditions in, in temporary housing, temporary accommodations are pretty awful, and women are stuck in there for some time, sometimes take months more, because there is no move-on accommodation” - VCS practitioner

Suitability: Because temporary accommodation can be offered to anyone approaching the local authority for housing, with priority need, it can be mixed gender. This could make it unsuitable for vulnerable female victims/survivors.

“We've had a woman who left our refuge and was placed in TA [temporary accommodation] and one of the other two people in that TA, he has convictions for stabbing previous partners and an incident has occurred with this person” - VCS practitioner

Practitioners reflected that there are very few temporary accommodation sites that were physically accessible to disabled victims/survivors.

Victim/survivor case study

Person D has a history of experiencing domestic abuse with a previous partner and their most recent partner. D identifies as disabled and has school-age dependents. After leaving a refuge, D was given temporary accommodation which was located on the other side of London. D states ‘on top of the trauma that has happened, we are now in a peculiar place, an area we don’t know anyone’.

D’s dependents were too old to share a room however the council wouldn’t move the family from temporary accommodation to a more suitable residence. The temporary accommodation became infested with maggots and was very damp. D complained multiple times to the council, but these complaints went unanswered. As the council would not move D and their family into another property they moved to a private rented property, where they have to top up the local housing allowance by quite a substantial amount to meet the rent.

Victims/survivors often do not receive safe accommodation-based support in temporary accommodation. This impacts wellbeing and recovery.

Instability and short term placements: Stakeholders told us that victims/survivors can be constantly moved around different temporary accommodations, or they stay in one temporary accommodation for months or years. This lack of stability and certainty can have an extremely negative impact on victims/survivors and undo some of the benefits gained from staying in safe accommodation and receiving support. Ultimately, this can increase the likelihood that a victim/survivor returns to live with their perpetrator.

“I had one lady that had moved eight times in a 16-month period” - VCS practitioner

Support: Victims/survivors can still receive support when they move on from a refuge, including support moving in, financial support to help them get settled, and advocacy support. Because they are moving on from a refuge they should, in theory, receive less intense support than in the refuge. However, they end up needing the same amount of support - or more - because of the poor conditions of temporary accommodation and the impact that has them. Victims/survivors reported that the transition from comprehensive support within a refuge to minimal support within temporary accommodation was very difficult to handle.

“So when I’m leaving that place [refuge]...still I want some support from my caseworker...When I’m moving temporary accommodation...I don’t have mattress to sleep ... the room is very dirty ... I have very bad condition washroom...how to bathe, how to cooking...I don’t have heater. My room window is broken at temporary accommodation. [It] is bad in all this experience and that time I need [support]...I’m very comfortable living refuge...but after leaving refuge they [caseworker] just drop [you]. ‘Now you are leaving so now I can’t do [anything] so now your calls, your responsibility...you send messages to council you send mails to council’” - Victim/Survivor

Move-on accommodation

Victims/survivors are staying longer in safe accommodation, potentially due to cases being more complex and challenges in securing move-on accommodation. This creates barriers for other victims/survivors in gaining access to safe accommodation.

In 2022/23, most victims/survivors needed to stay in their safe accommodation for over 6 months. Longer periods of stay are reducing services’ capacity (see figure 27)⁵⁰.

Across the refuges and specialist services operating in London, as well as the Routes to Support database, the majority of domestic abuse victims/survivors stayed in their safe accommodation for more than 6 months in 2022/23.

Figure 27 Average length of stay by victims/survivors in domestic abuse safe accommodation in 2022/23, by type of accommodation

London refuges have slightly higher average lengths of stay compared to the national average. This reflects challenges in move-on accommodation. A lack of efficient move-on accommodation limits DASA service providers' ability to allow victims/survivors to rebuild their independence when they no longer need support.

One voluntary practitioner explained that in their specialist refuge service, some victims/survivors have stayed for six years because of struggles to move on to appropriate housing.

Impacts on housing provision

Housing services are not consistently providing longer-term accommodation across London to households impacted by domestic abuse once their homelessness duty has expired.

Similarly to safe accommodation services, the housing sector is also limited in its ability to support domestic abuse victims/survivors consistently across London's local authorities. Service providers highlighted that commissioning systems limit their ability to prioritise domestic abuse victims/survivors for housing provision.

H-CLIC data highlights Merton, Barnet and Hillingdon as local authorities with the highest rates in London of securing households with accommodation once their relief and prevention duties have ended in 2022/23 (see figure 28)⁵¹.

In comparison, this data highlights Southwark, Havering, Kingston upon Thames and Wandsworth as local authorities facing the most challenges to securing accommodation once a duty ends.

Social housing is one type of move-on accommodation for survivors who have accessed DASA-based support. There is high demand for social housing in London, with limited supply and long waiting lists

As privately renting in London becomes increasingly unaffordable, there is greater pressure on social housing to provide permanent long-term accommodation to the general population as well as to victims/survivors of domestic abuse. However, this increased demand for social housing has led to a crisis, characterised by increasingly limited supply, and long waiting lists. Despite priority need thresholds, victims/survivors are struggling to access social housing.

Impacts on service delivery

Local authority housing teams are under intense pressure. They face high demand for their services but are operating with limited resources, capacity, and finances. As a result of these pressures, practitioners reported that some local authorities are engaging in practices which do not provide adequate housing support for victims/survivors. This is creating barriers for victims/survivors in accessing move on accommodation.

Practices reported by practitioners in our engagement included:

- delayed decision making;
- high evidence thresholds, with victims/survivors having to provide proof that they are victims/survivors of domestic abuse;
- use of 'local connection' rules;
- inconsistent housing band allocations.

“And then like I said, because the housing crisis that we have some gatekeeping, which I guess is not necessarily always intentional, but if you've got limited resource, it then becomes who gets what” - VCS practitioner

“Gatekeeping, I suppose is the basic reason... there's a lot of people in the waiting list, and they're trying to reduce the numbers in those higher bands” - VCS practitioner

“There's a lot of gatekeeping, even to this day, there's still a lot of gatekeeping” - Statutory Practitioner

“Gatekeeping from local authorities.... when we tried to get someone out of an abusive relationship and apply for homelessness, there's lots of back and forth which shouldn't happen, including asking for lots of the proof that these women are indeed victims of domestic abuse” - VCS practitioner

These findings align with recent research from Women's Aid, Solace Women's Aid, and the Public Interest Law Centre on gatekeeping practices by local authorities in London and the impact on victims and survivors.⁵²

Some victims/survivors who were unable to access permanent housing went into temporary accommodation after their placement in safe accommodation. It was suggested that this was due to local authorities having low housing stock and the general lack of affordable housing. Due to the shortage of temporary accommodation within boroughs, local authorities are increasingly placing households out of borough.

Routes to Support data⁵³ shows that in 2022/23, most victims/survivors leaving refuges did not end up in long-term, secure, accommodation (see table 7)⁵⁴. A quarter (25%) of victims/survivors leaving refuges ended up in temporary accommodation, compared to 19% in 2020/21. Many practitioners highlighted the increasing use of temporary accommodation in the 'move-on' space was due to the lack of affordable housing and the local authorities having low social housing stock.

Impact on victims/survivors of domestic abuse

The experience of moving into temporary accommodation was found to be distressing for some victims/survivors. Victims/survivor are often told in advance what day they need to leave a refuge. However, some were not told until the day they were leaving safe accommodation where they were being placed. Very few had been able to view the accommodation in advance. This was reported to sometimes be an incredibly distressing experience for several reasons:

- victims/survivors can wait hours on the day they are meant to be leaving before the local authority tells them where they are going;
- victims/survivors are not given any options of temporary accommodation to choose from, and they are unable to view the accommodation in advance;
- the temporary accommodation is not always in the borough within which the homeless application was submitted — victims/survivors can end up moving to a borough that they do not know very well.

Practitioners said that this happens because once entering safe accommodation, you are no longer considered by housing teams to have an immediate housing need. When leaving safe accommodation, they consider a case on that day.

“We basically just react on the day when someone's leaving refuge. That's the day that they need temporary accommodation. That's the day that we're able to source it because we can't hold vacant accommodation - there's so much demand” - Statutory practitioner

⁵⁵ Data note: Routes to Support holds information on victims/survivors seeking refuge through Women's Aid.

Person E was only told their specific move out date 3-4 weeks prior to this date. E was not told where they would be moving to, what type of accommodation it would be (temporary, permanent or hostel) nor were they able to visit it before moving in.

The day E was scheduled to move out, they were told to pack their bags and wait for the council to text them their new address and information on where to find the key to access the property. E found this part and the lack of prior information very hard. E had felt safe for the last 6 months whilst in the refuge but now had no idea where they were moving to or what it would be like. The council did not text E until 7pm on their move-out day. E was ordered an uber by the council and had to go to an unknown property with their belongings at night. E didn't know what they would find which made them very anxious. E states this 'hits you hard'.

Impacts on securing longer term accommodation

These issues in securing permanent accommodation after safe accommodation was also found to create bottlenecks in the system.⁵⁶

A number of practitioners told us that the 'gold standard' for the length of time in a refuge was 6 months. This reduces the chances that victims/survivors become institutionalised and enables them to transition into independence. However, due to the lack of move-on accommodation after refuges, some victims/survivors are having to stay in refuges longer. This has a knock-on impact on the availability of refuge spaces for incoming victim/survivors.

The lack of move-on accommodation also means that victims/survivors are unable to leave temporary accommodation. A number of practitioners reported that some victims/survivors are staying in temporary accommodation for months due to the lack of appropriate move-on accommodation (affordable housing or social housing).

"Women are staying a bit longer, mainly due to the difficulty in finding suitable accommodation for them to move on into... the average length of stay is roughly around 9 months, but we've had women stay as long as 18 months" - Statutory practitioner*

"Since the housing crisis we have seen the average length of stay growing... This then impacts the number of DA survivors we are able to support." - VCS practitioner*

"Clients who are moving through those accommodation routes, there isn't something at the end of that stay" - VCS practitioner*

Challenges to DASA commissioning and provision

This chapter explores key challenges to DASA-based support and commissioning. These include:

- The definition of 'safe accommodation' is restrictive and not always well understood
- The MHCLG funded Mayoral commissioning cycle funds DASA service providers for either 12 or 13 months (dependent on the procurement contract type). This short-term funding cycles disrupt services' ability to provide support
- Although there are geographical patterns to need, victims/survivors are often not placed in refuges in their own borough for their safety. This creates challenges for local authorities commissioning based on need and causes tension in local delivery. Insights on the Pan London Housing Reciprocal are summarised in this section.

The definition of 'safe accommodation' is restrictive and not always well understood

The government's national definition of 'safe accommodation' can be restrictive. Due to this restriction not all victims/survivors are placed in what is legally defined as 'safe accommodation'. This means they do not qualify for safe accommodation-based support, such as counselling, financial aid or advocacy assistance.

The definition of safe accommodation excludes mixed-gender accommodation. However, some victims/survivors are placed here because there are no available spaces in single sex accommodation or because they accessed support through a different pathway.

For example, in one borough, victims/survivors of domestic abuse can be supported through the Vulnerable Adults Pathway, which provides specialist supported accommodation for people experiencing multiple disadvantages (e.g. complex mental health needs, addiction, criminal justice support needs). This accommodation is not single-sex, so it does not count as 'safe accommodation' and means victim/survivors can't access safe accommodation-based support provided under the Part 4 Duty.

Safe accommodation requires victims/survivors to leave their home or stay at home with a sanctuary scheme. This may not be feasible for victims/survivors who cannot leave their home, such as those with disabilities and mobility issues, and where the perpetrator continues to live. Although they still require support, they are not classified as living in 'safe accommodation' and thus are denied access to these support services.

“One of the things that is also really complicated about looking at our demand is that because of the definition of safe accommodation, it means that we can only really count our refuges because it's all it has to be single sex provision” - Statutory practitioner

“There is no feasible way for them to leave that property, even though they're experiencing abuse from the perpetrator at home. So that doesn't meet the definition of the Act at all” - VCS practitioner

Practitioners suggested that some local authorities lack a strong understanding of what the Duty entails and that some changes were not broadcast as much as they should have been. For example, the VCS, VAWG coordinators and homelessness teams all reported examples of local authorities lacking awareness of changes made within the Duty that meant those experiencing and fleeing domestic abuse have a priority housing need. This meant some practitioners enforced more stringent eligibility criteria on victims/survivors when accessing support. Additionally, many organisations assumed that the Mayoral funding had to be spent within the year despite this not being the case nor it being stated in the Duty guidance. This imposed unnecessary constraints on local authorities.

Practitioners also reported that there was a lack of clear definitions of the key terms in the Duty guidance and relevant documents. This resulted in practitioners interpreting terms differently and thus not adhering to the Duty in a consistent manner. For example, the Duty does not state a clear definition of specialist ‘by and for’ services. As a result, some organisations have defined ‘by and for’ as ‘led by and for women’, whereas others defined it as ‘being for minoritised women’.

“I think the lack of clarity over key definitions in the guidance in the commissioning framework had a massive impact on applicants understanding of what they were applying for and meant that there were delays.” - Statutory partner

“Local authorities in a lot of cases don't necessarily fully understand the duties set out and the statutory guidance is often not adhered to, or interpreted, inaccurately” - Statutory partner

“We've seen money that councils have been allocated specifically for the duty kind of spent on things that aren't eligible under the guidance.” - Statutory partner

The MHCLG funded Mayoral commissioning cycle

The MHCLG funded Mayoral commissioning cycle funds DASA service providers for either 12 or 13 months (dependent on the procurement contract type). The current short term funding model does not facilitate sustainable funding for DASA service providers - this can affect service delivery and services' ability to demonstrate their impact.

“We don't have long term funding...we've had to extend our funding every year...As I say, contract extensions are not best practice...So our providers have applied in the framework for additional funding ... to create capacity...But if at any point they go, we don't want to re-commission...What happens to that post? It's very short sighted. Because if at any point, the borough says...’We can't commit to that next year. We can only commit to [half]’...[We've] got these extra posts now and nowhere for them to deliver services. And the lack of sustainable funding is of complete is really, really, really complicated.” - VCS practitioner

Service delivery: Short and cyclical commissioning cycles create a lack of financial security and a sense of uncertainty around service providers' future finances. This fear of being stripped of funding if a commissioning bid had not been accepted prevents long term planning and risks letting victim/survivors down if support becomes unavailable at short notice. Participants mentioned that some victims/survivors are not used to being supported, meaning it can take time to gain their trust and start making an impact in their journey. Therefore, short commissioning cycles can have a detrimental impact on the long-term recovery process of a victim/survivor.

Demonstrating impact of service delivery: Practitioners reflected that demonstrating impact within a 12 or 13 month period is very difficult. This was in particular reference to the time it took to set up the commissioned service which requires recruiting the right people and training to a specialist level. It could take up to 6 months before a service had even started to support victim/survivors. This poses a challenge for the services to demonstrate impact of the service delivery when only being able to rely on 6 months of evidence. Additionally, participants supporting disabled people require a substantial amount of time finding appropriate accommodation to begin service delivery, thus impacting on the services' ability to demonstrate impact.

“[You] work really hard to find something [safe accommodation] that you think might be suitable, and then in reality, because of [lack of] staff capacity, [lack of] staff training, [lack of] understanding of what's needed and the type of need that people present with ... that can't be well accommodated” - VCS practitioner

“Having people with the right skill set.... It's such a specialist skill, and that it's very hard to find people that could really fit all of that in” - Statutory partner

Providers told us that the current funding model also impacts recruitment and retention of staff. They were clear that, in turn, these issues impacted the support victims/survivors received. This limited the beneficial impact they were able to have.

Recruitment and retention: Twelve- or thirteen-month commissioning cycles are conducive to short-term or zero-hour employment contracts due to the unknowns of whether the commissioning will be renewed the following year. Such employment contracts do not offer job security which makes it challenging to recruit people as these are not desirable or often sought-after types of employment.⁵⁷

Likewise, this lack of employment security means retention of staff is low as employees search for more secure opportunities.

Such recruitment and retention challenges can mean staff are leaving for local authority jobs which offer more sustainable employment and are often better paid. This can offer an opportunity for sustainable provision of services from within local authorities. Participants also highlighted risks to the voluntary and community sector: it can also mean VCS staff are having to take on more caseloads which can lead to burnout and a reduced capacity to accept victims/survivors into their services.

“More and more people from the VAWG sector are moving to local authorities, which is dangerous...they’ve got people with specialist knowledge and expertise moving to local authorities, whether or not they’re really harnessed, we don’t know...Women’s Aid did a survey of their members and found that over half of the staff left to move to local authorities, which kind of shows how massive this is [recruitment and retention crisis in the VAWG sector]. And so for local authorities, they might say, ‘we’ve commissioned this service, they’re not able to recruit, we’ve been waiting for months, we’ve not got someone in post, we’re just going to keep it in house. Because actually, when it comes to VAWG recruitment, we’re [local authority] are doing quite well, because everyone’s coming over to us, and we’re able to pay them and give them benefits, etc’.” - Statutory practitioner

“You have really short term contracts, you have people that are completely burnt out and just like overworked, underpaid” - VCS practitioner

‘By and for’ services most acutely impacted

‘By and for’ services were felt to be most acutely impacted by this funding model. Often these services were smaller in size, therefore resourcing bid writing was difficult. Despite the value of ‘by and for’ services, they struggle to adhere to commissioning requirements such as writing impact reports and responding to all questions in the invitation to tender (ITT), in particular the ‘social value’ questions. The ‘social value’ section in an ITT often was felt to ask for subsidised work from the bidding organisation. ‘By and for’ services find it difficult to respond to the ‘social value’ as they do not have capacity/resources to provide subsidised work. Practitioners also shared their challenges in finding staff capacity to write bids and reports.

“I know there were massive efforts to make it [commissioning framework] more equitable. And you know, sort of ring-fenced funding or preserved for specialist

⁵⁷ Booth, A.L., Francesconi, M. and Frank, J. (2002). Temporary Jobs: Stepping Stones or Dead Ends? The Economic Journal, 112(480), pp.F189–F213. <https://doi.org/10.1111/1468-0297.00043>.

'by and for' services, but the essence of competitive bidding is still there ...you have organisations bidding against each other and councils are more likely to go for the one that is the cheapest or best value for money. So that's where the larger generic, and often the rogue exempt accommodation providers come in, because they're able to offer more for less, but actually, what they're doing is just massively undercutting the service. And also these procurement processes are extremely lengthy as like London councils report, I think it was a couple of years ago, now that gives the figure that London statutory agencies spends 30% of their budget on just the procurement process...because they're such lengthy processes, and extremely expensive. The smaller services are just automatically excluded or disregarded. So we had a lot of 'by and for' members of women's aid, but also members of Imkaan, that just didn't have the time to even engage." - Statutory partner

"I would say that 95% of opportunities that come through the system, we don't go for them, because they're not possible to deliver with any level of positive service. So there's a big responsibility here for commissioners, and policymakers to revisit what they're expecting both social care, but the third sector to deliver" - VCS practitioner

'if you are a very small team of perhaps five people delivering services...they're so small, and they don't have a whole department that's down to data analysts and performance and the big services like refuge for example, we have a whole team, the whole department of performance, smaller 'by and for' services don't have that capacity... [it is] difficult to try and fulfil that request [on proving impact] when you're a very small team of five people, and also delivering services and don't want to let the women down that you're supporting. And VCS partners always do say that sort of timelines, but ... our priority is to deliver services. Collecting data, whilst is most it is important. There's like a cost to it' - Statutory practitioner

Victims/survivors placed outside their own borough

Although there are geographical patterns to need, victims/survivors are often not placed in refuges in their own borough for their safety. This creates challenges for local authorities commissioning based on need and causes tension in local delivery.

Rates of domestic abuse crimes recorded by the Metropolitan Police vary across London. In 2022/23, Barking and Dagenham continued to have the highest rate per 1,000 population of recorded domestic abuse offences (see annex 2 for further details). They are joined with Tower Hamlets, Greenwich and Croydon as the four London boroughs with the highest rates of domestic abuse offences recorded by the police - 13.0, 11.2, 11.1 and 10.4 offences per 1,000 population respectively (see table 8).⁵⁸ These four areas have remained the highest rates of crimes since 2020/21. However, they have all seen a slight decrease since 2020/21.

Table 8 Top 4 boroughs in London for the highest volumes of domestic abuse crimes recorded by the Metropolitan Police 2022/23

Barking & Dagenham	13.0	↓
Tower Hamlets	11.2	↓
Greenwich	11.1	↓
Croydon	10.4	↓

Rates of households requiring homelessness support from local authorities, having lost their last settled base due to domestic abuse, also differ across London. Greenwich, Westminster and Havering had the highest demand in 2022/23 for households approaching their own local authority for homelessness support due to domestic abuse. See figure 29. Westminster continues to be a hotspot in London for rough sleeping. This is seen for all rough sleepers and domestic abuse victims/survivors rough sleeping. As in previous years, the borough in which the greatest number of domestic abuse victims/survivors were seen rough sleeping in 2022/23 was Westminster, with 12 domestic abuse victims/survivors (18% of the overall London total) (see annex 2 for a visual representation). Camden and Ealing saw the second highest number of domestic abuse victims/survivors. However, this is still only half of the need in Westminster. (See table 9 for further details)⁶⁰.

The majority of local authorities' refuge demand comes from other London boroughs, as well as outside of London; 98% of demand in 2022/23. Placing victims/survivors in a different borough to where they lived at the time of experiencing domestic abuse and/or accessing support is often for their safety.

Levels of need for safe accommodation support in a borough and demand on local authority services often do not align. Any measure of demand across London services must also consider that the majority of their demand comes from other London boroughs, as well as outside of London.

In 2022/23, 31% of women placed in London refuges had moved from outside of London. Another 67% had moved from other London boroughs (see figure 30)⁶¹.

Figure 30 Proportion of known previous locations of women when placed in London refuges, 2017/18 to 2023/24

Moving victims/survivors is intended to provide safety from the perpetrator. However, many service providers have highlighted the challenges that this disruption to support networks and routines poses.

“It’s very, very, very unusual that somebody from one borough will remain in that borough” - Statutory practitioner

“If you had a refuge in borough with families from within the borough, the risk of potentially the address getting leaked might be as higher” - Statutory practitioner

However, this causes challenges for London boroughs in predicting demand for DASA-based support and commissioning local services to meet this demand. Practitioners shared that this can create tension on partnerships between local authorities.

It is unclear how to prioritise commissioning across local authorities due to the transient nature of refuge provision: commissioning of refuge spaces in London is not consistent by geography. This makes it challenging to plan and provide consistent provision and support and means local authorities have varying capacity to support victims/survivors.

Unequal commissioning means demand risks being directed towards boroughs with strong provision, meaning referrals may then become oversubscribed. Unsuccessful referrals therefore do not necessarily equate to lower levels of DASA capacity and investment.

This creates unequal provision across London: According to some VAWG coordinators this has fuelled a cycle of unequal service provision in which boroughs with lower capacity levels are not incentivised to invest in DASA services as they can pass on the demand to other boroughs.

Practitioners highlighted the risk of this ‘postcode lottery’ where victims/survivors can be denied support based on their eligibility to move to different boroughs. This is especially the case for specific cohorts of victims/survivors who require support from ‘by and for’ services that operate in certain areas.

It also creates tension across local authorities and puts pressure on partnerships: According to practitioners, this resulted in feelings of resentment or inequity because local authorities with good provision could accept referrals from other boroughs but they couldn’t always refer out to other boroughs who didn’t have sufficient provision.

“Where we’ve got more bed spaces, we have higher demand for them. So you get a lot of demand from other boroughs just because you’ve got the space” - Statutory practitioner

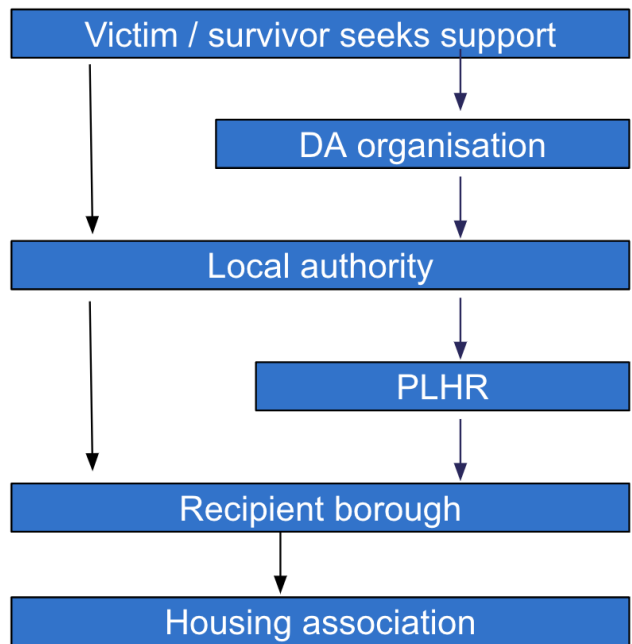

The Pan London Housing reciprocal (PLHR)

The Pan-London housing reciprocal (PLHR) was set up in 2017 and aimed to offer long-term and affordable housing for social tenants fleeing domestic abuse.

“So often those who are at risk of violence who have a social tenancy are forced to make a difficult choice – they can either stay at risk or become homeless. The Reciprocal offers a third choice, one that helps them find a safe and secure home which they can afford.” - Safer London

The Pan-London Housing Reciprocal (PLHR) is a housing scheme that allows people with social tenancies facing serious harm to secure an alternative social tenancy in a different London borough. The scheme is staffed by Safer London and is a voluntary collaboration between all London boroughs and housing associations (see table 10 shows the victim/survivor flow through the scheme). The scheme supports person(s) and households affected by DA, sexual abuse/violence, honour-based violence, hate crime, and serious youth violence.

Table 10 Victim/survivor flow through the scheme

However, the scheme is limited in its ability to support domestic abuse victims/survivors fleeing abuse. Over six years of PLHR scheme lifetime, only 34% (1,128/3,298) of all referrals have been accepted (see figure 31)⁶². Of accepted referrals only 18% (248) cases have been moved successfully into housing, an average of 40 successful moves each year. 2018 saw the most successful year for the scheme, however still only 51 successful moves were made (see figure 32)⁶³. To compare to the demand for social housing, in 2021/22 alone, 24,000 social lettings were made. Despite its purpose, the PLHR scheme has had little impact on meeting demand.

Initially, PLHR was created to support people affected by domestic abuse alone. However, as priorities changed, the program expanded its scope to provide housing assistance for a more diverse group of victims/survivors. This broader focus now includes those impacted by serious youth violence, community safety concerns, violence against women and girls (VAWG), and hate crimes. The updated priorities acknowledge the positive outcomes of relocating people affected by these various types of crimes. See figures 33 and 34.⁶⁴

The lack of available housing and inefficient partnerships means that even victims/survivors who successfully moved through the scheme waited for almost a year, on average, before moving. Victims/survivors are spending increasingly long waiting for the PLHR scheme to support them in securing social housing. From a victim/survivor seeking housing support from local authorities, they are then waiting almost a month (23 days on average) to hear if the referral is approved. If the referral is approved, the victim/survivor is then waiting over 10 months before they are able to successfully move into the accommodation (see table 11 for an illustration).⁶⁵ Service providers explained these long waiting times mean it is becoming increasingly difficult to support victims/survivors in safe accommodation, with limited chance of a successful move on.

The pandemic severely impacted staff awareness of the PLHR schemes’ function and duties: When the PLHR was launched, training was provided to regional staff. The pandemic caused high turnover in frontline council staff meaning expertise was lost, resulting in a large proportion of those who had been trained leaving their organisations. While these roles have since been filled, there are large gaps in understanding between newer and older staff. Understanding of the scheme and its internal processes are limited as new staff require training.

The cost-of-living crisis has driven up the price of housing and drastically reduced available stock: The housing market crisis in London has dramatically increased private rent costs and decreased stock of available letting properties. This has meant that there is a significant shortfall of property available for housing organisations which places major barriers on the ability of local authorities to provide housing support. Within the context of an increased need for housing support in London, available provision continues to decline across many local authorities.

Current partnership working across agencies is causing inefficiencies to the scheme: Practitioners in the PLHR report explained that there are gaps in effective partnership working. For example, before a victim/survivor is moved, senior leadership at the partner organisation – where the client currently holds a tenancy – must provide approval. Practitioners explained this creates bottlenecks when relationships are not effective.

⁶⁵ Source: PLHR Review 2023. Data note: PLHR is a scheme in London, providing affordable housing to victims/survivors. Data is held on 3,298 referrals

However, many practitioners were still keen to set up a managed reciprocal – just on a smaller, more localised level, with boroughs that they have a good relationship with.

Many practitioners acknowledged the benefits of housing reciprocals, particularly how it allows victims/survivors to leave their home and move to a safe area without having to lose their social tenancy. The benefits of this approach are:

- it's easier to facilitate in terms of administration and logistics;
- it's easier to get buy-in and commitment from housing directors;
- a local authority is able to support a victim/survivor to move on, without it affecting it's housing stock.

“The reason it would benefit local authorities would [be] because there's a lack of housing stock as it is, so they're getting the like for like property back” - Statutory practitioner

Deep dives: partnership working and Whole Housing Approach

This chapter explores the findings from the two deep dives into partnership working.

1. Partnership working in the London ecosystem was found to be good overall, with some working relationships requiring improvement
2. The Whole Housing Approach was found to be beneficial overall, especially as it can be incrementally implemented

Partnership working

Voluntary partners discussed strong partnership working within the sector - with providers taking a coordinated approach to supporting victims/survivors of domestic abuse. While partnership working tended to be weaker with statutory partners, particularly local authority housing teams and children's services.

However, this was not identified as the biggest barrier in providing safe accommodation and accommodation-based support. Practitioners identified short-term funding cycles, resources and capacity, staff recruitment and retention, and the on-going housing crisis as the bigger barriers.

In terms of improving partnership working, there are known examples of best practice which can improve the way local authority housing teams and housing associations work with the voluntary sector. Namely, Domestic Abuse Housing Alliance (DAHA) accreditation and co-locating IDVAs (both components of the WHA).

Voluntary sector practitioners generally described good partnership working within the sector, with partners taking coordinated approaches to supporting victims/survivors. This manifested in

- well-functioning referral pathways between different voluntary sector providers;
- coordinated approaches to supporting victims/survivors. Victims/survivors can be referred to multiple different providers to support their varying needs.

"I think generally speaking, teams across different organisations work quite closely together. And, 'if you've got that specialist, then I'll refer to you' that kind of thing" - VCS practitioner Practitioners, particularly those from 'by and for' services, recognised how important well-functioning referrals and signposting to specialist services was in effectively supporting victims/survivor and managing provider capacity.

"And, the [by and for] sector is kind of small. And so we've got these really nice partnerships across the sector. And then these ... other partnerships that we've had for a long time with certain organisations in the mainstream sector, who have some nice referral pathways into us as well" - VCS practitioner

However, partnership working is not perfect. Some practitioners discussed the potential for more joined up training, shared resources, and networking within the sector - something that the existing commissioning structure did not necessarily facilitate.

Challenges in partnership working

Some challenges in partnership working were identified between voluntary sector partners and local authority partners. Some of this stemmed from differing communication and cultural practices.

Communication: Some partners discussed communication challenges with local authority housing teams, although this did not apply to every local authority housing team. These challenges could affect their ability to support a victim/survivor in accessing move on accommodation. Communication issues identified by practitioners included a lack of responsiveness and delays in sharing the progress and outcome of cases. It was widely acknowledged by practitioners, that some of these communication issues were linked to high demand and limited capacity in local authority housing teams.

"Communication is very, very hard with some local authorities" - VCS practitioner

Culture: Another barrier to partnership working was culture. Some housing teams were described as having good cultural practices, where housing officers would believe victims/survivors and take greater ownership over progressing their cases. These were often housing teams that had a co-located IDVA or were undergoing DAHA accreditation.

Other housing teams were described as having poor cultural practices, where officers were likely to not listen to the needs of victim/survivors or believe their cases. These attitudes could negatively impact working relationships with housing teams and make it harder to support victims/survivors in accessing move on accommodation.

"I was based in a local authority and I would see the conversations 'oh I think she just wants housing, she is lying about the situation'" - VCS practitioner

"If they don't have ... good practices or training within their organisation... it is not easy to work with them" - VCS practitioner

Challenges for VCS partners in navigating housing systems and processes

A number of voluntary sector practitioners discussed the challenges in navigating housing systems and processes within some local authorities. Practitioners said that processes could be unclear or inconsistently applied. There could also be significant variations between boroughs. Particularly around the application of priority need, interim duties and 'local connection' requirements.

Practitioners reported that these challenges in navigating housing processes made it harder to work with local authority housing teams and support victims/survivors into move on accommodation.

"We're not working with the same local authority, different ones. So you get different responses" - VCS practitioner

"It's quite difficult to get an understanding of what their processes are and how they make their decisions in terms of priority need, interim duties, all these kinds of things" - VCS practitioner

"I've met with providers in [London borough] to try and understand their process. And at the end of the meeting, I haven't understood their process. And I've met with five people, each from different parts of housing... I haven't understood how to how to refer someone emergency on that day. And they haven't been able to tell me at the end of the conversation, or just well, ring this woman." - VCS practitioner

Challenges for VCS and children's services

The most challenging area of partnership working identified was between voluntary sector organisations and local authority children's services.

Section 17(1)(a) of the Children Act places a duty on local authorities to 'safeguard and promote the welfare of children within their area who are in need'.⁶⁶ This can include providing accommodation and financial assistance to children and their families. In the context of domestic abuse, this means that victims/survivors of domestic abuse who have children are entitled to support from their local authority when fleeing domestic abuse. This also applies to victims/survivors with no recourse to public funds.

"They push back or they don't want to recognise that domestic abuse affects children too" - VCS practitioner in reference to children's services

⁶⁶ Children Act 1989

“The amount of time it takes to communicate, one of my biggest issues is trying to get social workers to answer phones” - VCS practitioner

A number of practitioners said that it could be quite challenging in getting children's services to support victims/survivors of domestic abuse and their children. Some of these challenges are linked to the wider pressures that children's services are under - with high levels of demand and need.

In the context of disabled victims/survivors, it can be particularly challenging to work with children's social care. Practitioners reported that social care can often stigmatise disabled women, making them seem unfit to look after their children, rather than working with them to see if they need any extra support to do so.

“There's always a communication difference between us and Children's Services, in understanding the adult that we're supporting, and what their needs are. So then we clash a lot. And I think that's the struggle we have when it comes to people with a learning difficulty to be understood by the children social services to say, okay, they can still be a parent, they just might need that extra support” - VCS practitioner

Beneficial approaches to partnership working

Domestic Abuse Housing Alliance (DAHA) accreditation and co-location were cited as examples of best practice in relation to partnership working. Both can improve communication and cultural practices within local authority housing teams.

DAHA Accreditation: DAHA accreditation is a benchmark for how housing providers should respond to domestic abuse. The accreditation framework consists of 8 priority areas that cover an organisation's operations and service delivery.

Our practitioner engagement showed DAHA accreditation can have a positive impact on partnership working between housing teams and voluntary sector providers. Partnership working and collaboration is one of the priority areas under DAHA accreditation. Housing teams are encouraged to strengthen partnerships with local domestic abuse services - utilising their specialisms and expertise to meet the needs of victims/survivors of domestic abuse. One participant described having positive working relationships is a set standard under DAHA accreditation.

“There are also certain standards [as part of the DAHA accreditation] around information sharing and attending strategic boards, and having good referral pathways and positive working relationships” - VCS practitioner

Co-location: A number of practitioners discussed the benefits of having an Independent Domestic Violence Adviser (IDVA) co-located within a local authority housing team or housing association. For housing officers, IDVAs provide case management support, using their expertise in domestic abuse to provide advice and guidance on how to approach specific cases. IDVAs can also access refuge directories (such as Routes to Support) so are able to help housing officers find refuge places for victims/survivors of domestic abuse. Importantly, IDVAs also help upskill housing officers - informally sharing knowledge, expertise, and providing training.

“I can see the housing team has a good understanding because of the work that's been done there around domestic abuse... the housing options manager is really, really on board and really able to now take those decisions on her own, because she's got that level of knowledge” - VCS practitioner discussing the benefits of co-location

The Whole Housing Approach

The deep dive into the Whole Housing Approach (WHA) made it possible to understand how safe accommodation sits within the wider housing ecosystem and how it can be better connected to different accommodation types, housing options and support initiatives. This is an important consideration for demand management: the WHA can help identify ways to divert victims/survivors away from safe accommodation or leave safe accommodation into long-term and sustainable housing.

Methodology:⁶⁷

- Existing guidance and resources on the WHA were reviewed, including the WHA toolkit and the pilot reports. This created a baseline understanding of the WHA, why it is needed, and its different components
- 4 key practitioners who were involved in the implementation of the WHA were interviewed and were asked to consider the strengths and weaknesses of the approach as well as its potential for a wider roll out. Questions on the WHA were also incorporated in our interviews with housing directors and commissioners

What is the Whole Housing approach, and why is it needed?

The Whole Housing Approach (WHA) is a framework for addressing the housing and safety needs of victims/survivors of domestic abuse. Research by Women's Aid shows that victims/survivors of domestic abuse often have to leave their homes in order to feel safe.⁶⁸ However, due to a lack of safe and affordable housing, many victims/survivors end up homeless or rough sleeping. In the Hidden Housing Crisis, Women's Aid found that concerns around housing and homelessness was a 'significant barrier' for women leaving abusive partners.

⁶⁸ Source: Women's Aid, The Hidden Housing Crisis (2020)

Aims of the WHA:

- Earlier identification and intervention for domestic abuse through mobilising social and private landlords and key institutions involved in private ownership
- Improve access to safe and stable housing across all housing tenure types (social, private rented and private ownership)
- Ensure victims/survivors have access to a range of housing options and initiatives, so they can choose to either relocate or remain in their existing accommodation
- Increase tenancy sustainment options
- Reduce the number of people who are made homeless as a result of domestic abuse

What are the components of the Whole Housing Approach?

Not all the components of the WHA fall under the legal definition of ‘safe accommodation’ or ‘safe accommodation-based support’. Table 12 illustrates the different components of the WHA.

Table 12 Different components of the Whole Housing Approach

Accommodation types	Housing options and initiatives
1. Supported/sheltered housing	6. Housing First
2. Refuge	7. Managed Reciprocal
3. Social housing	8. Sanctuary schemes
4. Privately Rented Sector	9. Domestic abuse services (including co-located IDVAs)
5. Privately Owned	10. Flexible Funding
	11. DAHA
	12. Perpetrator management

Domestic Abuse Housing Alliance (DAHA) accreditation is a first step towards adopting a whole housing approach. It was widely recognised by partners to support cultural change and enhance knowledge and partnerships.

The WHA encourages local authorities to undergo DAHA accreditation. A number of practitioners said that DAHA accreditation had a positive impact on organisational culture, with strategic leads committing to principles on how the organisation should treat victims/survivors of domestic abuse.

DAHA accreditation also had a positive impact on how frontline staff understood domestic abuse (including the different types of domestic abuse), perceived victims/survivors (including their needs), and responded to victims/survivors.

“We’ve seen really big improvements in the support that survivors received from local authorities that have had DAHA accreditation” - Statutory practitioner

“I think the main changes that you see are ... how quickly [victims/survivors] are responded to and how urgently domestic abuse is treated as an issue” - Statutory practitioner

“You really got the sense that [housing] officers actually cared about the people that they were working with. And it wasn’t just like ‘I need to progress this case for X, Y Z reasons’” - Statutory practitioner

The positive impact of DAHA accreditation was also noted in the DAHA Accreditation Evaluation, by the University of York, which stated that the accreditation process had resulted in ‘changes in organisational culture’ with ‘shifts in how individual staff members and the organisation thought and behaved’.⁶⁹ The evaluation also found wider benefits of accreditation with victims/survivors feeling listened to and respected, and frontline workers improving the speed and quality of their responses. The University of York’s report and the practitioners in this 2022/23 Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation needs assessment, suggested that shifts in culture could lead to long-term and sustainable impact changes to how an organisation responds to victims/survivors.

The WHA approach allows victims/survivors to explore all the housing options available to them and empowers them to make decisions that are best for them - whether that’s entering a refuge and leaving their borough or remaining at home with a sanctuary scheme in place.⁷⁰ This is a good approach where refuge is not suitable.

“So what we notice is that often for those fleeing domestic abuse, refuge was often presented as the only housing solution. And we know that refuge is not viable for all women experiencing domestic abuse. For example, it’s not ideal for women that have larger families - VCS practitioner

The WHA provides a flexible approach, which considers the different needs that victims/survivors have at different stages of their journeys. As well as short term support at crisis stage, there is a particular emphasis within the WHA on the long-term safety and security of the victim/survivor.

The WHA can be implemented flexibly, with local authorities adapting the model to suit their needs. This means that, instead of implementing all 12 components at once, they select 1-

⁶⁹ Source: University of York, An evaluation of DAHA accreditation, Final Report (2021)

⁷⁰ Source: DAHA, Whole Housing approach Evaluation, Year 1 Report (2020)

2 components that they think they can easily implement, meets the needs of their communities, and works alongside what they're already doing/their priorities. By implementing a couple of components at a time, delivery is also more feasible in terms of resourcing and funding.

"I think sanctuary [schemes] and flexible funding are two quick wins, that probably can be done with the safe accommodation funding that's around" - VCS practitioner

'Each component of the WHA can be implemented as a standalone initiative that creates impactful results for survivors' - Whole Housing Approach, Year 1 Pilot Evaluation⁷¹

"We don't have to look at all of them in one go, we can focus on two of those components and start there, and then slowly build to focus on the other components as well" - VCS practitioner

Potential barriers to WHA implementation

Every component of the WHA has costs associated with it and will require resources and funding to implement. This can be a barrier for implementation. The resources and funding required will vary depending on the component and a number of other factors, including how a local authority would like to implement the component. For instance, some practitioners shared that some local authorities can spend £1,000 - £1,500 per sanctuary scheme, whilst others spend closer to £150 - £300. Components such as DAHA accreditation, which require recruiting for new roles, creating new structures, and implementing system level change are likely to have larger immediate financial implications.

"You have to pay your accreditation fees and your assessment fees... you also have to invest a bit, not loads, a bit in training, comms and infrastructure. So like case management system changes and stuff like that" - Statutory practitioner, speaking about DAHA.

"At a time where most local authorities, particularly housing departments are in massive amounts of debt and overspend" - Statutory practitioner

It is also worth considering the broader context that local authority housing teams are operating in. Housing teams have high demand for their services, with housing officers under a lot of pressure. The cost-of-living crisis has also affected the volume and nature of demand for services, as well as the costs of providing those services.

"There's always something else going on, there's always something more urgent" - Statutory practitioner

⁷¹ Ibid.

“Could you imagine trying to support 70 people, 60 people, 50 people, with housing and bearing in mind they don't only just support women that are fleeing domestic abuse, it could be anyone that has a housing need” - VCS practitioner

Buy-in from senior stakeholders, and frontline staff, as well as issues around recruitment and retention are also barriers in implementing the WHA.

The resources and costs associated with implementing the WHA can affect buy-in for both senior stakeholders and frontline staff. Senior stakeholders and staff are already facing high demand, so may not be willing to take on something that they see as additional work. The thought of implementing the WHA can also be daunting, given that it has 12 components - some of which can take a lot of time and resources (e.g. DAHA).

“And I think they see it [WHA] as probably more work rather than actually going to be working with them. I think it's like another addition that they need to do” - VCS practitioner

To mitigate against this, practitioners suggested emphasising the long-term benefits of the WHA, including the potential cost savings that can be achieved further down the line.

There are a number of challenges with staff recruitment and retention in the VAWG sector. Issues such as comparatively low salaries, high caseloads, and stressful working conditions, has made it difficult to recruit specialist staff. In particular, IDVAs that might co-locate in a local authority housing team.

“We've had nobody in post over the course of two years, we've had one person in place for six months. And that's it” - Statutory practitioner, in reference to an IDVA

One practitioner told us that, since the pandemic, it has become harder to recruit for co-locating IDVAs. One reason given for this, was that fewer people are now willing to be in the office 3-4 times a week (something that was described as crucial for an IDVA to share learning and expertise).

Recommendations

This chapter provides recommendations based on the quantitative and qualitative analysis carried out for this needs assessment. The recommendations are to inform the London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy refresh.

Commissioning focus

- More refuge spaces should be commissioned, as capacity is the greatest barrier preventing successful referrals
- More commissioning of suitable safe accommodation and safe accommodate based support for women with more than two children and/or older male children is necessary
- There is not enough specialist provision for certain acute needs and victims/survivors with multiple disadvantages, especially for those with severe mental health needs. More appropriate support should be commissioned. This may include providing specialist provision or specialist staff in general provision
- MOPAC and local authorities should partner with more specialist providers around mental health and substance use. They should explore opportunities to bring these providers into safe accommodation settings to increase the opportunity for victims/survivors to be in safe accommodation that meets their needs
- This report has found that by the time victims/survivors' access DASA and DASA-based support their needs are acute. It would be beneficial to invest in preventative support and early intervention to reduce the severity of need in the DASA cohort

- Yearly funding cycles should be extended for all providers to ensure staff do not leave their post because their futures feel uncertain or that delivery time is overly spent on bidding for funds
- Feedback from victims/survivors who have received support from specialist by and for organisations, linked to their ethnicity, sexual orientation, and immigration status, has been very positive. Commissioning of these services should be maintained, and where possible grown, and funding cycles extended to ensure stability

- MOPAC and GLA should explore alternative borough-based funding to incentivise all boroughs to invest more in local DASA provision even if their local victims/survivors receive support elsewhere and if they accommodate demand from other boroughs

- Boroughs should be encouraged to commission specialist provisions on a joint basis, including dedicated acute mental health support or dedicated substance use support to address the geographical challenges of commissioning
- MOPAC and GLA should consider smaller-scale, localised alternatives to the pan-London Housing Reciprocal

Addressing housing provision

- Work should be done to align housing and DASA strategies by MOPAC and GLA
- A business case should be created to improve availability and quality of move-on accommodation and temporary accommodation. This will require an up-front cost but improve flow through the system to avoid the current bottlenecks in refuge spaces or overuse of unsuitable temporary accommodation which does not allow survivors to receive adequate support
- Sanctuary schemes and other kinds of safe accommodation should be piloted to reduce demand on refuge, second stage accommodation and semi-independent accommodation. This is especially important when considering refuge is not always suitable and/or the preferred option for some victims/survivors
- MOPAC and GLA should continue to work together to best support rough sleepers as a result of domestic abuse
- MOPAC and GLA should continue to lobby government for more social housing and affordable housing

Updated guidance

- MOPAC/GLA should lobby government for the DASA definition to be updated, in particular to enable support being given to victims/survivors at every stage of their journey, including when not able to be in safe accommodation due to shortage of safe accommodation provision
- Lobby government for clearer guidance on how to better provide support for those with insecure immigration status
- 'Complex need' is a term used to describe many different circumstances and this can create confusion. Multiple disadvantage should be better defined to support the commissioning and delivery of provision

Further research

- The evidence base for what safe accommodation provision and DASA-based support would meet the needs of the groups below and commission provision should be improved accordingly:
 - male victims/survivors
 - older female victims/survivors
 - children as victims/survivors of domestic abuse in their own right

Data recording

- Data recording around DA and DASA provision should be improved by becoming more systematic. On Track Data is very rich and could be a model for other partners
- A system for recording multiple disadvantage experienced by people is vital to ensure bespoke support can be commissioned and their needs better met

Partnership working

- To improve partnership working, all local authority housing teams, and housing associations in London, should be encouraged to undertake DAHA accreditation. DAHA results in improvements in organisational culture and partnership working between statutory and non-statutory partners
- Children's Services should be encouraged to improve their systems, processes and cultural practices when it comes to victims/survivors of domestic abuse, and their children. The Mayor should advocate that every London borough has an adequately supported co-located IDVA

- The WHA presents a significant opportunity to refresh the approach to protecting and supporting victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including by allowing them to remain in their accommodation and for domestic abuse perpetrators to relocate instead. This can reduce the need for safe accommodation and may decrease the need for long-term support services
- Should the Mayor wish to focus strongly on the whole housing approach, a more thorough review is recommended
- The Mayor should promote the WHA more widely in strategy and communications. This could involve webinars or sharing WHA resources, for example. The Mayor should aim to build momentum and awareness around the approach
- To encourage implementation each local authority should identify which aspects of the WHA approach they want to focus on. The Mayor could provide recommendations around this
- The Mayor should identify how funding could be made available to support each local authority implementing the WHA

Methods

The methods used to conduct the 2022/23 Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation needs assessment included quantitative analysis and qualitative research

Document review	A review of published and internal policy documentation, evaluations, and reports relating to domestic abuse safe accommodation and accommodation-based support. This set out the local strategic context around service provision and victim/survivor needs.
Quantitative data analysis	Quantitative data analysis on published and local data sets to understand the volume and nature of demand for safe accommodation, and accommodation-based support. For the full list of datasets included in this report see table 10 and 11
Practitioner interviews	Interviews with 23 practitioners and focus groups. This included interviews with MOPAC commissioners, VAWG coordinators, statutory partners, and voluntary sector service providers. For the full list of participating practitioners see page 10.
Practitioner Workshops	Two workshops were conducted one with VAWG coordinators and with MOPAC's Expert Reference Group. This provided the opportunity for relevant practitioners to review our preliminary findings and to support the development of recommendations.
Victim/survivor interviews	Interviews were held with 8 victims/survivors of domestic abuse. This includes a male victim/survivor, and victims/survivors from Black, Asian and minority ethnic backgrounds.
Victim/survivor survey	Disseminated a survey of victims/survivors to capture their experiences within DASA, map their pathways through services, and hear their thoughts on improvements that could be made. In total, 40 victims/survivors responded to the survey.

The statistics include information about new statutory duties created by the Homelessness Reduction Act to try and prevent and relieve intentional homelessness or homelessness for single people, regardless of priority need.	Summary: Under the Domestic Abuse Act 2021, Tier one authorities must conduct a local needs assessment. MHCLG have developed a standardised form to support authorities in undertaking a local needs assessment, to be filled out with the support of Tier 2 local authorities. Crest Advisory sent a data collection form to all London tier 2 local authorities, aligned to the MHCLG standardised form. 21 local authorities contributed.	Summary: CHAIN is a multi-agency database that records information about rough sleeping in London. Rough sleeping is defined as people sleeping in the open air or in other spaces not designed for habitation, such as doorways, stairwells, parks or derelict buildings. The data provided to this needs assessment includes information on 68 rough sleeping domestic abuse victims/survivors.

What does support in safe accommodation look like?

Once victims/survivors are placed in safe accommodation, London services also provide support. Domestic abuse support alongside safe accommodation available in London includes, but is not limited to:

- Advocacy support, including the development of personal safety plans and liaison with other services
- Domestic abuse prevention advice, including assistance to victims/survivors to recognise the signs of abusive relationships, to help them remain safe and to prevent re-victimisation
- Specialist support for victims/survivors with relevant protected characteristics, including faith services, translators and interpreters, immigration advice, interpreters for victims/survivors identifying as D/deaf and/or hard of hearing, and dedicated support for LGBTQ+ victims/survivors
- Specialist support for victims/survivors with additional and/or complex needs, including mental health advice and support, and drug and alcohol advice and support, including sign posting
- Support for children, including play therapy, child advocacy or a specialist children worker
- Housing-related support, for example, securing a permanent home and advice on rights to existing accommodation and on how to live safely and independently
- Advice services, including on financial and legal support, accessing benefits, supporting victims/survivors into work and establishing independent financial arrangements
- Counselling and therapy, for both adults and children, including emotional support.

Domestic Abuse: The context in London

London continues to have a growing and diverse population. This is an important consideration in the provision of domestic abuse safe accommodation services. See figures 35 to 38.⁷³

The Crime Survey for England and Wales (CSEW) shows a decrease in experiences of domestic abuse nationally, however, please note that the CSEW has been temporarily suspended from National Statistics status due to sampling and response challenges post-COVID. This should therefore not be a guiding statistical analysis.

The CSEW year ending March 2023 estimated that 5.1% of people aged 16 years to 59 experienced domestic abuse in the last year.

The proportion of women who reported experiencing domestic abuse in the last year was lowest in London (2%) across the whole of England and Wales.⁷⁴ See figure 39.

⁷⁴ Source: Crime Survey of England and Wales, Domestic Abuse release 2022/23

Method note: There has been a temporary suspension to the National Statistics status for estimates from the Crime Survey for England and Wales, due to recording limitations in COVID-19.

Figure 39 Estimated percentage of the population aged 16 to 59 years old, that have been a victim/ survivor of domestic abuse based on the CSEW, by region 2022/23

Domestic abuse takes different forms. Therefore, in addition to recognising the importance of victim/survivor characteristics, support services need to be adaptable to respond to various types of abuse.

The CSEW and police recorded crime data includes a range of offence types that are classed as domestic abuse. The most common types of domestic abuse recorded in 2022/23 by the CSEW were inter-partner (2.6%) and family abuse (1.6%). See figure 40.⁷⁵

Police recorded crime indicated that in 2022/23, 34% of domestic abuse related offences were violence against the person, followed by 17% as sexual offences. See figure 41.⁷⁶

Different types of abuse experienced by victims/survivors will create different needs for services provision.

Provision⁷⁹

In 2022/23 London's volume of refuge bedspaces was 2% higher than the recommended volume by the Council of Europe.⁸⁰ See figure 45.

Specialist services can provide support to survivors with specific needs. However, practitioners have reflected that there is not enough specialist provision to meet demand.

Specialist services are commissioned to tailor DASA support to meet the needs of victims/survivors of domestic abuse. 71 specialist domestic abuse safe accommodation services reported that they were providing support to victims/survivors across London in 2022/23.

⁷⁹ For table: Data note: Mayoral commissioned services holds information on the 63 services in the Mayoral commissioning portfolio. Method note: 64 total services were reported to be providing specialist support. However, some services are providing multiple specialist support, so the volume of specialist support services exceeds the total number of individual services.

26 of these services were 'by and for', tailored to also support those who share particular protected characteristic(s) and/or who share one or more vulnerabilities requiring additional support. See below figure 46 for further details.

The value of holistic and specialist support

There were multiple ways in which holistic support was provided across London. Including specialist roles and co-location

Practitioners and victims/survivors alike valued comprehensive services through which they can access multiple channels of support in one place. Practitioners suggest that a good way to achieve this is through co-location (when multiple organisations work in the same physical location). In-person communication can make partnership working stronger and improve victim/survivor needs assessments.

“Local authorities used to run something called a one stop shop that used to be quite popular. That would be where, as a survivor, you could get housing, legal, financial, emotional, school support, you could get everything in one place.” - MOPAC commissioners

A single point of contact (SPOC) for the victim/survivor was greatly advocated by the practitioners. This professional role positively impacts the victim/survivor journey by tailoring DASA-based support. Such initiatives where the victim/survivor only engages with a single point of contact means:

- Reduced possibility of the victim/survivor having to be re-traumatised
- Mediation with other support services are more effective
- Reduced appointment no-shows as SPOC supports victim/survivor in attending.

Ensuring that DASA services are channelled through one person means that support can be more effectively tailored towards victim/survivor needs. Practitioners highlighted the benefits of survivor-led DASA provision in which services are centred around the needs of the victims/survivors.

“In effect, we run a team around the caseworker so that the child only has to engage with an individual.” -CYP focus group

“It’s very confusing to be getting harassing phone calls, from GP phone calls to HR and like just all of it coming in at different times, especially if you’re not in a safe space.” - Traveller Movement

Another way to ensure victims/survivors receive holistic and tailored support is through the use of specialist roles. It has long been known the role of the IDVA is of paramount importance in DA victims/survivors’ journeys as well as helping with liaising with relevant partners.⁸¹ This was supported in the interviews and workshops undertaken in this project too. Other specialist roles such as resettlement workers were also highlighted as key to supporting victims/survivors’ journeys. For example: Safer London has invested heavily in resettlement workers, who provide holistic support for victims/survivors moving into new domestic abuse safe accommodation.

Move-on

Compared to other regions across England, London housing services are providing the least longer-term accommodation once their homelessness duty has expired for households owed a homelessness duty due to domestic abuse.

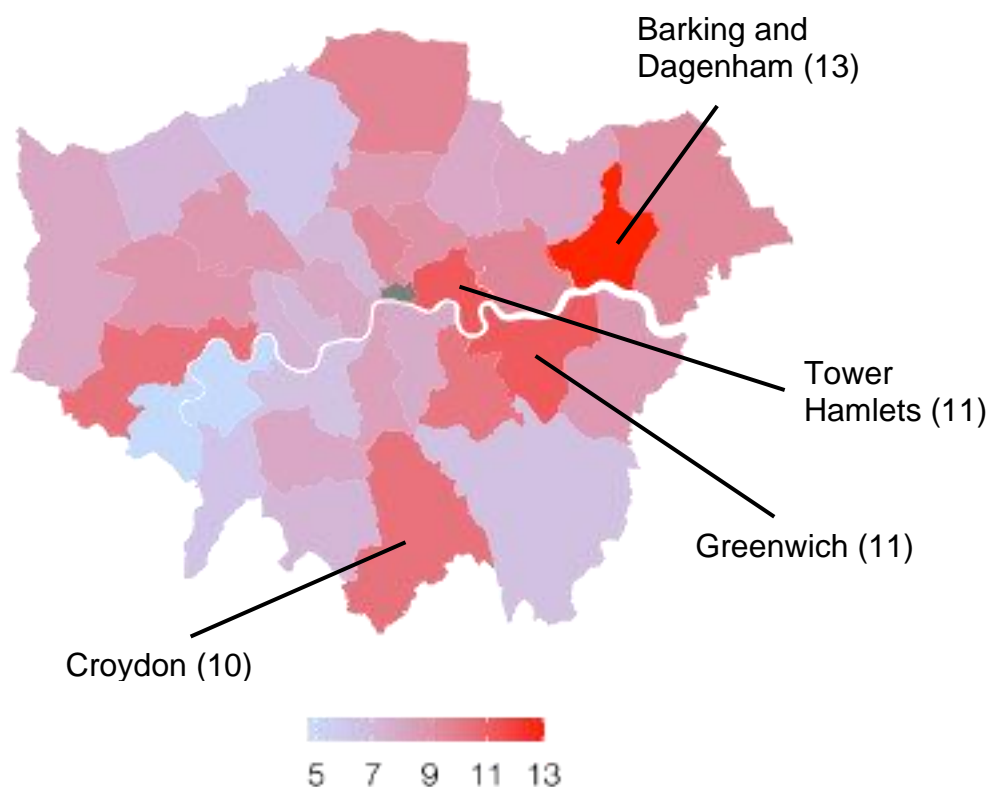

The Homelessness Duty 2017 legislation requires local authorities to take reasonable steps to try to prevent or relieve a household's homelessness by helping them to secure accommodation that will be available to them for at least 6 months. These duties usually last for up to 56 days each, although may be extended in some circumstances.

Data recorded by H-CLIC shows there has been a reduction nationally in the proportion of households securing accommodation after their prevention or relief duty has ended.

In 2022/23 only 31% of households impacted by domestic abuse in London whose homelessness duty ended managed to secure accommodation. This is the lowest rate of secured accommodation across England.

Challenges to DASA across London

In 2022/23, Barking and Dagenham continued to have the highest rate per 1,000 population of recorded domestic abuse offences.⁸² See figure 47.

Greenwich, Westminster and Havering had the highest demand in 2022/23 for households impacted by domestic abuse who required a homelessness duty, with rates much higher than the national average. See figure 48.⁸³

As in previous years, the borough in which the greatest number of domestic abuse victims/survivors were seen rough sleeping in 2022/23 was Westminster, with 12 domestic abuse victims/survivors (18% of the overall London total). Camden and Ealing saw the second highest number of domestic abuse victims/ survivors. However this is still only half of the need in Westminster.⁸⁴ See figure 49.

Victim/survivor experience

Negative experiences of accessing support

Stakeholders reported concerns that some victims/survivors are unable to access support in the first place. This could be because:

- They lack awareness of what support is available
- They do not know how to access support
- There are barriers in physically accessing support. For example, not all victims/survivors have access to a phone or the internet (particularly if they're homeless). Some people can't afford the bus/train to receive support.

“Any service can be seen as sort of this, like an inaccessible black hole of you don't really know what it does, you don't really know who's there, you don't really know what it's going to look like to engage with that.... if you're thinking about someone who is, you know, rough sleeping or sofa surfing, where do they find out about services?” - VCS practitioner

One victim/survivor said she had tried calling support services for four or five days. Each time she called, she was on hold for an hour or two. Because she lived with the perpetrator, it was hard to be on hold for long periods of time - so she had to go to the park to make the calls. The survey indicated that some people didn't get any support when they tried to access it - both from statutory partners and voluntary partners.

Positive experiences of accessing support

Many safe accommodation services in London, with the necessary facilities and capacity to offer support, are making a profound, positive impact on the lives of victims/survivors of domestic abuse.

Feedback is collected from victims/survivors on their service provision from domestic abuse safe accommodation services. This is part of the Mayoral monitoring forms. The feedback reflects the valuable support these services provide, with access to Mayoral commissioning.

Victims/survivors receiving support from these services highlight the essential work being done to support them in finding safety and regaining confidence when fleeing the abuse they experienced.

"I now have someone to turn to for support and help. I have had help with clothing, food and equipment and I have had so much emotional support. Being able to meet with [staff member] once a week has made me feel that someone is on my side, that someone believes me and will offer real tangible support. I didn't know anyone in this area and the support from (staff member) has been so helpful and made me feel settled. Being able to receive support has been life changing I have never had this before and I feel less alone." - Victim/Survivor

"When I look back at where I was almost two years ago, I realise how much [DASA service] have helped me. I was nearing a breakdown and unrecognisable. I was supported to heal at the refuge, and began to learn my rights, improved my English, accessed support and legal services and have become more independent. I'm no longer dependent nor scared of my perpetrator, I feel so very lucky and grateful for all of the support I have received" - Victim/Survivor

"I think the counselling service went well. It's quite comforting to know that us women, with difficult backstories, are able to speak in a safe place. It's really lovely" - Victim/Survivor

Victims/survivors receiving DASA and DASA-based services expressed the invaluable practical support received from services which has meant they have regained their independence. Practical support is highly valued by victims/survivors: Alongside a bed space and emotional support, victims/survivors providing feedback to safe accommodation services commissioned by the Mayor highly valued practical support provided by these services. Support with securing housing, domestic abuse awareness and prevention work, and wider financial and day-to-day support (such as vouchers), were all reported by victims/survivors as essential in allowing them to move away from their abuse and rebuild their lives.⁸⁵

"The vouchers are extremely helpful, especially when waiting for benefit process to be completed. As we are residing at an emergency temporary accommodation with no board, kitchen or a fridge. If I wouldn't have the community's support, the vouchers would be a lifesaver and still will be for us in a weak time" - Victim/Survivor

"I received an email showing I was awarded housing benefits for the hotels where I had rent arrears. Thank you for all your support and help. It feels like a huge weight has been lifted off my shoulders and life is changing for the better post-abuse. I appreciate your assistance in helping me keep my kids safe" - Victim/Survivor

"I was told the abuse was my fault, I have now learnt that he was the abuser and I have the confidence to never go back." - Victim/Survivor

Introduction and Background

Purpose and structure of the report

This report provides a summary of responses to the consultation on the Mayor's draft Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy refresh for 2025-28. It sets out a summary response by the GLA and MOPAC, followed by individual responses to consultation suggestions. Changes and clarifications recommended by the GLA and MOPAC are set out.

The Domestic Abuse Act 2021 and the scope of the Mayor's powers

The GLA, as the Tier One authority in London, has duties under Part 4 of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021¹ to support victims/survivors of domestic abuse and their children in relevant safe accommodation. These duties include:

- assessing the need for domestic abuse support in safe accommodation across London
- preparing and publishing a strategy for the provision of this support
- giving effect to the strategy – that is, commissioning the provision of support to meet the identified needs
- monitoring and evaluating the success of the strategy
- convening a partnership board to advise on the exercise of the above duties.

The Mayor's Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation strategy links to wider work that the Mayor delivers on domestic abuse across London and to ambitions beyond this Duty's scope. The DASA strategy includes references to the Mayor's VAWG² strategy, his Housing Strategy³ and the Greater London Authority's match funding of capital funding to the Part 4 Duty revenue (an independent innovation outside the Duty which itself places no requirement for Authorities to provide buildings or units⁴). Part 4 of the 2021 Act and the duties discharged under it remain specific and limited to the provision of domestic abuse support to meet the needs of victims/survivors within relevant forms of safe accommodation as defined by MHCLG⁵. These are:

- Refuge accommodation
- Specialist safe accommodation
- Dispersed accommodation

- Sanctuary schemes
- Second stage accommodation
- Other forms of domestic abuse emergency accommodation, defined as ‘A safe place (single gendered or single sex, secure and dedicated to supporting victims of domestic abuse) with domestic abuse support tied to the accommodation to enable victims to make informed decisions when leaving a perpetrator and seeking safe accommodation. For example, short term (e.g. 2-3 weeks) accommodation providing victims with the space and safety to consider and make informed decisions about the options available to them.’

MHCLG guidance⁶ provides further specific information on accommodation types in full under these categories. The MHCLG guidance also provides further detail on the types of support that can be delivered in relevant safe accommodation under the Part 4 duty. London boroughs (tier 2 local authorities) have a duty to cooperate with tier one authorities in exercising their functions under Part 4 and further details of this are set out within the government guidance.

Refreshing the Mayor's 2021-24 Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy

The Mayor's first Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation (DASA) strategy in 2021⁷ is being refreshed for 2025-28, following an updated London-wide needs assessment conducted by Crest Advisory concluding in March 2024. This can be read in full in conjunction with this consultation report.

Needs assessment summary

In summary, the needs assessment included in-depth consultation with stakeholders and victims/survivors alongside the quantitative analysis of seven key datasets to create as complete a data picture as possible. Currently, across London, there is no single source of data for unmet demand and provision of safe accommodation-based support available. This is due to the differing data recording processes and funding streams of boroughs, providers, organisations and agencies (both statutory and non-statutory) involved in delivering support and services to victims/survivors across London. Key datasets analysed included;

- MHCLG Homelessness - Case Level Collection (H-CLIC): This dataset reflects statutory homelessness statistics, providing information about those who local authorities have a duty to accommodate due to homelessness.⁸
- Mayoral commissioned services – services commissioned by the Mayor under the Part 4 funding in 2022/23
- The Combined Homelessness and Information Network (CHAIN) - CHAIN is a multiagency database that records information about rough sleeping in London.⁹
- Pan London Housing Reciprocal (PLHR) - The PLHR scheme was funded by MOPAC and delivered by Safer London between 2017-2024, to offer an alternative housing pathway for those holding a social housing tenancy who are also at risk of violence in their borough¹⁰
- Local authority survey - 21 London boroughs contributed to a survey by Crest Advisory aligned to the standardised MHCLG data collection form, capturing data spanning 2020-2023 on DASA support provision.

- Routes to Support - Routes to Support is the UK-wide online Women's Aid database for domestic abuse and other VAWG services. It provides details of available refuge provision for women and children.¹¹
- On Track provided by Women's Aid - On Track is Women's Aid's case management and outcomes measurement system which is used by 100+ domestic abuse organisations and providers. This needs assessment used On Track data, including services in London.¹²
- Published datasets - Datasets utilised include the Crime Survey of England and Wales (CSEW)¹³, police recorded crime on where crimes have been reported to and recorded by law enforcement agencies from all police forces nationally and the Metropolitan Police dashboard.

The Crest Advisory research team collaborated with voluntary and community sector (VCS) organisations to interview with practitioners and victims/survivors. A diverse range of stakeholders relevant to the DASA landscape were engaged through over 40 interviews with representatives of the statutory bodies as well as the voluntary and community sector and 8 victims/survivors. A further victim/survivor survey launched received 40 responses. Crest held workshops with VAWG coordinators and VCS organisations to develop key recommendations.

The draft strategy also reflects relevant commitments contained in the Mayor's Police and Crime Plan¹⁴, Violence Against Women and Girls (VAWG)¹⁵ strategy and the London Housing Strategy¹⁶. These strategies were themselves subject to public consultation and equality impact assessments.

Pre-Strategy consultation engagement

The content of the refreshed draft strategy was informed by further separate engagement with stakeholders and victim/survivors in February-March 2024, led by MOPAC. A proportionate approach was taken, that focused on updating the DASA strategy objectives and content for 2025-28, while retaining the Mayor's vision set out in the existing strategy. This vision is that all victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including children, can access and be supported by safe accommodation-based services, tailored to their needs.

The pre-Strategy consultation engagement included:

- 4 workshops - 3 in person and one online - were held with agencies involved in tackling domestic abuse; and organisations delivering support. This included VCS and representatives of London boroughs, including housing representatives).

Themes identified

Eight themes were identified across engagement with organisations. These were for the strategy to:

- promote progress and communicate the strategy
- set out roles and responsibilities,
- encourage local coordination and partnership working
- reflect the operational context of the DASA landscape
- recognise the funding and resourcing challenges for providers
- address commissioning gaps and highlight the next set of priorities
- acknowledge strategic challenges
- acknowledge challenges to data reporting and collection.

The 8 victims/survivors provided reflections along three themes, that:

- support should assist with emergencies and crisis point
- support should help with rebuilding our lives
- support should help with 'managing the system' (such as navigating approaches to statutory services and knowing rights).

Alongside this, as part of regular MOPAC engagement, regular implementation groups chaired by partners from London Councils¹⁸ and Women's Aid¹⁹ provided a forum for ongoing reflections for the GLA and MOPAC to consider further in drafting the strategy.

Draft 2025-28 strategy publication and consultation process

The public consultation for the refreshed Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy 2025-28 launched on 4 October 2024 and ran until 10 December 2024. It was published on london.gov.uk.

The consultation format provided an online survey form developed with MOPAC's Evidence and Insight team that also provided further freeform text boxes for comments and reflections. An option to respond by email was provided.

Due to a technical fault the original closing date was extended until 10 December 2024 to enable all respondents to successfully submit. To promote the publication, MOPAC and GLA emailed a wide range of stakeholders inviting them to respond. They included those the 2021 Act specifies should be consulted on the draft strategy: including the Partnership Board, senior leaders and operational delivery representatives of boroughs in London and wider organisations from across domestic abuse services, including specialist 'by and for' providers. The draft consultation launch was also promoted on LinkedIn and X.

MOPAC held two online workshops during the period of the consultation. 31 borough and housing sector representatives, followed by 29 VAWG and wider voluntary and community (VCS) provider representatives attended to feed back their views on the draft strategy. VCS providers represented a mix of smaller, specialist and 'by and for' organisations, and larger providers. Workshops were attended by representatives with knowledge and expertise relating to the delivery of statutory and other council-led services, and those supporting a range of underserved groups of victims/survivors. The Partnership Board undertook an interactive engagement exercise on the draft strategy in October 2024.

GLA and MOPAC officers promoted the consultation throughout, via regular meetings and stakeholder forums. in other interactions with stakeholders at VAWG and Housing forums.

Responses to the online survey

The london.gov.uk website page was viewed 1,945 times and accessed by 996 users during the period of 4 Oct to 10 Dec 2024. 35 consultation responses were received – two more than for the 2021 strategy consultation.

The survey asked 9 different multiple-choice questions on how 'clear' and 'effective' key parts of the refreshed strategy and the needs assessment were. Each of these 9 questions had a further optional open-ended text box to allow for additional feedback.

25 responses to the online survey and 10 emails (containing freeform thoughts and views) were returned. Further to this, free text boxes under each multiple-choice question in the survey were provided so that additional views or suggestions could be recorded. Local authorities, VAWG and wider VCS providers and other agencies and organisations delivering support responded to the consultation. No public responses to the consultation were returned.

Processing online consultation responses

GLA and MOPAC officers classified all 35 respondents (to the survey and by email) against the organisation categories in Figure 1 above. The consultation did not require respondents to submit their organisation name, to support open and honest comments from all. Submissions were anonymised for this report.

MOPAC's Evidence and Insight team reviewed the 25 responses provided to the multiple-choice survey questions. All qualitative information from the 35 responses returned online from across free text boxes and freeform email responses were also reviewed. These were then listed into summaries. Specific suggestions to MOPAC and the GLA that related to improving the strategy were separated out from a range of wider reflections and discussions.

Combining the qualitative responses into themes

MOPAC officers undertook further content analysis to combine notetakers' data from workshops and the Partnership Board with these summaries. Recurrent suggestions, reflections and views were noted across the data and to reduce duplication, data were further grouped into themes. Where comments related to the impact of the proposals on those with characteristics protected by the Equality Act 2010, officers highlighted this to support a further cross-referencing and refining of the Equalities Impact Assessment (EQIA). Specific suggestions for MOPAC and the GLA relating to improving the strategy were listed in detail.

Summary of response to multiple choice questions

Most respondents (76%) said the purpose of the Duty, the role and scope of the Mayor's powers (72%) and evidence of his progress under the Duty (64%) were clear. 92% of respondents said that overall, the draft strategy is either an 'effective' document that supports their delivery, or is 'somewhat effective'.

Questions that related to how respondents saw their own role in delivering the Mayor's priorities and how effective the strategy document and needs assessment were in reflecting their understanding of victims/survivors' needs produced more mixed responses.

However, overall, respondents (96%) mostly said that that priority activity set out in the in the strategy was clear, or somewhat clear. and most (88%) could identify clearly where their organisation would be well placed to respond to it, or somewhat clearly. Almost all respondents felt that how the strategy (92%) and needs assessment itself (76%) set out victims/survivor needs and addressed gaps in provision effectively or at least somewhat effectively. Sentiment on the needs assessment may improve further on publication of the full needs assessment with a final version of the strategy, rather than a comprehensive summary that accompanied the draft.

A small group, 4 of 25 respondents, cited some 'not at all effective' responses, that related to specific elements of the strategy. Where 'not at all effective' responses were returned, one was from a 'by and for' specialist VAWG provider. Here, comments reflected a strength of feeling that VAWG is endemic. The respondent felt that both the needs assessment and the Part 4 funding itself are not enough to reflect or meet need in London. The respondent felt that Mayoral progress is not best represented through grant funding and favoured more leveraging by the GLA and MOPAC of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) programmes, financial and pro-bono arrangements.

3 local authorities also returned 'not at all effective' responses, with free text identifying an overall call for more on evidencing operational delivery planning, (one preferred a SMART goals approach within the strategy document), more on 'lessons learned' and on future commissioning, it was reflected by one local authority that more directive language should be used encouraging boroughs' DAHA²⁰ accreditation, along with better language regarding groups affected by domestic abuse. A further local authority cited a lack of data on older victims/survivors and on socio-economic status. A third local authority cited longstanding concerns with the GLA and MOPAC commissioning model to date, citing over-reliance on existing local authority funded provision, financial pressures on boroughs and the limitations of the strategy in addressing the disparity between boroughs' funding and investment in relation to the Duty.

Qualitative feedback captured from respondents online and through workshop engagement

This table sets out summary themes from all of the further qualitative views and suggestions captured in free text boxes and freeform email responses online, combined with notetakers' data from workshops and the Partnership Board interactive exercise.

Headline themes

Headline Theme	Description
1. Evidencing delivery	Many respondents identified that Mayoral vision and objectives set out a clear innovative vision, ambition and goals, and that the strategy sets out the Mayor's powers and scope well in alignment with the Part 4 Duty. One local authority respondent identified it as 'impressive.' Some respondents identified this refresh improved on the clarity of the last strategy and sets out largely the right priorities. However, some respondents called for clarity going forward on how impact will be delivered, with a focus on clarifying priority operational activity through SMART goals, KPIs or action planning. Some respondents called for more clarity on future commissioning planning and timelines – and on the funding and a breakdown of this available from 2025 onwards.
2. 'Lessons learned'	Some respondents cited that Mayoral progress was set out in an encouraging and useful summary that recognises that gaps in delivery still exist. However, others called for more on achievements and results to date since 2021, and more focus on the 'lessons learned' from what was not progressed or achieved in the last three years.
3. Data quality	Some respondents highlighted that the needs assessment and strategy effectively reflect victims/survivor needs and gaps in provision, and that it supports local understanding. Inclusion of data on multiply disadvantaged victims/survivors was welcomed. However, two respondents cited the wider evidence base should be more prominent in the strategy. Some respondents commented that data quality cited the limitations of identifying needs for particular groups (e.g older survivors, disabled survivors, children), or disaggregating data (e.g Black and Minoritised groups, those facing multiple disadvantage). It was noted by one that socio-economic breakdown of need was not included. It was also noted by one that underreporting by marginalised groups is likely for some sources (e.g police data). Respondents in this theme called for better data collection and monitoring mechanisms to track gaps in need, with better outcome and impact data.

4. Support for victims/survivors	Some respondents welcomed the Mayor's focus on inclusion, psychologically safe spaces, unmet need and on children in the strategy. Some respondents noted that the strategy and needs assessment reflected key and diverse areas of need, with one noting that the strategy was 'trauma informed and psychologically aware.' However, a number of respondents identified particular groups or forms of need that they considered should be included in the strategy, or more strongly emphasised. Groups included: victims/survivors with insecure immigration status, women involved with the criminal justice system, multiple disadvantages, male victims/survivors, older and disabled victims/survivors; children and young people aged 18-24. Some respondents cited that more clarity on the role of move-on accommodation was required. Two respondents felt that specialist perpetrator support provision should be included in the strategy. One respondent advised that the strategy is limited in its ability to improve outcomes for migrant victim-survivors with no recourse to public funds. One respondent was concerned that 'by and for women's services' were not cited as specialist provision. One respondent cited that language should be improved relating to underserved groups that better reflected their experiences in the summary of the needs assessment.
5. Partnership working	Some respondents noted they felt their organisation was well placed to respond to the strategy. One respondent said it was clear that a key role for the Mayor is convening wider partnerships throughout the DASA system. However, some respondents wanted more detail on how GLA and MOPAC will collaborate with all partners at pan-London level. Others highlighted that more direction should be provided on how partnership working should operate between boroughs and the VAWG sector.
6. Tier 2 authorities	Some respondents cited that the Mayor's role and the purpose of the duty is unambiguous and clear. Other respondents highlighted that the strategy should further outline the specific role and responsibilities of Tier 2 local authorities (boroughs in London).

Additional themes

Additional themes	Description
7. Refreshing Partnership Board	Some respondents in the free text data called for more clarity on how Partnership Board governance sits within the GLA and MOPAC wider structures and how it draws on views from other influential stakeholder groups.

	Respondents in the Partnership Board exercise reported their views. Some respondents felt that the governance of the Board required more clarity, including escalation routes and how information flowed to the board from other stakeholder forums in GLA and MOPAC. One respondent felt the agenda was determined in a 'top down' way. Some respondents felt that more representation from senior borough Housing leadership at the Board would be beneficial and others said influential representatives from across the whole 'ecosystem' should always attend. Others noted that VAWG expertise must continue to lead the Board and that inviting too many attendees could dilute impact. One respondent suggested smaller action-oriented groups and sessions more regularly. Some respondents noted that communicating and cascading important information to all partners from the board should be reviewed.
8. The scope of the Part 4 Duty	To note: The Mayor, GLA and MOPAC officials work with the government to make the case for how the national Duty may be developed. Decision on the scope and function of the Part 4 duty and associated guidance, monitoring and data collection are the responsibility of the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government (MHCLG). Some respondents said that the strategy's commitments to making the case for the Duty to better reflect victims/survivors with insecure immigration status are welcomed. Some providers cited that strategy commitments to seeking longer term sustainable funding as welcomed. While some respondents welcomed the change in rules to allow specialist support for victims/survivors and children placed in generic housing, there was concern from some respondents that widening the scope of the duty to include support provided in temporary accommodation may lead to adverse impacts. One respondent cited strong concerns. Respondents cited that this change in scope could be 'exploited' by 'unscrupulous' providers - and that this may dilute a commitment to driving for more safe accommodation provision overall. Some respondents reflected that meeting MHCLG reporting was a challenge for them. Some said that MHCLG 'bedspace' data categories were too limited and one respondent highlighted that safe accommodation definitions do not work for disabled victims/survivors. One respondent called for more focus on the quality of victims/survivor experience and another called for more leniency on the time it takes to mobilise support and build relationships with victims/survivors. Another asked that more regard be given to the interdependency of funding and the impact of multiple funder pressures have on the wider infrastructure.

While they could not be categorised as directly related to the improvement of content within the strategy, further respondent reflections on wider issues were captured below for transparency. All feedback will inform GLA and MOPAC's planning and engagement in 2025-28.

Funding cycles	While the focus of the Mayor on calling for long term sustainable funding was welcomed by some respondents, some respondents reflected further that current short term funding cycles had significant impact on how provision could be delivered. One respondent reflected that 'short funding cycles are devastating for smaller organisations' . Another reflected that 'the greatest impact on the sustainability of the sector is short term funding.' Another noted that long term settlements are needed with seamless grant renewal.
VAWG and housing landscape	Reflections were made that the wider issue remains that there is a lack of safe accommodation, and a shortage of housing across London. One respondent described all VAWG need in London as a whole as 'over the roof' in terms of demand. One reflection was made that understanding of survivor's needs related to locations of safe homes is lacking and that it is concerning that victims/survivors may need to move long distances outside of London beyond their support networks

Summary response

Overall, stakeholder feedback on the draft strategy has been largely positive with the Mayoral vision, objectives and direction of the strategy being endorsed by most respondents. The feedback gathered enables the GLA and MOPAC to refine, clarify and expand further on operational elements of the strategy. A summary of the recommended headline changes and clarifications is set out below.

Further clarity on key strategic milestones on future commissioning is helpful to update where possible at the time of publication. A phased approach to commissioning developed in collaboration with partners means that some milestones are in development and will be reflected through strategic engagement and further communication to partners in 2025. A specific delivery plan commitment can be highlighted for 2025-28, driven through a refreshed Domestic Abuse Partnership Board. This would demonstrate further the planning in rapid development to refresh City Hall's role in leading effective delivery of the Duty.

The strategy should add further emphasis on 'lessons learned' from the challenges of 2021-24, on elements such as the current Framework, and would benefit from highlighting more of the key operational work undertaken by the GLA and MOPAC.

We would expect concerns around data quality on domestic abuse to arise. As the updated needs assessment acknowledges upfront, and as is widely understood in the existing evidence base both in London and at national level, there is generally limited systemic data capture and utilisation on domestic abuse. Existing strategy commitments to continually improving future needs assessments and capturing wider evidence and data will be driven through delivery planning and the Partnership Board. It would be beneficial to add more explicitly that responding to all recommendations in the needs assessment (which includes addressing gaps in need) will form part of the Partnership Board and activity in 2025-28.

Further explicitness highlighting MHCLG guidance on the powers of the Mayor in relation to boroughs in delivering this Duty would be helpful. Highlighting the GLA's housing engagement at an operational level and the commitment to furthering this would be helpful to make more explicit.

Feedback also highlighted themes on the wider landscape of tackling VAWG, addressing wider housing and other issues and which go beyond the scope of changes and clarifications that could be made to this document. For example, mandatory oversight of local boroughs' provision or wider housing delivery decisions for victims/survivors is both outside of the Mayor's remit and not set out within the Part 4 statutory guidance to deliver.

Feedback also included some concerns that victims/survivors with no recourse to public funds are excluded from the Duty. This reflects pre-Strategy engagement workshops where some attendees raised that the MHCLG guidance is not clear when it comes to supporting victims/survivors with no recourse to public funds (for example, in relation to providing temporary subsistence payments to destitute victims/survivors). The Mayor shares these concerns regarding the duty's scope and has communicated this with successive governments, since before the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 came into being. Mayoral commissioned services in London actively support victims/survivors with insecure immigration and GLA and MOPAC already take a specific focus on the provision of specialist support that benefits this cohort of survivors. The Mayor's DASA strategy at London level is explicit in its ongoing commitment to work constructively with national government to improve the legislation and guidance to clarify further how all victims/survivors, including those with no recourse to public funds and insecure immigration status, can be supported with Part 4 funding.

Feedback that was out of scope, that was better situated and addressed in a delivery plan for 2025-28, or provides wider reflections all remain valid and relevant. All feedback has provided detailed insight into the landscape that partners are working within. All qualitative feedback has been captured in detail to inform the GLA and MOPAC delivery plan and strategic engagement approach to commissioning in 2025-28.

Responses to specific suggestions arising from the consultation

All specific suggestions for changes, clarifications and amendments from the online and workshop free text data were re-aligned with themes arising from the content analysis. Where duplicate suggestions arose, these have been amalgamated. A GLA MOPAC response is provided to each with a rationale included for the identified response.

Theme 1 – Evidencing delivery suggestions	GLA and MOPAC response
1.1. Provide a delivery plan to accompany the strategy 1.2. Provide more on planned activities and how progress/outcomes will be achieved/measured	1.1, 1.2. Change: Already in development is a delivery plan for 2025-28. This delivery plan helps ensure the Mayor's vision and priority activity set out in the strategy is delivered in an effective, inclusive way that delivers value for money for Londoners - in a transparent manner. A final strategy should reference this rapidly developing work and how it will be communicated.

1.3. Provide more detail on future commissioning, including timelines 1.4. Ensure that any bidding process is open to the London Borough that were not previously granted funds 1.5. Provide more detail on specific types of inclusive commissioning processes 1.6. Include a Theory of Change Model in the document	1.3. Change: While the strategy already sets out that future commissioning beyond the initial grants programme will stem from a collaborative approach with partners throughout 2025-28, further key operational milestones could be provided where possible. Much of this information is best placed in the ensuing commissioning communication to partners planned following the strategy and in a delivery plan. 1.4. No change: The communication and documentation (e.g. any prospectus) of future commissioning would be trailed following the strategy publication and should set out for specific mechanisms what the parameters are. 1.5, 1.6. No change: The strategy already identifies that a grants programme for specialist services will commence in 2025 followed by in-depth engagement to develop proposals for further commissioning mechanisms that provide the right inclusive mix for London in 2025-28. Alongside the changes recommended at 1.1, this should adequately outline at strategic level the development of further commissioning and its key operational milestones. GLA and MOPAC officers will relay suggestions on developing a Theory of Change model / models to the Partnership Board, to aid delivery planning work.
1.7. Provide more detail on future funding 1.8. Provide a breakdown of funding and how this will be distributed.	1.7. Change: Since the publication of the draft strategy for consultation closed on 10 December 2024, MHCLG have announced their allocated funding for 2025-26. This should be stated in the final strategy. 1.8. No change: Further funding information will be provided as part of the iterative, collaborative commissioning approach set out in the strategy, as relates to each mechanism. Subject to confirmation from the government of further Part 4 funding beyond 2025-26, further funding will be made available to support priorities set out in the strategy.
1.9. The strategy is not clear enough on what safe accommodation is	1.9. Clarify: 76% of consultation survey responses agreed the purpose of the Part 4 duty was 'Clear' (includes clear, very clear, and extremely clear). A shorthand definition and example of safe accommodation is set out in the glossary. For completeness, MHCLG text regarding the full range of types of safe accommodation should be replicated in the final strategy text alongside the embedded link, in the 'scope of the Mayor's powers' section. More widely, the definition of safe accommodation is set by MHCLG at national level, not by the Mayor of London- and

	includes specific types of accommodation in their statutory guidance. Other more specific suggestions relating to the role of the Mayor in supporting MHCLG to improve the clarity of the national duty with regards to safe accommodation are responded to in Theme 8.

Theme 2 - 'Lessons learned' Suggestions	GLA and MOPAC response
2.1. The strategy should show more on achievements to date, including information on how and to what extent proposals in the previous strategy have been delivered 2.2. It should expand on learning from 2021-24	2.1, 2.2. Change: The strategy sets out the headline successes of delivery in alignment with statutory MHCLG reporting and as a 'highlights' section. A further reflection on the operational successes and challenges of 2021-2024 would be helpful. This section should highlight the re-commitment to further progress against the refreshed priority commitments with reference to developing a robust delivery plan. Pointing more clearly to the full version of the needs assessment publication and commitment to deliver on recommendations will be helpful.
2.3. It should be clearer who accesses this support and how	2.3. Clarify: For brevity, the strategy currently embeds in a footnote a link to MHCLG data tables on the breakdown of survivors supported in safe accommodation in London. This data should be highlighted for ease.

Theme 3 – Data quality Suggestions	GLA and MOPAC response
3.1. Revise the needs assessment methodology so that it can identify the gap in the proportion of services provided for Black and Minoritised women.	3.1-3.9. No change: Limitations in the needs assessment do not preclude bids for funding for support for particular groups of victims/survivors, or particular models or types of support, where they evidence meeting a need and are able to be delivered under the remit of the Duty.
3.2. Insights should be provided about older survivors of abuse	The needs assessment informs the strategy as set out under the Part 4 duty. It should not be revised but it is acknowledged as a statutory and key part of London's pan-London evidence base on domestic abuse, with recorded limitations inherent to the wide-ranging combined datasets and qualitative utilised, and a commitment to continual improvement.
3.3. More data about the number and characteristics of children needing support in safe accommodation.
3.4. Socio-economic status of victim-survivors should be acknowledged	It is acknowledged within the strategy and assessment that there is no complete dataset that provides a full picture of demand and need in London. The needs assessment and Equalities Impact Assessment for the programme is also clear on gaps in understanding and that demand across many groups is likely to be much higher.
3.5. More detail on how multiple intersecting disadvantages compound

impact on severely vulnerable groups over time. Multiple disadvantages create unmet needs that require longer lasting safe accommodation support services 3.6. Trans individuals are disproportionately impacted by abuse but limited data 3.7. The needs assessment and strategy should appreciate the needs of victims/survivors who have had involvement in the criminal justice system 3.8. The need assessment should provide readers and the commissioning body with an idea of how many bedspaces or additional service are needed to ensure groups are supported 3.9. 40 responses to the needs assessment victims/survivors survey are not representative of London 3.10. The needs assessment would benefit from incorporating other existing evidence bases to identify gaps	Priority activity set out in the strategy continues to commit the Mayor, the GLA and MOPAC to work with partners “...to explore and develop improvements to the collection and use of data, and information on the demand for services and survivors’ needs.” It also states a commitment to “...ensuring learning from evaluations, pilots and service delivery are shared across delivery partners. This will also inform how funding is allocated going forward, to make sure it is having the most impact.” This work is within the remit of the Partnership Board and GLA and MOPAC officers. Comments will inform the Partnership Board, so that it can take account of them as this develops and seeks to include learning from data gathered from services and other sources. 3.10. Change: The strategy already draws on a wider evidence base of 80+ total citations beyond the statutory needs assessment. To make it clear that unidentified needs are not assumed to be met, further sources from the wider evidence base already present in the EQIA could be brought into the strategy summary section.
3.11. A cost-benefit value model to weight quality versus costs regarding specialist ‘by and for’ services should be devised	3.11. No change: Although it is agreed that this may be a beneficial model to develop, there is no benefit in amending the strategy to specifically commit to this over other potential tools and models. This suggestion will be shared to consider within the Partnership Board’s, GLA and MOPAC’s delivery plan remit on commissioning.
3.12. A Pan-London data collection that enhances collection on protected characteristics should be devised	3.12. No change: Although this is a beneficial collection to develop, there is no benefit in amending the strategy to pre-emptively commit to this over other potential uses of the Part 4 duty ahead of future commissioning engagement. This suggestion will be shared within the Partnership Board’s, GLA and MOPAC’s delivery plan and strategic engagement on commissioning remits to consider further.

Theme 4 – Support for victims/survivors	GLA and MOPAC response
4.1. Implement a working definition of specialist 'by and for' services	4.1. No change: A working definition for future DASA commissioning of specialist 'by and for' services is already in development through GLA and MOPAC officer's engagement with specialists – this will be ready to be referenced in future commissioning products by Spring 2025.
4.2. The challenging landscape of public sector and VCS funding could have been better acknowledged in the strategy	4.2. No change: Challenges in the landscape of funding are addressed in the Mayoral foreword, The impact of a national housing crisis, COVID-19 pandemic and the cost of living is addressed by the Mayor and in reflections set out for boroughs and organisations in the 'Working together to implement the Duty in 2025-28' section. The needs assessment sets out a full view of London's needs and demand and that demand outpaces support provision available. It states that the Mayor has, and will continue to make the case to national government on seeking long term, sustainable Part 4 funding that meets the needs of all victims/survivors in London.
4.3. The 'by and for' specialist approach should include provision for 'by and for women' service providers	4.3. No change: Mayoral Objective 3 of the strategy is clear that support provided should be both trauma and gender informed. The strategy does not preclude support from being bid for. A grants programme and further developed commissioning will ensure that support delivered is tailored to the needs of victims/survivors. A working definition of 'led by and for' is in development with 'by and for' specialists delivering support.
4.4 Representation of underserved groups (a). The Mayor of London alongside MOPAC and the GLA must address the systemic and structural failure in London in providing post-emergency: medium to long-term safe accommodation for male victims of domestic abuse. This is both in the availability of such accommodation by local authorities and consequentially the provision of support services in such accommodation (Mayoral)	4.4 (a-j) Change: A range of suggestions to raise the profile of groups of underserved victims/survivors in London specific groups of victims/survivors across London were captured throughout this theme and are set out to show the breadth of suggestions. A specific commitment set out under Mayoral Objective One should more explicitly state the intent to address all the recommendations within the needs assessment, (including on identified gaps) to effectively respond to the needs of victims/survivors and partners. Further – it should be drawn out how engagement mechanisms led by Partnership Board through a delivery plan, and by setting up / utilising channels to convene and respond to challenges, will address the needs of particular underrepresented groups. As in Theme 3, the strategy needs assessment summary could reflect further references to the wider evidence base on gaps in provision, apparent in the Equalities Impact Assessment, for completeness.

(b) A pan-London inquiry on male victims to understand demand (emergency and post emergency provision) and how to meet demand. Assess (and then take action) the compliance by London's local authorities meeting their statutory housing obligations to male victims of domestic abuse	4.4 (a-c), No Change: The Mayor cannot enforce or mandate the level of support provided by boroughs to victims/survivors. City Hall has ensured that the commissioning of support for victims and survivors of domestic abuse has included the provision of funding for services that support male victims and survivors including LGBTQ+. London boroughs will have been provided with information on these services and their providers. The providers also work within their communities and geographical local areas to ensure victims/survivors and professionals are aware of ways to access their services.
(c) Undertake assessment on if MOPAC and the GLA are in breach of Domestic Abuse Act 2021, on provision for male victims of domestic abuse	(d) No further change, covered in change recommended set out at 4.4 (a-j) (e) Refer to Theme 8 on refreshing Partnership Board. as this falls under that element.
(d) Make explicit reference to male victims and related named actions within the strategy's priority activity areas	(f) No further change: out of scope for the Part 4 duty. The comments will be shared with VAWG strategy and Policing and Crime Plan officers leading the refresh of these strategies in 2025. Any opportunities available for consulting on issues under their remits are set out on london.gov.uk
(e) Respondent representing male victims/survivors is made a full core member of the London Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Partnership Board	(g) No further change: The Duty states that legal support can be provided and support comprising of legal advice is already delivered through the Mayor's commissioned services in accordance with the Duty's remit. Covered in change set out at 4.4 (a-j) and also Theme 5 on engaging specific housing delivery stakeholders.
(f) Develop a gender-based violence plan for male victims in London	(h) No further change. This is covered in change set out at 4.4 (a-j), including support needs related to mental health and substance misuse, sometimes in combination with other issues. Provision will need to address the barriers to access that this cohort faces.
(g) Consider the needs of women in contact with the CJS – many who are survivors of DA	(i) No further change: It is beyond the scope of this strategy to address the fundamental problems faced by survivors with no recourse to public funds (NRPF). The Mayor has lobbied the government consistently on these issues and will continue to impress upon the Home Office the need for it to fast track the cases of survivors of domestic abuse.
(h) Highlight that support provision for those with mental needs should be extended to cover those using drugs and alcohol, especially women	(j) No further change: The diversion and support of perpetrators is critical to victims/survivors' safety. However, work to this end sits

(i) The strategy is limited in its ability to improve outcomes for migrant victim-survivors with no recourse to public funds (j) Include early intervention programmes and diversionary housing pathways for perpetrators in the strategy	outside the scope of Part 4 of the 2021 Act. MOPAC currently commissions the following perpetrator-focussed services: Culturally Integrated Family Approach (CIFA): This service is for racialised and minoritised communities, providing 1:1 culturally-informed sessions. The Safe & Together™ London Partnership (S&T): Trains and supports professionals in Children's Social Care, CAFCASS and policing to hold perpetrators to account and challenge them to change their behaviour. Restart: Offers 1:1 support to perpetrators, including housing options to support survivors and children to maintain housing security. Safe and Together training is part of the model. DA Conditional Cautions: MOPAC and MPS will deliver a small-scale, 1-year pilot in 2025 to test the safest and most effective way to administer Conditional Cautions in cases of 'standard-risk' DA before rollout of the Two-Tier Framework is introduced by central government. GPS tagging pilot for non-DA stalkers: This pilot uses GPS tags for non-DA Stalkers on licence (MOPAC operating model) and on community sentences (MoJ/EMS model). It launched on 3rd December. Stalking Threat Assessment Centre (STAC): This multi-agency unit delivers specialised advice, training and consultation to MPS officers, Probation services, NHS mental health services and victims services to improve the overall response to stalking in London. MOPAC commissions the victim advocacy service and supports the unit's strategic direction.
4.5 More clarity on how the Mayor plans to tackle the issue of staff recruitment and retention in the VAWG industry	4.5 No change: The overall commitment to workforce across VAWG provision sits within the VAWG strategy, at the time of writing undergoing a refresh for Spring 2025, with consultation specifically around the cross-cutting challenges that go beyond the Duty's remit. This strategy should be read in conjunction with the VAWG strategy. With regards to DASA, the Mayor has impressed upon the Government the need for longer-term funding for Part 4 duties, a lack of which impacts upon providers' ability to provide sustainable staff provision. DASA funding opportunities, developed through consultation with VAWG providers in 2025-28, can be used to enhance workforce development to benefit and serve victims/survivors in relevant safe accommodation. DASA commissioning developed in collaboration with partners in 2025 and beyond will be informed both by the VAWG strategy refresh and further engagement with providers, in alignment with this strategy's commitment to ... 'A supported and developing VAWG sector' which states that 'Supporting the

	development and resilience of the VAWG workforce is a wider priority within the Mayor's VAWG strategy. For example, for the VAWG sector, specialist training and workforce development may build resilience and capacity which can in turn support recruitment and retention in DASA delivery.
4.6. Grant funding for PIE should be available to specialist VAWG providers of all size	4.6. No change: The strategy commits to the Mayor making future funding available for small, specialist and 'by and for' providers
4.7. Be clearer in outlining the relationship between accommodation and accommodation support, and how funding is allocated to both	4.7. Clarify: This relationship is set out in 'The scope of the Mayor's powers' section. For absolute clarity, a final strategy should reiterate further, in brief, that the Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Homes Programme's capital funding is separate and additional to revenue only funding through the Part 4 Duty revenue (this is an independent Mayoral innovation outside the Duty which itself places no requirement for Authorities to provide buildings or units)
4.8. The strategy should be rooted in a stronger commitment to sustain and stabilise existing specialist services, and shouldn't divert funding away from survivors and expert frontline services by increasing capacity building in larger, well-funded organisations	4.8. Clarify: Mayoral Objective 5 states that 'funding will support the VAWG sector – and those across the DASA system – to develop overall capacity and sustainability, and 'Commissioning and funding approaches will be designed to benefit under-served victims/survivors, and will seek to bolster workforce development and resilience within the VAWG sector specifically.' The strategy already re-commits the Mayor to making funding available for small, specialist and 'by and for' providers, and to doing so through processes that will ensure they are not disadvantaged, relative to larger organisations with a broader remit. The Mayor wants to ensure smaller specialist providers can grow and build, so that more victims/survivors can be reached. Mayoral Objective 3 states that 'funding should focus on bringing existing provision to high and current standards, and developing new, practice-leading provision.' Wording in the narrative could be reviewed to ensure that the focus on sustainable provision, existing provision and on building overall resilience for the VAWG sector is key – alongside the commitment to specialist providers that is clearly set out.
4.9. More clarity on how the strategy connects with wider VAWG strategy and Policing and Crime Plan commitments	4.9. Clarify: Reference to these strategies and their refreshed remits should be made in final DASA strategy. Adding update to the final strategy on timescales for PCP and VAWG refresh would be helpful- refer to example of how strategies interact and note consultation findings are cascaded across for learning, delivery planning and engagement in 2025-28 through DASA
4.11. The strategy should highlight the need for physically and	4.11. Clarify: This is covered in Objective 3 –to achieve 'Services and accommodation that are physically and psychologically safe, of high quality, and use up-to-date and appropriate practice.'

psychologically safe spaces with statutory settings	All support services funded through the Mayor's commissioning that arises from this strategy will need to demonstrate that they ensure the physical and psychological safety of survivors. Furthermore, the executive summary provides covering statements that the Mayor's ambitions apply to safe accommodation services across the board, not only those commissioned under the Part 4 duties. The narrative should be reviewed to reflect the needs assessment findings that all partners across the landscape, such as children's services and health, must play a strengthened part in providing trauma informed responses.
4.12. ' So that barriers faced by victims/survivors in accessing services are reduced ' should be added back in from the 2021 strategy	4.12. Clarify – add this line into priority activity under objective 2.
4.12. Emphasise how we can ensure the affordability of move on accommodation and interrupt the bottleneck 4.13. A commitment to increased funding for move-on accommodation 4.14. Not clear where move-on sits within the strategy, for example, developing coordinated schemes.	4.12. No change: Ensuring the affordability of accommodation is out of scope for the delivery of support in safe accommodation under the Part 4 Duty. The shortage of both safe accommodation for move-on and all accommodation that is affordable to survivors is recognised by the Mayor from the strategy foreword onward as a key obstacle for victims/survivors. The Mayor is committed to increasing the supply of safe accommodation for move-on and is also working to increase the supply of affordable housing through his planning policies and Affordable Homes Programmes. 4.13. No change: Further information on future provision of support will be determined and provided as part of the 2025-28 commissioning approach 4.14. No change: The 2025-28 commissioning approach will in principle, remain outcomes-focused and will seek to avoid being prescriptive about specific approaches to delivery wherever possible. There is little benefit therefore in amending the strategy to specify how the development of move-on schemes should progress. For example, limiting the scope of this in the strategy may limit the scope for a borough or group of boroughs to commission providers according to local needs. For example, the provision of domestic abuse referral pathway coordinators within boroughs can be enhanced, with boroughs working directly with and going into refuges and other safe crisis accommodation, to plan and manage pathways out and identify suitable move-on accommodation.

Theme 5 – Partnership working	GLA and MOPAC response
5.1. Greater distinction between the need for direct support offered in safe accommodation, compared to holistic support and systems change work with housing providers	5.1. Change: While Mayoral objectives in the refreshed strategy are already set out to distinguish between leading direct support and provision and facilitating/convening 'system level' partnership working, it would be helpful to add a further priority activity on relationship building by the GLA with housing stakeholders at operational level, to encourage further engagement and innovation regarding the delivery of the Duty. This would refer to reviewing further how DASA and housing are integrated operationally at GLA and MOPAC level - and encouraging housing partners to take a more active role in DASA activity. This priority area should set out that strategic engagement is intended to work in tandem with other activity at local level, such as boroughs' progress towards DAHA accreditation, which is intended to improve local authority services' ability to support survivors appropriately.
5.2 MOPAC could build Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) programmes for London accommodation organisations, instead of allocating small amounts of money for things that could be achieved through CSR.	5.2. No change: Further information on the future provision of other support, including will be determined and provided as part of the 2025-28 commissioning approach. MOPAC and GLA officers will incorporate these views and suggestions within further strategic engagement on commissioning approach.
5.2. An unaddressed issue is poor practices by housing teams, which hinder small providers by failing to recognise their status as supported housing, impacting DASA funded project delivery	5.2. Clarify: The needs assessment surfaces delivery challenges at local level, of which there are a range, across the DASA landscape. This should be read in conjunction with the strategy. It may be helpful to ensure this is more clearly reflected, in brief, in the narrative paragraphs of the 'Working together to deliver the duty section' alongside reflecting on the strengths of boroughs, providers and partners delivering the Duty. A change is already recommended (4.4) to more explicitly summarise a commitment to addressing the recommendations of the needs assessment.
5.3. Call out the need for LAs and housing providers to work across specialities and geographies, and provide clarity on how disparity of postcode lottery will be addressed	5.3. No change: The Act's requirement that Tier 2 authorities 'co-operate with' the Tier 1 authority does not mean that the Mayor can enforce that boroughs continue to fund existing services, or address the disparity between boroughs' investment in such services. Work cited in the strategy to engage boroughs and housing providers across specialties and geographies, and to address disparities in provision is set out as a priority. It is for the Partnership Board to determine the scope of this work and how it will be progressed. The strategy cites that...The Mayor

	has long argued that a regional approach to delivering DASA is crucial. City Hall holds relationships across the delivery partners involved in the victim/survivor journey and can harness these to align delivery strategically across London.' A specific priority activity relating to making progress on the geography of provision is set out under the Board's remit, including, 'Over the next three years, the Mayor will work with, and learn from, boroughs and a range of sector organisations to map services and build on existing data sets to pinpoint geographical gaps, that will support engagement with boroughs.' GLA and MOPAC officers will ensure the Partnership Board sees this suggestion to address in delivery planning (1.1). Further to this the strategy commits that 'the GLA will ensure regional and pan-London interventions support victims/survivors in ways that would not be possible at a local level; and to work closely with boroughs to do this in the most effective way.'
5.4. Emphasise importance of awareness raising for safe accommodation	5.4. No change: Further information on the future provision of support, including advice and helpline support (this type of support remains in scope under the Duty's national guidance) will be determined and provided as part of the 2025-28 commissioning approach.
5.5. It is unclear on how to navigate limitations to nomination agreements	5.5. No change: It is for the Partnership Board to determine the scope of pan-London work and how it will be progressed. Specific activity to reflect the sharing of best practice, learning and evaluation, and improving data are already set out under priority activity areas. A change is already recommended at Theme 1.1 to set a priority area out on developing a delivery plan through the Partnership Board, 5.1 to reflect operational engagement with housing stakeholders further, and in Theme 7 on refreshing the role and function of the Partnership Board. GLA and MOPAC officers will ensure the Partnership Board is aware of this specific delivery challenge.
5.6. The North London Reciprocal Arrangements used to work very well especially for those with secured housing. Can these arrangements be continued and supported?	5.6. No change: The needs assessment evidences the success and challenges of reciprocal arrangements delivered at pan-London level to date and a specific priority area is already recommended to more explicitly note addressing its recommendations, for clarity (4.4) . Further information on the future provision of support will be determined and provided as part of the 2025-28 commissioning approach.

Theme 6 – Tier 2 authorities	GLA and MOPAC response
6.1. Role of Tier 2 authorities lacks clarity 6.2. Helpful to have clear delineation of responsibility, recommendations to Tier 2 authorities. 6.3. More detail on how MOPAC expects to work with London boroughs, Integrated Care Boards and other statutory agencies to ensure strategic coordinated approach to the Part 4 Duty. 6.4. Helpful to include more information about how the Mayor intends to work with boroughs to deliver on a pan London DA strategy 6.5. Further detail on how the Mayor will provide adequate resource for LAs to sufficiently respond to these gaps within the outlined timeframes	6.1-6.5. Change: It would be helpful to clarify further in the executive summary and 'Scope of the Mayor's Powers' section that London boroughs have a duty to cooperate with the GLA in the exercise of these duties, and are in receipt of new burdens funding in relation to this, yet Part 4 does not give the Mayor a basis for 'enforcing' activity in the strategy. It would be helpful to stress further that ultimately, for the strategy to deliver maximum benefit for victims/survivors of domestic abuse in London, all partners need to work together. The strategy already reflects that '...the Mayor and his Deputy Mayors for Housing and Residential Development, and Policing and Crime, will convene and communicate with leaders across the landscape of housing and VAWG provision, and with wider partners (such as those representing registered housing providers, and health partners) to foster engagement and collaboration.' Beyond this, it is for the Partnership Board to determine the scope of pan-London work and how it will be progressed. Specific activity to reflect the sharing of best practice, learning and evaluation, and improving data are set out in commitments. This can include practice already in the landscape such as the utilisation of floating support officers, training for the local implementation of quality responses to victims/survivors, borough co commissioning with providers. A change is already recommended at Theme 1.1 to set a priority area out on developing an action plan through the Partnership Board, at 5.1 to reflect GLA's operational engagement further, and in Theme 7 on refreshing the Partnership Board. GLA and MOPAC officers will ensure the Partnership Board is aware of these suggestions. As set out in the strategy, future commissioning will also be collaborative with boroughs as key partners in the delivery of the Duty, alongside providers and other agencies involved in support for victims/survivors where safe accommodation is part of the response to addressing domestic abuse. The impending government duty to collaborate is also cited in the strategy and this will further evolve the remit of pathways to strategic collaboration in relation to domestic abuse throughout 2025-28.

6.7. Need further clarity on how the Mayor's office evaluates the effectiveness of local authorities	6.7-6.10: No change: With reference to response 6.1-6.5 above, it is out of scope of the Mayor's powers under the Part 4 Duty to evaluate the effectiveness of, or provide oversight to local boroughs' housing arrangements or performance related to housing provision.
6.8. Mayor's Office need to strengthen its role in providing oversight to local authorities to embed specialist housing advocacy provision across all boroughs	The limited supply of social rented housing is a primary factor that makes it challenging to enable survivors who are social housing tenants to transfer to alternative social rented housing. The Mayor is working to increase the supply of social rented homes through his planning policies and his programmes of investment in affordable housing. Meanwhile, the Partnership Board will seek to identify suitable interventions in the course of its work and GLA and MOPAC officers will ensure that the Board is aware of these comments. However, it is worth noting there the Mayor's Housing Moves schemes already provides a pool of social rented properties for survivors, among other social housing tenants with a pressing need to move, to which housing providers are expected to contribute. The Mayor's remit does not allow him to require providers to make additional homes available, as the law requires that these are allocated primarily through local authorities' allocations schemes for social housing.
6.9. Specific measures to ensure boroughs with significant housing challenges are adequately supported in meeting their obligations.
6.10. Strategy must work with LAs in terms of commissioning and temporary accommodation provision
6.11. More focus on DAHA accreditation should be placed within the strategy	No single measure in the strategy serves as a panacea for the problems that the strategy seeks to address. The strategy's commitment to improving the supply and accessibility of safe accommodation also stands to improve the experience that survivors have when seeking help from housing options services, because it will mean that these services have more and more suitable options to offer survivors. The funding available to implement the duties created by Part 4 can be used to help cover the costs of training and support – including DAHA accreditation which is highlighted as a route to improved system responses - throughout the needs assessment and the strategy

Theme 7 – Refreshing Partnership Board	GLA and MOPAC response
7.1. Review the Partnership Board with a focus on its functions, activities and outcomes.	7.1-7.7. Change: Initial scoping work to refresh the role, function and governance of the DA Partnership Board has already started for 2025, not least through reflections from the Board in pre-consultation engagement and consultation. An additional priority activity focusing explicitly on this review work in 2025 should be inserted. This should reference that the Board will communicate with partners on the delivery plan. This should sit under Mayoral Objective 4 in the final strategy.

strategic collective voice provided by the ERG 7.3. Recommend further investment in the ERG 7.4. Refresh borough Housing attendance 7.5. Don't dilute the Board's VAWG expertise impact by inviting too many partners 7.6. Hold smaller action-oriented groups and sessions more regularly. 7.7. Cascade information to all partners from the Board regularly

Theme 8 – The scope of the duty	GLA and MOPAC response
8.1 Would welcome discussion with the Mayor's office on influencing the scope of the Part 4 Duty to address diverse, intersectional needs	8.1. No change: City Hall would welcome this discussion and the vehicle for this engagement is the Partnership Board, tasked with supporting the Mayor to implement the strategy. This discussion is best placed in delivery planning through the Board (1.1) rather than the Mayoral strategy.
8.2 Support safe accommodation providers in assisting victim transition in and out of temporary accommodation.	8.2-8.6. Clarify: The Mayor does not advocate the use of generic temporary accommodation for victims/survivors. It is a reality that many survivors end up in temporary accommodation and the commitment is a pragmatic one that seeks to ensure that they receive appropriate support. It is publicly recorded in the 2021-24 strategy that as the duty was developed, the Mayor urged the Government to include all accommodation secured by local authorities for homeless households made homeless by domestic abuse within the scope of Part 4 and will continue to do so. A further clarification should be made that the Mayor would seek to encourage mechanisms to safeguard against misuse of any expansion of the current Duty's scope. It is outside the scope of the Mayor's powers to set requirements for the standard of temporary accommodation – this is covered in legislation and guidance on local authorities' responsibilities to homeless households and in voluntary approaches agreed by London local authorities.
8.4. There should be greater prominence of the duty being widened to benefit all victims/survivors, including those in temporary accommodation
8.5 Strongly recommend not progressing widening the scope of the

duty to include temporary accommodation 8.6 Mechanisms must be put in place to safeguard against the potential misuse of the expanded definition of bringing temporary accommodation into the Part 4 Duty
8.7. MHCLG 'bedspace' data categories are too limited to reflect the type of support provided, for example 8.8. Government safe accommodation definitions do not work for disabled victims/survivors. 8.9. MHCLG should collect reporting on quality of victims/survivor experience 8.10. There should be more leniency in reporting timescales- to reflect time spent mobilising support and relationship building with victims/survivors. 8.11. Regard should be given to the interdependency of funding and the impact of multiple funder pressures have on the wider infrastructure.	8.7-8.11: No Change: The work to capture and share continual improvements on MHCLG reporting and advocating on the wider challenges of government funding cycles is ongoing. The GLA and MOPAC actively engage with MHCLG on continually developing and improving their national statutory guidance regarding the implementation of the Duty. The strategy commits to that the Mayor will continue to make the strong case to government the need for adequate, long-term funding to meet Duties under the Act. Refreshing the 'Mayor's Progress' section as recommended at 2.1 should highlight the commitment to this work.

Wider reflections

Wider reflections	GLA and MOPAC response
9.1. The greatest impact on the sustainability of the sector is short term funding.	9.1. No change: The Mayor has, and will continue to make the strong case to government the need for adequate, long-term funding for the GLA and Tier 1 authorities elsewhere to meet their Duties under the Act.

9.2. VAWG-related need and demand is extremely high	9.2. No change: Through his wider VAWG strategy (currently being refreshed), the Mayor recognises the endemic nature of VAWG and its related demand - and encourages everyone in London to play their part in ending the epidemic of violence against women and girls. VAWG related need and demand in the context of domestic abuse support provision under the Part 4 Duty is clearly acknowledged and responded to in this strategy.
9.3. There is limited understanding of survivor's needs related to locations of safe homes
9.4. It is concerning that victims/survivors may need to move long distances outside of London beyond their support networks	9.3, 9.4. No change: The strategy acknowledges and deals with the wider issue that a national housing crisis presents significant challenges to providing the right help at the right time, and points to strategies that support the Mayor's activity in relation to this. The Mayor does not direct local boroughs on their provision of individual housing allocations on a case-by-case basis. Communication between boroughs is vital to determining the provision of local support for individual victims/survivors and all safe accommodation should only accept referrals where survivors can be accommodated safely.

By and for	Specialist ‘by and for’ services are run by and for the communities they serve. ¹
Domestic Abuse Act 2021 ²	In April 2021, the Domestic Abuse Act received Royal Assent. Part 4 ³ of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 (the 2021 Act) includes new duties on tier-one local authorities in England, concerning the provision of support for victims and their children living in relevant safe accommodation.
Domestic abuse safe accommodation (DASA)	MHCLG ⁴ guidance sets out the types of accommodation where support may be provided, under Part 4 of the 2021 Act. Victims may live in various forms of relevant safe accommodation. Privately owned and managed temporary accommodation that is not separate or self-contained, and that has a shared toilet, bathroom or kitchen facilities (such as bed-and-breakfast accommodation), is not considered relevant safe accommodation.
DASA-based support	Part 4 of the 2021 Act places duties on tier-one local authorities to ensure victims of domestic abuse have access to the right accommodation-based support. For example, government guidance sets out that some support is directly provided by staff on site (e.g., within refuges), whereas other support will be provided to victims through a support worker visiting. ⁵

Whole Housing Approach¹⁵

The Whole Housing Approach is an established framework for addressing the housing and safety needs of victim/survivors in a local area. It brings together, under one umbrella, all the main housing tenure types alongside the housing options and support initiatives needed to help people experiencing domestic abuse to either maintain or access safe and stable housing. (For local authorities, this can be an adaptable model with components implemented individually based on the local areas' needs and priorities.)

Foreword

Domestic abuse devastates the lives of thousands of survivors every year, and I remain determined to do everything in my power to tackle it. As Mayor, and as a proud feminist, I have invested £233m in addressing all forms of violence against women and girls (VAWG). Part of our ambition is for every victim and survivor to have access to high-quality tailored support, as well as safe accommodation. This is crucial for those who can't safely remain in their own home, to help them recover from their trauma and look ahead to a more hopeful future.

In 2021, we published our first Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation (DASA) strategy for London.¹⁶ That same year, successful lobbying brought new powers and additional funding to the Domestic Abuse Act.¹⁷ Since then, over 23,500 domestic abuse survivors and their children have received support in safe accommodation in London, many from specialist VAWG organisations rooted in our communities. Through our DASA Homes Programme,¹⁸ we will make available a new supply of specialist homes for domestic abuse survivors. Further grant funding¹⁹ has enabled much-needed improvements in the quality of existing safe accommodation. And we continue to provide London's social housing tenants, affected by domestic abuse, with a pathway to relocate across the city, whilst maintaining stable and affordable housing tenancies.

All this has been achieved in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic and a national cost-of-living crisis that has disproportionately impacted both those affected by abuse and inequality, and the organisations supporting them. Yet there is much more work to do. Delivering safe accommodation-based support is no easy task; and the national housing crisis, felt acutely across the capital, presents significant challenges to providing the right help at the right time.

Over the coming years, we will continue to invest in new services and support for survivors in safe accommodation, including funding longer-term homes, to give those fleeing violence the stability needed to rebuild their lives. Our priorities for the next three years include maintaining a focus on providing more physically and psychologically safe spaces for survivors – spaces that are accessible and reflect the diversity of Londoners. We will tackle persistent systemic challenges to both accessing and delivering services. And a refreshed commissioning approach will provide inclusive funding mechanisms that enable robust, sustainable and accessible provision to flourish.

Through our delivery partners and my Domestic Abuse Partnership Board, we will strengthen strategic collaboration between a diverse range of agencies and organisations to ensure well-resourced, clear and coordinated support for survivors from crisis to recovery. Learning lessons from delivery, building our evidence base and growing the system of partners will be part of this vital work. I am calling on all partners to join me in this effort.

We know pressures on local authority budgets continue to grow, and that the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 does not go far enough. So, alongside the vital support delivered by City Hall and our valued partners across London, we will work with the government and make the case for longer-term, sustainable funding that is sufficient to meet the needs of all survivors, including those with unknown and insecure immigration status.

Providing more good-quality support to survivors of domestic abuse in safe accommodation across our city will support the new government's national mission on safety – at the heart of which lies a commitment to strengthen support for all victims of crime, and tackle the scourge of VAWG.

The support provided in safe accommodation is already saving and changing lives. Through this refreshed strategy, we will further deliver high-quality support for thousands more survivors and their children across our city.

Sadiq Khan, Mayor of London

Executive summary

The GLA, as the tier-one authority in London, has duties under Part 4 of the 2021 Act to support victims/survivors of domestic abuse and their children in relevant safe accommodation. The duties under this act include producing a strategy; commissioning services; and convening a partnership board. The Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government's (MHCLG's) guidance²⁰ sets out the full scope of support that can be provided in relevant safe accommodation under the Part 4 duty. This refreshed strategy for 2025-28 follows on from the Mayor's publication of his first DASA strategy in 2021.

This strategy is informed by an updated pan-London needs assessment, which has been published alongside it; the two should be read in conjunction. To develop this strategy refresh, engagement was undertaken with victims/survivors; agencies involved in tackling domestic abuse; and organisations delivering support. This document sets out the Mayor's priorities for DASA provision in London, with an outline of his role and the role of partners. The Mayor's vision is that all victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including children, can access and be supported by safe accommodation-based services, tailored to their needs. This ambition applies to safe accommodation services across the board, not solely those commissioned under the Part 4 duties. Five refreshed objectives are set out to achieve his vision. These are, in summary, to ensure:

- a clear and coordinated network of support in safe accommodation for all victims/survivors
- accessible and inclusive services that meet the diverse needs of all victims/survivors
- services and accommodation that are physically and psychologically safe, and of high quality; and use up-to-date and appropriate practice
- a DASA system (made up of various organisations such as the VAWG²¹ and housing sectors, and local authorities) that works across specialties and geographies, and is centred on victim/survivor outcomes
- a sustainable and robust sector, funded to best meet victims'/survivors' needs.

This strategy includes a summary of the findings from the latest needs assessment, and highlights of the Mayor's DASA progress to date. A chapter outlining how the duty will be further delivered in 2025-28 sets out refreshed strategic priorities, to be progressed through a delivery plan in 2025-28. The strategy also outlines a refreshed commissioning approach from March 2025 onwards. It is proposed that this will deliver, in phases, a grants programme for specialist services, followed by the recommissioning of further services in close consultation with delivery partners. Priority activities to support the delivery of the Mayor's five objectives have been updated and grouped in a table, identifying who should support and deliver each one. A final chapter points to relevant strategies, government guidance and nationally recognised quality standards. These are for all partners to consider in their work to deliver improved DASA services.

The Domestic Abuse Act 2021 and the scope of the Mayor's powers

Part 4 of the 2021 Act created new duties to support victims/survivors of domestic abuse and their children in safe accommodation in London. These include:

- assessing the need for domestic abuse support in safe accommodation across London
- preparing and publishing a strategy for the provision of this support
- giving effect to the strategy – that is, commissioning the provision of support to meet the identified needs
- monitoring and evaluating the success of the strategy
- convening a Partnership Board to advise on the exercise of the above duties.

The duty comes with revenue funding from MHCLG of circa £20m a year. The initial funding allocation for London for 2025-26 is circa £26.8m, up from the previous year (around £21.6m). While the strategy refers, at points, to wider work that the Mayor has delivered in relation to domestic abuse, and to ambitions beyond the 2021 Act's scope, its focus and priority is on the specific responsibilities set out in the 2021 Act that the Mayor is empowered and resourced to deliver.²² The scope of Part 4 of the 2021 Act is specific and limited to the provision of support to meet the needs of victims/survivors within safe accommodation.

The Part 4 duty and associated funding does not provide for the delivery of accommodation itself. There is no power or funding for the delivery of any capital projects, bedspaces or costs related to rent or leases associated with accommodation for survivors and their children. The Mayor's Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Homes Programme,²³ launched in March 2024, provides capital funding separate and additional to revenue funding through the Part 4 duty. This is one way in which the Mayor has undertaken independent innovation outside the duty, which itself places no requirement for boroughs to provide buildings or units.

²² There are areas of guidance and legislation, beyond the scope of the duty, that inform the approach of support for victims/survivors of domestic abuse. These should be considered alongside the duty. The statutory framework around homelessness and changes to priority need are addressed in other parts of the 2021 Act. The Mayor's wider strategies – primarily London's Housing Strategy, the PCP, and the VAWG Strategy – are also relevant to his work on DASA.

Part 4 funding is solely to deliver support for survivors and their children who reside in 'relevant safe accommodation'. Further, it does not provide for other types of support for victims/survivors (e.g., prevention and other support outside of safe accommodation). It has some additional, specific limitations around support within some forms of accommodation, such as bed-and-breakfast accommodation. MHCLG categorises and defines relevant forms of safe accommodation in their national guidance, alongside the types of support that can be offered in relevant safe accommodation under the Part 4 duty. MHCLG's statutory guidance ('Delivery of support to victims of domestic abuse in safe accommodation services') can be read online.²⁴

Tier-two local authorities (in London, these are the local borough councils) have a 'duty to cooperate' with requests from tier-one authorities (in London, the GLA) in the exercise of their Part 4 duties.²⁵ They continue to receive direct new burdens funding from MHCLG for this purpose. The Part 4 duty does not give the Mayor, or the tier-one authority, a mandate to enforce local activity in relation to the duty more widely.

The Mayor's progress since 2021

Key achievements

Since 2021, the Mayor has commissioned services that have enhanced and complemented those already funded and commissioned. Over £54m worth of new support across London has already been commissioned through a range of services, supporting more than 23,500 victims/survivors.

These services meet gaps in provision and emerging needs of victims/survivors. Mayoral-commissioned services offer a wide range of support to victims/survivors including (but not limited to) housing-related support, advocacy, counselling and specialist support for children. Support for victims/survivors is also provided on broader issues, such as safeguarding, access to benefits, employment and developing new life skills. This support is reported by victims/survivors as essential in allowing them to move away from abuse and become more independent. Victims/survivors also reported that the emotional support they received helped their confidence and empowered them to rebuild their lives.

One victim/survivor supported by a DASA-funded service reported within the 2024 needs assessment that:

“Being able to meet with [staff member] once a week has made me feel that someone is on my side, that someone believes me and will offer real tangible support ... Being able to receive support has been life-changing. I have never had this before and I feel less alone.”

The Mayor's pioneering approach has supported grassroots organisations and specialist 'by and for' providers, alongside larger voluntary-sector organisations and London boroughs. This has maximised services that reach minoritised and marginalised groups, including those experiencing racism and other forms of discrimination. Key achievements include delivering 81 new and enhanced services in 2022-24, through an inclusive framework. This work includes the following:

- over 50 per cent of these new and enhanced services provide specialist services for victims/survivors from a minoritised group – leading England on providing proportionate specialist provision for Black and minoritised survivors²⁶

²⁶ DLUHC, Annual progress report from the Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation National Expert Steering Group 2022 to 2023, February 2024

- over a third of funding has been distributed to grassroots ‘led by and for’ organisations
- the first provision of emergency accommodation for male victims/survivors of domestic abuse in London
- the UK’s first trans and non-binary-led ‘by and for’ refuge provision.

Further to this best practice being modelled in London, the National Expert Steering Group on safe accommodation provision, chaired by MHCLG, has recommended in its 2024 Annual Report²⁷ that local authorities across England review their commissioning processes to ensure they champion smaller, specialist providers. A national working group has formed to spread key principles taken within the Mayor’s commissioning across England. In London, the Mayor’s Office for Policing and Crime (MOPAC) has progressed regular collaboration with a network of tier-one authorities across England to share good practice, including a continued focus on engaging with the government on their national monitoring and delivery of the duty.

For further reading, MHCLG also provides full data tables²⁸ on the breakdown of how all victims/survivors are supported in safe accommodation by region, alongside further national summary data, including comparison data²⁹ on the national duty and its performance. Further information on the delivery mechanisms and funding of support undertaken in 2021-24 can be found on the City Hall website.³⁰

Beyond provision

Conferring Part 4 funding to the GLA has enabled the Mayor to combine it with wider housing funding streams. Capital funding of up to £8.5m from the Affordable Homes Programme 2021-26 has been paired with up to £1.1m revenue funding from the Part 4 duty to launch the DASA Homes Programme.³¹ This provides the funding to create new and improved physically and psychologically safe accommodation – especially for under-served groups.³² This has encouraged partnership working and joint bids from across the VAWG and housing sector.

Through housing mobility schemes, the Mayor has ensured social housing tenants affected by domestic abuse can relocate, whilst maintaining their tenancy rights. This means victims/survivors accessing a social tenancy in a safer borough for their circumstances, through schemes that work at a pan-London level to secure collaboration between housing providers to facilitate these moves.

Learning from 2021-24

Alongside the successes of the first phase of DASA delivery, as would be expected, there were a range of challenges. The 2024 needs assessment explores these in detail and should be read in conjunction with this strategy.

The volume of victims/survivors supported in safe accommodation since 2021 through the duty is a landmark achievement. However, we are keen to identify additional benefits of the programme; and to share these with partners. This is a key priority for 2025-28, as it allows us better monitor progress and identify gaps that show where we can more effectively work with partners. This is especially critical where victims'/survivors' needs identified in the needs assessment remain underserved and where building on partnerships across London will require a redoubling of our efforts in 2025-28.

A commitment to address the 2024 needs assessment recommendations is set out in this strategy. Further to this, a delivery plan overseen by a refreshed Partnership Board will drive forward and track the progress of all the commitments made in this strategy in the next three years. Learnings from across funding and delivery in 2021-24, including on the programme's funding Framework and the Pan-London Housing Reciprocal, will be taken forward in the next phase. Ways to improve City Hall's data capture and use will also be a key focus of a delivery plan in 2025-28.

Case study 1: DASA service

One DASA-funded service, Latin American Women's Aid (LAWA), runs Europe's only refuges by and for Latin American women and children. LAWA offers holistic and intersectional services, providing victims/survivors support to recover from abuse and live empowered lives. While this service is run by and for Latin American and Black and minoritised women, the service welcomes women from any cultural context, ethnicity, social class or religion, and is LGBTQI+ inclusive.

LAWA³³ is part of the OYA membership consortium of organisations, led by and for members of the Black and minoritised communities, working to end VAWG by delivering frontline, capacity-building and sustainability-support services across London. Collectively, the consortium manages 123 refuge bedspaces. LAWA is the consortium's lead partner for the DASA programme, working closely alongside the Ashiana Network,³⁴ Asha Projects³⁵

³⁵ Asha Projects — FOR HER

and London Black Women's Project.³⁶ Through LAWA's services, victims/survivors of domestic abuse can reach safety through specialist safe accommodation and comprehensive support plans. This includes access to specialist advice on issues such as domestic abuse awareness and safety planning; housing and accommodation advice and advocacy; immigration; family law and welfare benefits advice; careers and employment; skills development; and resettlement within local communities.

Children are supported by family support workers, and weekly activity sessions are delivered within the refuge spaces. There is a focus on recovery of wellbeing and rebuilding relationships between children and their parent to address the impact of violence, abuse and trauma. Adult and child victims/survivors are offered free, tailored counselling in their own languages. This ensures culturally appropriate therapeutic support that can improve overall health and overall wellbeing, alongside the practical advice and support offered in safe accommodation.

Case study 2: Safe Accommodation Fund

The Safe Accommodation Fund was developed by the Mayor to ensure that survivors of domestic abuse and their children can access physically and psychologically safe spaces to recover from abuse. Psychologically informed services are designed and delivered in a way that considers the emotional and psychological needs of the individuals using and working in them.

The Safe Accommodation Fund was open to applicants who focused on improving the physical environment and social spaces of existing safe accommodation in London. This includes spaces that:

- recognise the impact of the environment on wellbeing and behaviour – such as noise, light, comfort, temperature, fabrics, colours and aesthetics
- are safe and inviting for victims/survivors, where the internal building is in a good state of repair, looks cared for and is fit for purpose
- have fixtures and fittings that meet the needs of victims/survivors their children.

This programme was established to recognise that the physical and psychological quality of safe accommodation has an impact on the recovery of victims/survivors and their children. Lack of high-quality safe accommodation provision can be a barrier for survivors leaving an abusive relationship, and can be a reason to return to the perpetrator.

Under this programme, Havering Women's Aid received £98,575 over one year towards the costs of refurbishing and redecorating seven flats within one of their refuges. The works included renovating living spaces and the communal area; and upgrading facilities within the flats, such as installing more efficient boilers. These significant improvements enhanced the residents' comfort, and contributed to reducing energy consumption and promoting sustainability.

Havering Women's Aid reported that the grant has led to a noticeable improvement in the environment, with a clear boost in staff morale. Staff were proud and confident when showing new families to their rooms. Before, rooms looked tired and worn out – now they look light, fresh and modern. Staff have reflected that, although showing someone into the refuge who has left their own home is always going to be difficult, with new furnishings and decoration staff no longer felt uncomfortable when showing the facilities. Visitors were also impressed by the standard of living provided. Other agencies are keen to encourage victims/survivors to access this refuge, as they feel that the space is modern, clean and homely.

Domestic abuse in London: A summary of demand and need from the 2024 London needs assessment

The 2024 London needs assessment is published alongside this strategy and should be read in conjunction with it. The updated needs assessment illustrates the demand for support across London, and the increased complexity of victims'/survivors' needs since the previous assessment.³⁷ It highlights the scale of challenges for victims/survivors, and for all providers working across the DASA landscape in 2025-28.

Demand for safe accommodation in London

While London's rates of domestic abuse crime, recorded by the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS), remain lower than most comparable forces, the assessment found that they rose by 8.1 per cent between 2019 and 2023.³⁸ In terms of overall volume, London has significantly higher levels of domestic abuse than most comparable forces, but this is proportionate to the population of the capital.³⁹

Police-recorded crime provides only a partial picture of reported and recorded domestic abuse in London. The Office for National Statistics (ONS) report, Domestic Abuse during the COVID-19 Pandemic (2020),⁴⁰ gives related reasons for the national trend of more police-recorded crimes concerning domestic abuse. These are that some of this increase may be driven, in part, by police improvements in offence-recording practices, and an increase in domestic abuse-related crimes coming to the attention of the police. The shift could also indicate greater willingness of victims to come forward and report domestic abuse.

Service providers also report that the volume and degree of need for both housing and DASA-based support have increased in recent years. MHCLG's Support in Safe Accommodation monitoring data from 2022-23⁴¹ shows that London experiences high pressure to meet demand for all available types of safe accommodation. In London, there

were six referrals for each available bedspace of any type.⁴² (In the South East, there were three such referrals, and in the North West there were two).

Accommodation and services commissioned by MOPAC and the GLA do not entirely meet demand. This is primarily due to capacity constraints and services being unable to meet the individual needs of all victims/survivors. This is illustrated further through the DASA programme's data collection. The Mayor's services reported 11,472 referrals in 2022-23, 80 per cent of which resulted in support. Of those households that were unsuccessful in their referral, 29 per cent were due to service capacity constraints; 26 per cent were because the victims/survivors had no recourse to public funds; and 17 per cent were because the victims/survivors had acute mental health support needs that could not be adequately met within the refuge provision available.

The needs assessment found that, since 2020-21, the number of households in London owed a prevention or relief duty from homelessness as a result of domestic abuse has increased by 15 per cent. Over the past three years, the London-wide increase in households seeking homelessness relief has outpaced the increase in those seeking homelessness prevention. This suggests that the needs of those requesting housing support due to domestic abuse are increasingly acute by the time they come to the attention of local authorities. Demand for housing support among survivors that are rough sleeping has also risen since the COVID-19 pandemic.⁴³

⁴³ MHCLG, Homelessness statistics, updated August 2024

Characteristics of victims/survivors seeking support

Gender

The Crime Survey for England and Wales (CSEW) found that in the year ending March 2022, an estimated 1.7m women and 699,000 men experienced domestic abuse.⁴⁴ In London, the 2024 needs assessment found that women are overwhelmingly more likely to require and receive support from domestic abuse services. Those identifying as female accounted for 80 per cent of main housing applicants owed a duty and safe accommodation support; and 97 per cent of victims/survivors accessing domestic abuse services, as recorded by Women's Aid On Track⁴⁵ data.

Nearly half of all women supported by Women's Aid in 2022-23 in London had children. 47 per cent of women placed in refuges in 2022-23 had children, which is a decrease from 56 per cent in 2019-20. The needs assessment also acknowledged that the needs of children are not systematically captured; and qualitatively identified the challenges around supporting some women with children in safe accommodation (e.g., accommodating older male children and multiple children). The needs assessment also found that 43 per cent of victims/survivors seeking housing support from their local authority when they are at risk of homelessness (or are already homeless) because of domestic abuse were single female parents. Couples with children (3 per cent) and single male parents (2 per cent) comprised a further 5 per cent.

Domestic abuse happens to both female and male victims/survivors.⁴⁶ Although the needs assessment found that wider support services in London have increasingly offered support to men (up from 21 per cent of services in 2016 to 28 per cent in 2023), it also found a continued gap in understanding around the need for male victims/survivors and the provision of services. Of the male victims/survivors captured in the 2024 needs assessment, a substantial proportion are rough sleeping. The London 2023 Women's Rough Sleeping Census⁴⁷ also reflects further that women's experiences of rough sleeping tend to be hidden; transient and intermittent; and less likely to be counted.

⁴⁷ Solace Women's Aid, London Women's Rough Sleeping Census 2023, May 2024

Age

The CSEW for the year ending March 2023 showed that a significantly higher proportion of people aged 16-19 experienced any domestic abuse, compared with those aged 45 to 54, and those aged 60 and over. For those aged 75 and over, the percentage of victims was significantly lower than all other age groups (1.4 per cent).⁴⁸

The London needs assessment found that victims/survivors are disproportionately likely to be between their mid-20s and mid-30s, compared to the general London population. Victims/survivors between their mid-30s and mid-40s also have a high level of need compared to the general London population, mirroring the age distribution of those seeking homeless duties.

In the needs assessment, 1,043 victims/survivors supported by Mayoral-commissioned services in London in 2022-23 were under 25. It also found that in 2022-23, 88 women (20 per cent) not placed in refuges through Women's Aid On Track were under 18, suggesting a gap in provision.

There is a gap in knowledge and provision across London for older victims/survivors, with those aged 65 and over underrepresented in the data. A 2020 report by Age UK,⁴⁹ at national level, estimates around 180,000 women and 98,000 men aged 60 to 74 were victim/survivors of domestic abuse in England and Wales in 2018-19. Of the 10,600 victims/survivors in London that received support via Mayoral-commissioned services in 2022-23, 72 victims/survivors over the age of 65 were supported by Mayoral-commissioned services (less than 1 per cent).

Sexual orientation and gender identity

The needs assessment identified that 11 per cent of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral-commissioned services were LGBTQI+. Those identifying as LGBTQI+ accounted for 4 per cent of victims/survivors who, according to records, were referred for support through Women's Aid On Track services. The needs assessment cited that LGBTQI+ people are at higher risk of experiencing homelessness, poor mental health, and substance use issues. The ways these issues intersect and are experienced by LGBTQI+ victims/survivors will be unique to their community.

While the needs assessment quantitative data indicates no specific gaps in need for LGBTQI+ victims/survivors, the London Queer Housing Coalition (2024) identifies that queer community housing organisations support over 2250 people in London each year.⁵⁰ Galop (2023)⁵¹ research also indicates that nationally, around six in 10 (61 per cent)

LGBTQI+ survivors do not seek support from services following abuse, therefore need should not be assumed to be met. Practitioners in the 2024 needs assessment also noted a high level of unmet demand, and added that support should reflect the different contexts in which individual LGBTQI+ victims/survivors experience abuse. LGBTQI+ 'by and for' providers in the needs assessment added qualitatively that their service users tend to be younger, and are predominantly male.

While MOPAC has commissioned refuge accommodation⁵² for trans and non-binary victims/survivors, practitioners also reported that there are gaps in specific provision for trans and non-binary people. More widely, the London Queer Housing Coalition Manifesto (2024) notes that, in the 2021 Census 0.9 per cent of Londoners reported that they have a gender identity different from their sex registered at birth; this is estimated to be at least 80,100 people. Galop (2023)⁵³ research indicated that trans victims/survivors reported high levels of concern about being mistreated by services, or that services may not understand their identities.

Ethnicity

London is the most ethnically diverse region in England and Wales, with 46.2 per cent of Londoners identifying through the 2021 Census as Asian, Black, mixed or 'other'.⁵⁴ Black and minoritised groups of victims/survivors also make up just under half of those recorded by the needs assessment as requiring safe accommodation.

In the needs assessment, of 12,632 victims/survivors recorded as accessing domestic abuse services by Women's Aid On Track data system in 2022-23, 53 per cent were from Black, Asian and minority ethnic backgrounds. The 2024 needs assessment did not identify significant gaps in the proportion of provision for any one Black or minoritised group of victims/survivors; however, it acknowledged a lack of disaggregated data to fully identify the scope and scale of any specific gaps.

The wider evidence base also shows that Black and minoritised individuals are disproportionately affected by domestic abuse, compared to their White counterparts.⁵⁵ Black and minoritised victims/survivors also face additional barriers at all stages to seeking support and accessing safe accommodation. Therefore, the need and demand for services from Black and minoritised victims/survivors is likely to be higher than reported; it should not be assumed that demand is proportionately met.

London holds the largest proportion of non-UK passport holders (one in five).⁵⁶ There is considerable known demand for support for victims/survivors with an unknown or insecure immigration status, with 4 per cent of all victims/survivors recorded through Women's Aid On Track defined as having no recourse to public funds. According to the needs assessment's Women's Aid data, the proportion of refuge vacancies available to women defined as having no recourse to public funds has slightly increased to 9 per cent in 2022-23, from 3 per cent in 2016-17. However, it was also found that, where safe accommodation-based support services were unable to meet the needs of victims/survivors, in 26 per cent of cases this was because the victims/survivors had no recourse to public funds.

Disability

Of those supported by the Mayor's DASA services, 16 per cent identified as disabled. The needs assessment found that, for disabled victims/survivors, there remain several barriers preventing access to safe accommodation support. It found that underreporting may also be a factor for disabled victims/survivors if their disabilities are not declared or not recorded – for example, 'hidden' disabilities.

The qualitative data indicates that disabled victims/survivors as defined by the Equality Act 2010 may have specific needs; but according to practitioners, these are not fully met and more specialist commissioning should be considered. For example, qualitatively, practitioners reported that mainstream refuge provision can be physically inaccessible to some disabled victims/survivors; and that staff may not have the relevant skills and expertise to support individuals' needs. Additionally, 4 per cent of women not placed in refuges through Women's Aid had a physical disability – this also indicates unmet needs.

The needs assessment found that demand for mental health support is increasing. Where services were unable to support victims/survivors with their needs, 17 per cent of cases were due to the mental health support required (definitions of mental health captured in the needs assessment are wide-ranging). In 2022-23, among victims/survivors rough sleeping in London, 67 per cent had a mental health need; in the same year 40 per cent of victims/survivors requesting support through On Track services had mental health support needs. The proportion of women who have been placed in refuges through Women's Aid, and have a mental health need, has increased by 48 per cent from 2019.

Religion or belief

act as a barrier to accessing safe accommodation-based services. Practitioners identified that specialist provision that addresses these barriers with tailored support is valued.

Multiple, intersecting disadvantages

Lankelly Chase⁵⁷ estimates there are 336,000 individuals in England that face intersecting homelessness, mental ill health, substance misuse and violence/abuse. 17,000 people experience interrelated homelessness, substance misuse, mental ill health and violence/abuse at any one time and 70 per cent of these are women.

The needs assessment for London reports an increasing demand for intensive, specialist and longer-lasting support for victims/survivors experiencing multiple and intersecting inequalities.⁵⁸ This may include poor mental and physical health; substance use; experiencing different types of violence and abuse; and involvement with the criminal justice system. These experiences create compounding barriers to accessing and receiving support in 'mainstream' safe accommodation.

In addition to this data, the needs assessment identified that in 2022-23, 4 per cent of victims/survivors supported through Mayoral-commissioned services had a drug support need; and that four households were recorded as unable to be supported by Mayoral-commissioned services due to drug support needs, indicating a gap in appropriate provision. However, the lack of data means it is unclear to what extent there has been an increase across London regarding this specifically.

The Mayor's vision and five objectives

The Mayor's vision is that all victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including children, can access and be supported by safe accommodation-based services, tailored to their needs. This will ensure survivors' physical and psychological safety and recovery from the impact of domestic abuse; and enable them to rebuild and move on with their lives. This vision is underpinned by the following objectives.

A clear and coordinated network of support in safe accommodation for all victims/survivors

This includes delivery of a clear and coordinated pan-London network of support through all stages of a survivor's journey: from early intervention, during crisis, to safety, stability and independence. It also includes supporting victims/survivors to safely remain in their own homes, or to return if and when it is safe to do so; and ensuring there is a sufficient supply of appropriate crisis, move-on, second-stage and resettlement accommodation.

Accessible and inclusive services that meet the diverse needs of all victims/survivors

All service providers involved in the delivery of DASA should work on principles of inclusion to serve individual needs, including those that are related to protected characteristics. Services should meet the cultural, language and religious needs of victims/survivors; and serve those facing multiple disadvantages, and non-UK nationals with insecure or unknown immigration status.

Services and accommodation that are physically and psychologically safe, and of high quality; and use up-to-date and appropriate practice

Safe spaces will ensure victims/survivors and their children can recover safely from abuse supported by services rooted in rights-based, trauma-informed and gender-informed approaches. Accommodation should: be designed to meet the needs of victims/survivors; be self-contained (where appropriate); and reflect victims'/survivors' needs in terms of choice, independence and dignity. Funding should focus on bringing existing provision to high and current standards, and developing new, practice-leading provision.

A DASA system that works across specialties and geographies, centred on victims'/survivors' outcomes

Victims/survivors must not be subject to a postcode lottery when it comes to accessing safe accommodation and receiving high-quality support in their locality, or any part of London that they might move to for their safety. Partnership working across agencies and across borough boundaries is essential to this objective, as it is central to how support is funded, delivered and accessed. Partnership and multi-agency working involves organisations that are funded through the Part 4 duty, as well as those that are not. This means engaging a wide range of partners to invest in creative and joined-up ways of working that focus on achieving outcomes for victims/survivors. Widespread, effective partnership working is key to ensuring that, across the capital, victims/survivors have the same high quality of provision available to them, and support for their needs across localities.

A sustainable and robust sector, funded to best meet victims'/survivors' needs

City Hall will take a phased approach to commissioning in 2025-28 that takes a flexible, evidence-led approach to meeting victims'/survivors' needs. More widely, the approach will consider the value provided by all parts of the DASA system. This system includes smaller and/or specialist VAWG providers, and 'by and for' providers, alongside London boroughs, registered providers of social housing and other partners. Commissioning and funding approaches will be designed to benefit under-served victims/survivors; and will seek to bolster workforce development and resilience within the VAWG sector specifically. Funding will support the VAWG sector – and those across the DASA system – to develop overall capacity and sustainability, with the aim of supporting the rich diversity of organisations in the sector.

How the Mayor will deliver the duty in 2025-28

This section sets out activity that will be delivered at a London level by City Hall, working with delivery partners. It draws on learning from the first few years of the programme; the needs assessment; and feedback from stakeholders including delivery partners and victims/survivors. The Mayor's vision and objectives guide the work of DASA over this strategy term, which will be overseen through a delivery plan led by the Partnership Board in 2028-28. This helps to ensure that the Mayor's vision and priority activity, as set out in the strategy, is delivered in an effective, transparent and inclusive way that provides value for money for Londoners.

Alignment with wider strategies

Providing quality support to victims/survivors of domestic abuse in safe accommodation across London, in the coming years, will play a key role in meeting the government's wider mission on safety – of which strengthening support for all victims and tackling VAWG is a critical part.⁵⁹ The London-wide approach to delivering this duty also helps to maximise its alignment with the impact of wider Mayoral strategies, funding and powers.

Through his Housing Strategy,⁶⁰ the Mayor is already working to address housing challenges that may also pose barriers to victims/survivors in London. The Mayor's VAWG Strategy⁶¹ takes a public health⁶² approach to tackling VAWG, which this strategy aligns with. The Police and Crime Plan (PCP) tackles key challenges in reducing violence and exploitation, supporting victims, improving the justice system, and increasing trust and confidence in the MPS. It is currently being refreshed, and will continue to play a vital part in reducing the prevalence and impact of domestic abuse in 2025-28.

This DASA strategy supports the aims and objectives of these wider strategies, to help ensure that the holistic and diverse needs of all Londoners can be met. For example, alignment with the VAWG strategy's preventative approach in the context of safe accommodation support, can look like adopting a Whole Housing Approach.⁶³ This aims to coordinate and create earlier identification and intervention for domestic abuse across local systems. Further key VAWG strategy principles are also mirrored – such as an emphasis on partnership working, and on support for the growth of a skilled and resilient VAWG workforce to deliver on the Mayor's aims.

The Mayor will publish his refreshed PCP in March 2025, followed by a refreshed VAWG strategy in spring 2025. The consultation findings from these will inform and support DASA activity in 2025-28.

Partnership working by City Hall

Preventative, crisis, move-on, second-stage and resettlement support are all critical in meeting victims'/survivors' needs. The Mayor's vision, objectives and funding continue to reflect this. Critically, delivering lasting outcomes for victims/survivors means tackling persistent systemic challenges for London that are also reflected across the national DASA landscape.⁶⁴ The Mayor, the Deputy Mayor for Housing and Residential Development, and the Deputy Mayor for Policing and Crime will convene and communicate with leaders across the landscape of housing and VAWG provision, and with wider partners (such as those representing registered housing providers,⁶⁵ and health partners) to foster engagement and collaboration.

The Mayor has long argued that a regional approach to delivering DASA is crucial. City Hall holds relationships across the delivery partners involved in the victim/survivor journey, and can harness these to align delivery strategically across London – working to address the postcode lottery that victims/survivors currently experience when accessing DASA services. The Mayor will continue to use his reach and powers to convene organisations via the Domestic Abuse Partnership Board, which brings together agencies that are key to effective DASA delivery. This includes London boroughs; the health sector; criminal justice partners; organisations representing victims/survivors and their children; and housing providers. This approach creates the opportunity to address complex needs and issues on a London-wide level, where it may be more difficult to do so locally.

City Hall will work with the Partnership Board to build on learnings from 2021-24; improve how the impact of the duty's funding is measured across London; and deepen our understanding of victims'/survivors' needs. This will include promoting practice that works; exploring how to respond to victim/survivor groups that may be under-served across the city; and exploring where regional and pan-London interventions could have the most impact for victims/survivors.

This strategy sets out the Mayor's intention to review and refresh his Domestic Abuse Partnership Board in a way that will further support partners to align activities across their respective agencies – and, in this way, to maximise collaboration, delivery and outcomes for London in this space. Wider engagement activity will also be more explicitly part of the delivery plan's progress measures in 2025-28. Alongside the work of the Mayor and his deputies, this includes refreshing and expanding our engagement in a targeted way at operational level, with a range of registered housing providers, health partners and others that are fundamental to improving victim/survivor outcomes.

The Mayor's strategy will also continue to adapt and respond to changing national policy in 2025-28. A national evaluation of the duty is being undertaken by MHCLG,⁶⁶ from which learnings will be taken forward. The government's new Victims and Prisoners Act⁶⁷ will also place a joint statutory duty on all Police and Crime Commissioners, Integrated Care Boards and local authorities to work together when commissioning victim's support – including domestic abuse – so that they can be strategically coordinated and targeted where victims/survivors need them.

Commissioning approach for 2025-28

The current DASA funding framework is due to expire on 31 March 2025; City Hall will refresh the commissioning approach and funding mechanisms for March 2025 onwards. This will require taking a phased approach to commissioning processes, to enable continued stability to providers delivering safe accommodation-based support. Adopting a phased approach allows for considered strategic engagement with partners throughout 2025, to inform multiple mechanisms of new commissioning that meet the needs of victims/survivors.

Informed by further strategic engagement and our Domestic Abuse Partnership Board, this phased approach will begin with a grants programme for specialist provision, launching in spring 2025. Further in-depth strategic engagement will be undertaken from March 2025 onwards, to collaboratively develop commissioning mechanisms for new services that will launch in 2027-28.

Working with central government in 2025-28

The Part 4 duty could be developed further by working in partnership with the government, which is responsible for: setting the parameters for the duty; and providing funding and guidance for tier-one authorities in England. The Mayor recognises that short-term funding cycles affect services' ability to demonstrate transformative impact; and that this is felt acutely by smaller organisations. He will raise MHCLG's awareness of this. The duty should also be widened to benefit all victims/survivors, including those in temporary accommodation, and those with unknown and insecure immigration status. The statutory guidance⁶⁸ for the Part 4 duty already states that tier-one authorities have a duty to:

“ensure sufficient appropriate support is available within relevant safe accommodation to meet the needs of all victims such as... migrant [victims/survivors], including [victims/survivors] having insecure immigration status”.⁶⁹

However, the Mayor recognises that there is work to be done in partnership with the government to ensure that the messaging and language around this is clear for providers and stakeholders. The Mayor is committed to working with partners to ensure that victims/survivors – including migrant victims, those from minority ethnic backgrounds, and other minoritised groups – can access help without fear, with safe and informal spaces for those who need to seek support.

It is also a reality that across the country, and in London, many victims/survivors are placed in temporary accommodation to respond to their immediate housing need. This is why the Mayor has long urged central government to include, within the scope of the Part 4 duty, all accommodation secured by local authorities for victims/survivors made homeless by domestic abuse – and will continue to do so. This is not to advocate for the use of temporary accommodation for victims/survivors of domestic abuse. This commitment is a pragmatic one, that seeks to ensure that all victims/survivors who need it can receive appropriate support, while mechanisms and safeguards against misuse of any expansion of the current duty's scope remain critical.

The Mayor's continued commitment to delivering more safe accommodation for all victims/survivors presses forward over 2025-28 and beyond. He will work constructively with the government to secure longer-term, sustainable funding that is sufficient in scale; and to ensure that the scope of the duty works for all Londoners.

Working together in 2025-28

Delivery challenges across the landscape of DASA provision remain, and there is much work to do to support victims/survivors in London more effectively across all involved systems and partners. This strategy cannot be effectively delivered by the GLA, MOPAC and the Partnership Board alone. The Mayor is calling on all partners to work collaboratively to deliver the duty – including the full range of public-sector partners across health, children’s services and the criminal justice system. Alongside the work of City Hall, regional and local collaboration is critical, particularly where there are increased victim/survivor needs and gaps in delivery that are surfaced by the updated needs assessment.

Local insight and the strength of the public sector across London

London’s boroughs harbour energy, commitment and passion in their support for victims/survivors. Despite seismic challenges in recent years, the evidence⁷⁰ shows that investment by boroughs through this duty’s additional funding is already making a difference. It is doing so by using strategic and partnership levers; and targeting new and enhanced service delivery.⁷¹

Boroughs and their local partners hold key strategic levers through which VAWG expertise can be channelled. They have insight and reach within their localities.⁷² The starting points, challenges and opportunities for improving safe accommodation-based support will be unique to each local authority system. Housing partners and others, such as children’s services and health partners, often first encounter victims/survivors when they are in urgent crisis, or seeking help and advice. Their responses are vital to preventing the escalation of further need and risk relating to domestic abuse. Responding to underserved groups and maximising lasting impact will require all key agencies and organisations to play their part. This can be through a range of approaches – whether investing in work to stabilise flows of need, strengthening existing delivery or undertaking new innovations. Domestic Abuse Housing Alliance (DAHA) accreditation and a Whole Housing Approach remain key mechanisms that all partners, including boroughs, should consider as a way to ensure that victims/survivors receive quality support as early as possible.⁷³

The VAWG sector, the wider VCS, and housing delivery partners

Providing effective DASA provision means listening closely to, and working with, the expertise of the VAWG sector; and protecting the value that specialist, grassroots and ‘by and for’ providers bring to supporting London’s diversity of victims/survivors. The VAWG sector, the wider VCS and housing partners (from large housing associations to small housing services providers) are all critical to ensuring the safety of victims/survivors.

The cumulative impact of the COVID-19 pandemic⁷⁴ and the cost-of-living crisis⁷⁵ has disproportionately impacted victims/survivors of domestic abuse and placed significant strain on organisations that support them.⁷⁶ The VAWG sector and other VCS organisations are seeking to meet the increasingly complex needs of victims/survivors.⁷⁷ In referring to complex needs, we are acknowledging that some victims/survivors experience multiple disadvantages, over and above being victims/survivors of domestic abuse. This can refer to those with disabilities, mental health problems and/or drug/alcohol dependency; and those facing homelessness.⁷⁸ At the same time, the housing sector is facing unprecedented demands and an increasingly challenging operating environment.

In 2025-28, providers can use the Mayor’s funding to foster resilience to a range of challenging delivery problems, strengthen their existing services; and build essential capacity and strategic infrastructure. We understand that, for many, building on sustainable and resilient existing service provision is as essential as launching new provision. Building on existing VAWG partnerships, and working constructively with statutory partners within wider multi-agency partnerships, will help to bring VAWG expertise to non-specialist service delivery. This can be key to closing gaps in DASA delivery across London, through survivor-led, trauma-informed, gender-responsive, intersectional and anti-racist approaches. Similarly, work with other specialists across housing and rough sleeping will bring benefits to ensuring a joined-up experience for victims/survivors, and maximise the impact of DASA delivery in London.

Priority activity for City Hall in 2025-28

⁸⁰ DAHA, Whole Housing Toolkit

Priority activity for the Mayor of London

The needs assessment outlines that unmet mental health and other more acute needs can create multiple disadvantages resulting in compounded barriers for some victims/survivors in accessing domestic abuse support. The Mayor will use his convening powers to bring together partners to focus on these unmet needs. He will bring in specialist partners to the DASA Partnership Board to ensure they are part of the consultation around new DASA commissioning. He will also encourage multi-agency partnership bids by facilitating conversations between boroughs, health providers and specialists, for example around mental health and substance misuse, to help to develop services that meet all victim/survivor needs.

The Mayor will also work with key partners at national and London-wide levels (such as the Domestic Abuse Commissioner and London Councils), to learn from the wider evidence base on children experiencing domestic abuse. The Mayor will work to integrate these national learnings combined with London DASA delivery, to date, into his commissioning processes. Work will also be undertaken with partners to review how they might improve data collection on children's experiences.

The Mayor will particularly focus on London's developing body of practice through his Partnership Board. He will also maximise the Board's reach by engaging in closer working relationships with voluntary, therapeutic and statutory organisations, that solely represent children, on further solutions for children residing in safe accommodation.

Objective 2 – Accessible and inclusive services that meet the needs of all victims/survivors

Making the scope of DASA more inclusive and comprehensive

The Mayor will work with the government to secure changes to DASA that will ensure the programme can deliver for all London's victims/survivors. This will include seeking a change in the rules to allow specialist support, under the Part 4 duties, for victims/survivors and their children placed in generic temporary accommodation. This will also include widening the duty's scope to recognise and support all victims/survivors in London, including those with unknown or insecure immigration status; and work with the Home Office on fast-tracking all domestic abuse cases.

Prioritising equalities and unmet needs

The Mayor will provide funding for services that are culturally specific and responsive to the needs of different communities. These must meet victims'/survivors' diverse needs; and benefit under-served, marginalised and minoritised victims/survivors. He will make use of inclusive commissioning processes and requirements that recognise the value of smaller, specialist and 'by and for' providers.

This will be done by ensuring that all funding opportunities have clear equalities requirements of providers, rooted in the equalities impact assessment for the programme; and that funding prioritises the needs of under-served groups, so that barriers facing victims/survivors are reduced. It will also mean continued commitment to reducing barriers for smaller organisations to accessing funding – by both considering how funding opportunities can be made more accessible, and supporting smaller providers to improve their processes and systems to comply with funding requirements.

Objective 3 – Services and accommodation that are physically and psychologically safe, and of high quality; and use up-to-date and appropriate practice

Sharing practice

In addition to good practice on move-on accommodation, the Mayor will share learning, case studies and good practice guidance from his tailored funding programmes, and from the framework and continuation grants. Work to improve the mechanisms for delivery evaluation will be prioritised in 2025-28 to give greater transparency to spend and impact.

Funding for accommodation improvements

The Mayor will explore options for re-opening his Psychologically Informed Environment grant-funding programme to support the DASA system to improve the quality of existing safe accommodation.

Training for the wider DASA system

Frontline staff in a range of services can be supported in their delivery of high-quality support for victims/survivors. A cornerstone approach for upskilling within boroughs and housing associations is through DAHA accreditation. The Mayor strongly encourages all local authorities to undergo accreditation.⁸¹ The Mayor will seek to make Part 4 funding available for DAHA accreditation and other pathways, to help housing providers develop their expertise in domestic abuse – covering both their roles as housing providers and their provision of services, such as housing options.

⁸¹ DAHA, Accreditation for housing providers

Priority activity for the Mayor of London

Objective 4 – A DASA system that works across specialities and geographies, centred on victims'/survivors' outcomes

Tailoring delivery to London and gaps in provision

The Mayor will provide funding that improves the capacity and infrastructure of London's safe-accommodation provision, primarily through DASA. Funding will be provided using the most appropriate mechanism – whether that is grant funding or commissioning a contracted service. It will be distributed to reduce gaps in provision that exist geographically, or by type of safe accommodation.

Whereas the 2024 needs assessment shows the gaps in provision by characteristic, the Mayor is conscious that there is no single source of data on the geography of services across London. Over the next three years, the Mayor will work with, and learn from, boroughs and a range of sector organisations to map services and build on existing data sets to pinpoint geographical gaps.

As the tier-one authority in London, the GLA will ensure regional and pan-London interventions support victims/survivors in ways that would not be possible at a local level; and to work closely with boroughs to do this in the most effective way. The Mayor will also use his role as a regional leader, within the scope of his powers, to improve the experience of survivors who need to access support. This could include, for example, supporting home and host boroughs to coordinate in the interests of victims/survivors as they seek safety across local authority boundaries.

Domestic Abuse Partnership Board arrangements will be reviewed and refreshed in 2025.

Specific work set out under a 2025-28 delivery plan, led by a refreshed Board, will include appropriate ways to convene around, and respond, to underrepresented needs as well as wider service and system-related challenges set out under these objectives. Progress updates against a 2025-28 delivery plan will be communicated by City Hall to partners.

Ensuring DASA can deliver for Londoners in the long-term

A long-term DASA settlement will improve resilience and the continuity of provision available to survivors. The Mayor will continue to work in close partnership with the government to ensure Part 4 funding is both sufficient in scale and sustainable in the long term.

Priority activity for the Mayor of London

Objective 5 – A sustainable and robust sector, funded to best meet victims'/survivors' needs

A new approach to commissioning

City Hall will take a flexible, evidence-based approach to commissioning. This will be driven by seeking the most effective mix of provision, that maximises impact, to drive outcomes for victims/survivors in London. A phased approach will drive a grants programme for specialist providers, opening in spring 2025. Further intensive consultation with delivery partners will take place on recommissioning, to inform further phases.

Through new funding mechanisms, there will be continued investment in the development of stable and resilient provision for under-served groups in London, through services that meet diverse needs and an inclusive mix of provision.

There will be a focus on ensuring that provision is available to all who need it, regardless of where in London they are; and that this provision reduces barriers to access, drives improvements in practice and centres on high-quality standards.

A supported and developing VAWG sector

Supporting the development and resilience of the VAWG workforce is a wider priority within the Mayor's VAWG strategy.⁸² For example, for the VAWG sector, specialist training and workforce development may build resilience and capacity which can in turn support recruitment and retention in DASA delivery. DASA funding opportunities, developed through consultation with VAWG providers in 2025-28, can be used to enhance VAWG workforce development to the ultimate benefit of victims/survivors in safe accommodation.

Developing the wider DASA system

The Mayor will support capacity building, to grow the DASA system in terms of its capability and robustness. This may include providing funding to support the organisational operations and governance of providers where needed.

Further engagement led by City Hall, through key strategic housing forums and networks, will encourage all housing partners to build further on their role in DASA activity.

⁸² GLA, The Mayor's Violence Against Women and Girls Strategy 2022-25, June 2022

Priority activity for the Mayor of London

The Mayor will convene providers across housing, domestic abuse and health to strengthen working relationships. As part of this work, he will facilitate peer learning between partners, through reflective practice and social value contributions that are proportionate and equitable to organisational capacity.

Learning, impact and data

The Mayor will achieve continuous improvement in practice, by ensuring that learning from evaluations, pilots and service delivery are shared across delivery partners. This will also inform how funding is allocated going forward, to make sure it is having the most impact.

The Mayor will develop more robust data on need and the impact of DASA delivery. This will involve reviewing all existing indicators and measures; and considering how best to collect and manage data consistently going forward, and how to share data to support practice development.

The Mayor will explore ways to monitor the provision level of safe accommodation services in London, including any decommissioning, through periodic refreshes of the London DASA Needs Assessment. He will robustly monitor funded services to ensure they are delivering effectively; and that lessons are being learnt across the landscape of provision.

Appendix 4 – Table detailing changes to DASA strategy 2025-28, following consultation

Theme 1 – Evidencing delivery Suggestions	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
1. Provide a delivery plan to accompany the strategy. 2. Provide more on planned activities and how progress/ outcomes will be achieved/measured.	Change: The delivery plan is already in development. This will help to ensure that the Mayor's vision and priority activity set out in the strategy is delivered in an effective, inclusive way, and delivers value for money for Londoners. The final strategy references this rapidly developing work, and states that it will be communicated to partners in 2025-28 it will be communicated.
3. Provide more detail on future commissioning, including timelines.	Clarify: The draft strategy already set out that future commissioning beyond the initial grants programme will stem from a collaborative approach with partners throughout 2025-28. Further key operational milestones and a timeline are situated within a delivery plan.
1.7. Provide more detail on future funding.	Change: Since the publication of the draft strategy for consultation closed on 10 December 2024, MHCLG has put its allocated funding for the 2025-26 at £26,868,976; this is included in the final strategy. Approval for receipt and expenditure of this allocation was approved in MD3321.
1.9. The strategy is not clear enough on what safe accommodation is.	Clarify: 76 per cent of consultation survey responses agreed the purpose of the Part 4 duty was 'clear' (includes clear, very clear, and extremely clear). A shorthand definition, and an example of safe accommodation, are set out in the glossary. For completeness, MHCLG text regarding the full range of types of safe accommodation is replicated in the final strategy text alongside the embedded link, in the 'scope of the Mayor's powers' section.
Theme 2 – 'Lessons learned' Suggestions	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
2.1. The strategy should show more on achievements to date, including information on how and to what extent proposals in the previous strategy have been delivered. 2.2. It should expand on learning from 2021-24.	Change: The strategy sets out the headline successes of delivery in alignment with statutory MHCLG reporting, and as a 'highlights' section. Further reflection on the operational successes and challenges of 2021-24 has now been added which highlights the re-commitment to further progress against the reviewed and updated priority commitments with reference to developing a robust delivery plan. Pointing to the full version of the needs-assessment publication, and adding a specific priority area commitment to deliver on its recommendations, assist with this.
2.3. It should be clearer who accesses this support and how.	Clarify: For brevity, the draft strategy embedded (in a footnote) a link to MHCLG data tables on the breakdown of survivors supported in safe accommodation in London. This data is now highlighted for ease.

Theme 3 – Data quality Suggestions	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
3.2. Insights should be provided about older survivors of abuse. 3.3. More data about the number and characteristics of children needing support in safe accommodation. 3.4. Socio-economic status of victims/survivors should be acknowledged. 3.5. More detail on how multiple intersecting disadvantages compound impact on severely vulnerable groups over time. Multiple disadvantages create unmet needs that require longer-lasting safe accommodation support services. 3.6. Trans individuals are disproportionately impacted by abuse, but there is limited data on this. 3.7. The needs assessment and strategy should appreciate the needs of victims/survivors who have had involvement in the criminal justice system. 3.8. The needs assessment should give readers and the commissioning body an idea of how many bedspaces or additional service are needed, to ensure groups are supported. 3.9. 40 responses to the needs assessment victims/survivors survey are not representative of London. 3.10. The needs assessment would benefit from incorporating other	The needs assessment informs the strategy as set out under the Part 4 duty. It is acknowledged, in practice, as a statutory and key part of the pan-London evidence base on domestic abuse. Recorded limitations inherent to the wide-ranging combined datasets and qualitative data used have been made clear, and there has been a commitment to continual improvement. It is acknowledged, within the strategy and assessment, that there is no complete dataset providing a full picture of demand and need in London. The needs assessment and the EqlA for the programme are also clear on gaps in understanding; and show that demand across many groups is likely to be much higher. Priority activity set out in the strategy continues to commit the Mayor, the GLA and MOPAC to work with partners “to explore and develop improvements to the collection and use of data, and information on the demand for services and survivors’ needs.” The strategy also states a commitment to “ensuring learning from evaluations, pilots and service delivery are shared across delivery partners”. It adds: “This will also inform how funding is allocated going forward, to make sure it is having the most impact.” This work is within the remit of the Partnership Board, and GLA and MOPAC officers. Comments will inform the Partnership Board’s work; it will take account of feedback as this work develops, and will seek to include learning from data gathered from services and other sources. Change: The strategy already draws on a wider evidence base of 80-plus citations beyond the statutory needs assessment, to bolster the insights provided by the needs assessment datasets provided. Further contextualising data from the wider evidence base, already present in the EqlA, has now been fully cross-referenced into the headline summary section on needs assessment findings, for completeness.

Theme 4 – Support for victims/survivors	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
4.4 Representation of underserved groups. The Mayor of London, alongside MOPAC and the GLA, must address the systemic and structural failure in London in providing post-emergency: medium to long-term safe accommodation for male victims of domestic abuse. This is both in the availability of such accommodation by local authorities and consequentially the provision of support services in such accommodation (Mayoral).	Change: A range of suggestions to raise the profile of specific groups of under-served victims/survivors in London were captured throughout this theme, and are set out to show the breadth of suggestions. An additional priority area set out under Mayoral Objective 1 now supports a more explicit statement of intent to address all the recommendations (including on identified gaps) within the needs assessment, to effectively respond to the needs of victims/survivors and partners. It emphasises that further engagement led by the Partnership Board, and in other engagement networks, will address the needs of particular underrepresented groups. A specific priority activity to review and refresh the Domestic Abuse Partnership Board is now added, which underpins this approach. As in Theme 3, the strategy needs assessment summary now also reflects further references to the wider evidence base specifically on gaps in provision, apparent in the EqlA, for completeness.
4.7. Be clearer in outlining the relationship between accommodation and accommodation support, and how funding is allocated to both.	Clarify: This relationship is set out in ‘The scope of the Mayor’s powers’. For absolute clarity, the final strategy reiterates, in brief, that the DASA Homes Programme’s capital funding is separate and additional to revenue-only funding through the Part 4 Duty revenue (this is an independent Mayoral innovation outside the Duty, which itself places no requirement for authorities to provide buildings or units).
4.8. The strategy should be rooted in a stronger commitment to sustain and stabilise existing specialist services, and shouldn’t divert funding away from survivors and expert frontline services by increasing capacity building in larger, well-funded organisations.	Clarify: Mayoral Objective 5 states: “Funding will support the VAWG sector – and those across the DASA system – to develop overall capacity and sustainability,” It also states: “Commissioning and funding approaches will be designed to benefit under-served victims/survivors and will seek to bolster workforce development and resilience within the VAWG sector specifically.” The strategy already re-commits the Mayor to making funding available for small, specialist and ‘by and for’ providers, and to doing so through inclusive processes The Mayor wants to ensure smaller specialist providers can grow and build, so that more victims/survivors can be reached. Mayoral Objective 3 states: “Funding should focus on bringing existing provision to high and current standards, and developing new, practice-leading provision.”

	Wording in the narrative has been reviewed to ensure that the focus on sustainable provision, existing provision and on building overall resilience for the VAWG sector is fully explicit – alongside the commitment to specialist providers that is clearly set out.
4.9. More clarity on how the strategy connects with wider VAWG strategy and PCP commitments.	Clarify: Updated references to these strategies and their reviewed remits have been made in the final DASA strategy. An update has been added to the final strategy on timescales for a PCP and VAWG refresh – and a specific example of how VAWG and DASA strategies interact is added. A reference to how wider consultation findings are shared for learning, delivery planning and engagement in 2025-28 through DASA (and wider strategies) is added.
4.11. The strategy should highlight the need for physically and psychologically safe spaces with statutory settings.	Clarify: This is expressed in Objective 3, to achieve: “Services and accommodation that are physically and psychologically safe, of high quality, and use up-to-date and appropriate practice.” All support services funded through the Mayor’s commissioning, and that arise from this strategy, will need to demonstrate that they ensure the physical and psychological safety of survivors. Furthermore, the executive summary provides covering statements that the Mayor’s ambitions apply to safe accommodation services across the board, not only those commissioned under the Part 4 duties. Further detail has been added to the narrative to ensure that the role of statutory services in responding to victims/survivors’ immediate needs is highlighted.
4.12. ‘So that barriers faced by victims/survivors in accessing services are reduced’ should be reinstated from the 2021 strategy.	Clarify – This reference has been added into the priority activity narrative relating to objective 2.

Theme 5 – Partnership working	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
5.1. Greater distinction between the need for direct support offered in safe accommodation, compared to holistic support and systems change work with housing providers.	Change: Mayoral objectives in the draft reviewed strategy were already set out to distinguish between leading direct support, and provision and facilitating/convening ‘system-level’ partnership working. However, a separate priority activity on the GLA’s relationship-building with housing stakeholders, at operational level, has been added. This is to underpin work that encourages further engagement and innovation around delivery of the Duty. This refers to encouraging housing partners to build further on taking an active role in DASA activity.
5.2. An unaddressed issue is poor practices by housing teams, which hinder small providers by failing to recognise their status as supported housing,	Clarify: The needs assessment indicates delivery challenges at local level, of which there are a range, across the DASA landscape. This should be read in conjunction with the strategy. This is now more clearly reflected, in brief, in the narrative paragraphs of the ‘Working together to deliver the duty section’ alongside reflecting on the strengths of impacting DASA-funded project delivery.	boroughs, providers and partners delivering the Duty. A change was already recommended (4.4) to more explicitly summarise a commitment to addressing the recommendations of the needs assessment.

Theme 6 – Tier 2 authorities	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
6.1. Role of Tier 2 authorities lacks clarity. 6.2. Helpful to have clear delineation of responsibility, e.g, recommendations to Tier 2 authorities. 6.3. More detail on how MOPAC expects to work with London boroughs, Integrated Care Boards and other statutory agencies to ensure strategic coordinated approach to the Part 4 Duty. 6.4. Helpful to include more information about how the Mayor intends to work with boroughs to deliver on a pan-London domestic abuse strategy. 6.5. Further detail on how the Mayor will give local authorities adequate resource to sufficiently respond to these gaps within the outlined timeframes.	Change: The Act’s requirement that Tier 2 authorities ‘cooperate with’ the Tier 1 authority does not give the Mayor powers to enforce that boroughs continue to fund existing services, or to enforce activity to address the disparity between boroughs’ investment in such services. The draft strategy already states: “The Mayor and his Deputy Mayors for Housing and Residential Development, and Policing and Crime, will convene and communicate with leaders across the landscape of housing and VAWG provision, and with wider partners (such as those representing registered housing providers, and health partners) to foster engagement and collaboration.” The final strategy further clarifies, in the executive summary, and in ‘Scope of the Mayor’s Powers’, that although London boroughs have a duty to cooperate with the GLA in the exercise of these duties, and are in receipt of new burdens funding in relation to this, Part 4 does not give the Mayor a basis for ‘enforcing’ activity in the strategy. It also stresses that, ultimately, for the strategy to deliver maximum benefit for victims/survivors of domestic abuse in London, all partners need to work together. New explicit commitments are added, to refresh the Partnership Board and to target gaps and challenges set out in the updated needs assessment. This change will drive forward this work. Beyond this, it is for the Partnership Board to determine the scope of wider pan-London work and how it will be progressed. Specific activity to reflect the sharing of best practice, learning and evaluation, and improving data are also already set out under priority activity. As already set out in the strategy, future commissioning will also be collaborative with boroughs as key partners in the delivery of the Duty, alongside providers and other agencies involved in support for victims/survivors, where safe accommodation is part of the response to addressing domestic abuse. The impending government duty to collaborate is also cited in the strategy. This will further evolve the remit of statutory pathways to strategic collaboration in relation to domestic abuse throughout 2025-28.

7.1. Review the Partnership Board with a focus on its functions, activities and outcomes.	Change: Initial scoping work to refresh the role, function and governance of the DA Partnership Board has already started for 2025 – not least through reflections from the Board in pre-consultation engagement and consultation. A new priority activity has been set out to capture this workstream.

Theme 8 – The scope of the duty	Resulting changes to DASA strategy
8.2. Support safe accommodation providers in assisting victim transition in and out of temporary accommodation. 8.3. Strategy must work with local authorities in terms of commissioning and temporary accommodation provision. 8.4. There should be greater prominence around the duty being widened to benefit all victims/survivors, including those in temporary accommodation. 8.5. Strongly recommend not progressing widening the scope of the duty to include temporary accommodation. 8.6. Mechanisms must be put in place to safeguard against the potential misuse of the expanded definition of bringing temporary accommodation into the Part 4 Duty.	Clarify: This commitment does not advocate the use of generic temporary accommodation for victims/survivors. It is a reality that many survivors end up in temporary accommodation. This Mayoral commitment is a longstanding pragmatic one that seeks to ensure they receive appropriate support. As the duty was developed, the Mayor pressed the then government to include all accommodation secured by local authorities for homeless households made homeless by domestic abuse, within the scope of Part 4. He will continue to do so. It is outside the scope of the Mayor's powers to set requirements for the standard of temporary accommodation. This is covered in legislation and guidance on local authorities' responsibilities to homeless households and in voluntary approaches agreed by London local authorities. In the priority area relating to this, the strategy clarifies that the Mayor would seek to encourage mechanisms to safeguard against misuse of any expansion of the current Duty's scope.

Defining purpose and scope
Outline the main purpose for the new project/policy etc.	Part 4 of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 gave the GLA (as the Tier One local authority in London) new duties to support victims/survivors of domestic abuse and their children in safe accommodation in London. The GLA's duties include conducting a needs assessment, producing a strategy and commissioning services. These duties come with government funding – c. £20m of funding per year for London since 2021-22 from the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government (MHCLG). MHCLG¹ guidance sets out that a needs assessment should be conducted every three years to understand the barriers that prevent victims/survivors with relevant protected characteristics and/ or multiple disadvantages from accessing and using support within relevant safe accommodation. Strategies are also reviewed every three years, detailing the purpose, plans and approaches of Tier One local authorities. This Equalities Impact Assessment (EqIA) accompanies the development of the refreshed needs assessment and strategy in 2024. The published strategy in turn will inform the commissioning approach for funding new and enhanced support for victim/survivors and their children in safe accommodation in London in 2025-28. Who is affected by the policy? MHCLG guidance outlines that domestic abuse can affect anyone, regardless of age, disability, gender identity, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, sex or sexual orientation. The 2021 Domestic Abuse Act is clear that children of domestic abuse victims who have seen, heard, or experienced the effect of that abuse are victims in their own right. Anyone who is a victim/survivor of domestic abuse in London may be affected by this strategy, alongside organisations and services providing support to victims/survivors. Desired outcomes The provision of enhanced and new accommodation-based support services for all victims/survivors of domestic abuse in London in 2025-28 is within scope. Additionality is also key – this strategy and any associated funding is not intended to replace vital existing provision. There are opportunities to promote equality and mitigate inequalities through the implementation of the 2025-28 activity proposed in the strategy which sets out a clear intention to provide support relevant to individuals who hold a diversity of different protected characteristics. It is also expected explicitly within the strategy that commissioned providers of support will undertake policies/practices which promote equality and commit to anti-racist and intersectional practices.

How does the strategy fit in with other policies?

There are established areas of guidance and legislation beyond the scope of the Duty which support victims/survivors of domestic abuse that should be considered alongside it. The statutory framework around homelessness and changes to priority need are addressed in other parts of the 2021 Domestic Abuse Act. Wider issues on domestic abuse; and access to accommodation for victims/survivors are covered by other legislation and addressed by the Mayor in his wider strategies – primarily London's Housing Strategy, the Mayor's Police and Crime Plan, VAWG Strategy and Health Inequalities Strategy.

Approach taken

Consideration to the equality of impacts was given during the development of the needs assessment and in the development of a refreshed strategy. Within the first Strategy in 2021 and now in the 2024 refreshed version, the Mayor sets out a consistent vision; that all victims/survivors of domestic abuse, including children, can access and be supported by safe accommodation-based services, tailored to their needs. To inform the development of this refreshed strategy, an updated Pan-London needs assessment was completed in March 2024. It reflects the current available provision of support in relevant safe accommodation for victims in the local authority area, highlighting the gaps identified and providing recommendations for addressing them. This comprehensive assessment identified a breakdown of the differing needs of victim/survivor groups, including protected and other characteristics. The intersecting nature of the impact of domestic abuse is also considered throughout the needs assessment. To complete the needs assessment, quantitative analysis of published and local data was triangulated with qualitative views from a range of practitioners in interviews and focus groups, and by engaging victims/survivors through interviews and a survey.

Alongside the needs assessment, further pre-Strategy consultation was conducted through four workshops with agencies involved in tackling domestic abuse, and organisations delivering support, specifically to develop a refreshed document. Eight interviews with victims/survivors of domestic abuse were also held to inform the development of a draft strategy. Following the publication of a draft Strategy in October 2024, a 10-week consultation period was undertaken. 35 responses were received online (including 25 responses to an online survey) and three further workshops with agencies and organisations delivering support to victims/survivors in London informed the consultation.

Have there been any previous EqlAs undertaken on the project, policy, service or function?	This EqlA is part of the review, development and refresh of the Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy for 2025-28. A previous EqlA in 2021 accompanied the 2021 strategy and needs assessment – the first of their kind in the capital. The 2021 publications provided the blueprint to underpin the commissioning of support services between 2021-2024. Since 2021, the Mayor has commissioned services that have enhanced and complemented those already funded and commissioned, to meet gaps in provision and emerging needs of victims/survivors.

The needs assessment outlines that MOPAC has commissioned the Outside Project to deliver the refuge accommodation to trans and non-binary victims/ survivors, although some providers qualitatively reported that there is a gap in provision for trans and non-binary people. While the evidence base from the needs assesment sets out that 11% of those accessing Mayoral commissioned services were LGBTQI+ in 2022/23, this does not disaggregate data for Trans and non binary individuals.	to access victim services and the criminal justice system. Generic service provision is complemented by commissioning organisations with specialist knowledge, usually smaller 'by and for' organisations. Positive - The strategy evidences positive impacts for transgender individuals already achieved in 2021-24, where the first 'led by and for' refuge provision of its kind was set up through DASA commissioning. The publication of a refreshed needs assessment further highlights existing gaps in provision for Trans and non-binary victims/survivors for partners to respond to. Strategy proposals to encourage specialist services, retain a focus on growing both the evidence base and body of practice for all underserved groups, and to ensure support for marginalized, minoritized groups within future commissioning processes create the conditions for further positive future impacts for Trans and non-binary victims/survivors.

Pregnancy and maternity: Protection is during pregnancy and any statutory maternity leave to which the woman is entitled.	The 2024 needs assessment found that women, both with and without children, have the highest need for housing support from their local authority when they are at risk of homelessness or already homeless because of domestic abuse. Of 5,930 households owed a homelessness duty due to domestic abuse in 2022/23, 43% were single female parents.	The 2024 needs assessment does not disaggregate pregnant victim/survivors accessing safe accommodation services, - this is a gap in knowledge for the scale/needs of this cohort across London. Wider evidence identifies that domestic abuse often begins during pregnancy and 1 in 3 pregnant women experience domestic abuse. Domestic abuse is likely to increase during pregnancy⁶	Positive - The strategy impacts individuals of various family backgrounds, including victims/survivors who are pregnant and have babies and young children. Children are specifically recognised in the needs assessment, strategy and associated Part 4 Duty of the Domestic Abuse Act 2021 as victims of domestic abuse. Pregnant victims/survivors and individuals with young babies potentially offered new and enhanced accommodation-based support by a range of specialist and generic service provision across London.
Race/ethnicity: This includes ethnic or national origins, colour or nationality, and includes refugees and migrants, and Gypsies and Travellers. The wider evidence base also shows that Black and Minoritised individuals are disproportionately affected by domestic abuse in relation to their White counterparts.⁸ Black and Minoritised victims/survivors also face additional barriers	Positive - The strategy already positively impacts Black and Minoritised individuals and victims/survivors with insecure and unknown immigration status. The refreshed strategy will continue to promote the need commissioning for specialist 'by and for' provision and focus on marginalised and minoritized groups, including those with insecure and unknown immigration status (includes those with no recourse to public fund in the Capital). There is a specific strategy proposal around further working with national government towards a more explicitly defined scope by government on funding support for those with insecure immigration status facing particular financial and social barriers to accessing safe accommodation support.

The Act also covers lack of religion or belief.	In the 2024 needs assessment, providers noted how different power and family dynamics, religious beliefs, or social stigma within a wide range of different communities can act as a barrier to accessing safe accommodation-based services. Sex/Gender: Both men and women are covered under the Act.	Domestic abuse happens to female and male victims/survivors¹¹ The Crime Survey for England and Wales (CSEW) estimated that 5.0% of adults (6.9% women and 3.0% men) aged 16 years and over experienced domestic abuse in the year ending March 2022; this equates to an estimated 2.4 million adults (1.7 million women and 699,000 men).¹² The 2024 needs assessment found 97% of domestic abuse victims/survivors accessing support recorded through Women's Aid On Track in 2022/23 were female, and 96% of those receiving mayoral commissioned services in 2022/23 were female, although wider support services have increasingly offered support to men - from 21% of services in 2016 to 28% in 2023.	The primary reason for being unable to accommodate victims/survivors recorded through the needs assessment remains due to capacity (29% of all unsuccessful referrals) - indicating that safe accommodation provision in London still does not meet required needs for female victims/survivors Needs assessment data found no record of refuge spaces for male victims/ survivors available for analysis. Practitioners advise that finding a safe space for male victims/ survivors is challenging, particularly for men with intersecting protected characteristics and support needs. – there is a gap in understanding of need for male victims/survivors and in the provision of services.	Under the Equality Act, commissioners and providers must not discriminate against someone because of the protected characteristics of sex. The Act allows for the provision of separate or single sex services in certain circumstances, under 'exceptions' relating to sex, in order for some women and girls to address and heal from the trauma they have experienced. How a person describes their gender will not preclude them from accessing services appropriate to their needs. There is potential for new and enhanced accommodation-based support for survivors from a range of family backgrounds and relationship statuses to access provision, with a proposal that sets out that clear equalities requirements of providers will be made in any future funding processes designed to encourage inclusive support.
Community Cohesion: What must happen in all communities to enable different groups of people to get on well together.	The LGA¹⁵ defines scope for community cohesion involves addressing fractures, removing barriers and encouraging positive interaction between groups. Other relevant groups e.g.: Carers, people experiencing domestic and/or sexual violence, substance misusers, homeless people, looked after children, ex-armed forces personnel, people on the Autistic spectrum etc	The 2024 needs assessment shows 52% of domestic abuse victims/survivors rough sleeping in London are male, an increase in the proportion of men rough sleeping from 2020/21. The London Women's Rough Sleeping Census identifies that women are more likely to experience 'hidden homelessness' and less likely captured as 'rough sleeping' in existing data collection method.¹⁶ 4% of victims/ survivors supported through Mayoral commissioned services had a drug support need. Practitioners in the needs assessment reports an increasing demand for intensive, specialist and longer lasting	4 households were unable to be supported by Mayoral commissioned services due to drug needs indicating a gap in appropriate provision. However, the lack of data means it is unclear to what extent there has been an increase across London. The wider multiple disadvantage evidence base¹⁷ indicates an unknown in the need for specialist services for this cohort of victims/survivors. Lankelly Chase estimate there are 336,000 in England that face intersecting homelessness, mental ill health, substance misuse and violence/abuse. 17,000 people experience interrelated homelessness, substance misuse, mental ill health and violence/abuse at any one time and 70% of these are women.	Positive - The strategy impacts individuals with substance use, rough sleeping, with substance needs and those facing multiple disadvantages. Culmulative impact e.g: This is an impact that appears when you consider services or activities together. A change or activity in one area may create an impact somewhere else	The 2024 needs assessment found that the rate per 1,000 population of domestic abuse crimes recorded by the Metropolitan Police from 2019 to 2023 has increased by 8.1% London's housing market has faced significant challenges in recent years. Affordable housing has decreased which practitioners suggest has increased the demand on social housing. Almost 6,000 households were owed a prevention or relief homelessness duty across London in 2022/23 due to domestic abuse. This is an 8% increase in volume from 2021/22. Additional data suggests that needs are becoming more acute by the time victims/survivors are in contact with services, alongside the general increase in the volume of demand. As of March 2023 there were 1,745 bed spaces for adults and children across London for domestic abuse victims/ survivors in Mayoral commissioned safe accommodation services. The majority (56%) of these were provided through refuges.	Although London has proportionately higher refuge availability than elsewhere in England and has a volume of bed spaces 2% higher than Council of Europe recommendation, overall, Mayoral commissioned safe accommodation and DASA-based support services are not entirely meeting demand. Service capacity is a barrier, as is services' ability to meet the needs of victims/ survivors The primary reason for being unable to accommodate victims/survivors recorded through the needs assessment remains due to capacity (29% of all unsuccessful referrals) - indicating cumulative gaps in understanding of needs for and provision of accommodation-based support. In 2022/23, 2,115 people were unsuccessful in receiving support from safe accommodation services. 29% of these referrals were unsuccessful due to capacity constraints. However, 19% were unsuccessful because the services were not able to meet the needs of the victims/ survivors – indicating cumulative gaps in understanding how to respond to a range of victims/survivor needs.	Combined, the objectives and proposals indicate wide-ranging potential for new and enhanced accommodation-based support, including pan-London support, work to tackle multiple systemic challenges in provision, enhance the existing evidence base regarding London's diverse victims/survivor needs and provision and enhance multi-agency partnership working across a range of organisations in housing, the VAWG sector and specialist voluntary and community service, health and children's organisations that deliver services to victims/survivors in London. For example, an exploratory review of alternatives to refuge provision such as sanctuary schemes is proposed, as is work to learn from boroughs and a range of sector organisations to map services and build on existing data sets to pinpoint geographical gaps.

Domestic Abuse Safe Accommodation Strategy 2025-28 – Equalities Impact Assessment

	Refuge commissioning is not consistent across London, making it hard for local authorities to plan provision because services are not being commissioned based on the local population's demand, needs and characteristics. This means local authorities have varying capacity to support victims/survivors. Practitioners highlighted the risk of this cumulative 'postcode lottery'
Intersectionality: The impact of domestic abuse cuts across almost all protected and other characteristics	The needs assessment findings set out that victims/survivors of domestic abuse can face multiple, intersecting disadvantages when seeking, accessing and receiving support from safe accommodation services. The needs assessment identifies two elements to the intersectional nature of domestic abuse. For victims/survivors facing multiple, intersecting barriers to support including Black and minoritised victims/survivors and those with insecure immigration status, the needs assessment notes where the challenges of achieving safety and support from a service that meets all needs are multi-faceted. The needs assessment sets out that the experiences of different groups vary and is clear that commissioned services data	A range of potential evidence gaps are noted and recommendations to progress evidencing a fuller understanding of diverse cohorts of victims/survivors needs, and to continue the commissioning of specialist services that address these needs are made. The needs assessment identifies a range of qualitative and quantitative evidence and lack of evidence that indicates intersecting challenges. The needs assessment encourages commissioners and providers of services to further consider such intersectional barriers and to surface further knowledge in evidence gaps around different cohorts of victims/survivors- such as the disabled, male and older victims/survivors, Black and minoritized victims/survivors. Recommendations are set out to also progress the commissioning of specialist services	The refreshed strategy and needs assessment take a focus on the provision of services that take intersectional, anti-racist and also specialist delivery approaches to their support. Proposals include that funding processes will scrutinise equalities requirements and a specific focus is taken on enhancing convening, commissioning and partnership working of agencies to understand intersecting needs and respond to them at pan-London commissioning and individual service delivery level.

	Priority Activity for City Hall: Specific priority activities are set out within the 2025-28 strategy that will be delivered at a London-level by City Hall, to maximise the impact of Part 4 funding for all victims/survivors in London, underneath the overarching Mayoral commitments. Priority activity is also clearly set out for all delivery partners working in partnership with the DASA system in 2025-28 and includes that: Safe spaces will ensure victims/survivors and their children can recover safely from abuse supported by services rooted in rights-based, trauma-informed and gender-informed approaches. Accommodation should: be designed to meet the needs of victims/survivors; be self-contained (where appropriate); and reflect victims'/survivors' needs in terms of choice, independence and dignity All service providers involved in the delivery of DASA should work on principles of inclusion to serve individual needs, including those that are related to protected characteristics. Services should meet the cultural, language and religious needs of victims/survivors; and serve those facing multiple disadvantages, and non-UK nationals with insecure or unknown immigration status Priority activity for City Hall also includes that; The Mayor will provide funding for services that are culturally specific and responsive . This will be done by ensuring that all funding opportunities have clear equalities requirements of providers, rooted in the equalities impact assessment for the programme; and that funding prioritises the needs of under-served groups. it is also expected that providers will share policies/practices which promote equality and commit to anti-racist practices. A phased approach will see a grants programme for specialist providers launched initially for delivery after March 2025. Mayoral commitments also include making the case to government for widening the current duty's scope, to more explicitly recognise and support all victims/survivors in London, including those with unknown or insecure immigration status.	inclusion set out in the strategy, so that a wide range of victims/survivors in London would see visible service provision that is designed to meet their identifying needs. National government would widen its explicit scope to include those with insecure immigration status.
	Data gather and understanding of delivery impact: The data collection for DASA already captures elements of service level delivery related to understanding need through an equalities lens – for example the number of 'led by and for' and specialist services that deliver DASA support in London. The strategy commits that the Mayor will develop more robust data overall at City Hall level on victims/survivor's needs and the impact of DASA delivery. This will involve reviewing all existing indicators and measures; and considering how best to collect and manage data consistently going forward, and how to share data to support practice development.	The desired outcome is that in developing this strand of progress within the 2025-28 timespan of the refreshed strategy, that a range of EDI KPIs are considered alongside wider measures of data collection and management and contribute to wider improvements on data capture and management in 2025-28	A refreshed needs assessment will review in 2028 the extent to which domestic abuse safe accommodation based support in London meets the needs of all victims/survivors. Annual data capture by MHCLG will provide a yearly review of data collection.
