

Tickets

Introduction

The London 2012 ticketing programme was the largest and potentially most complex ticketing operation undertaken in this country. Over 11 million tickets for 963 Olympic and Paralympic sessions were available, at a range of price points and, as a result, over 4,000 different ticket 'products' were sold across 26 Olympic and 20 Paralympic sports, and four Ceremonies.

Objectives

Right from the outset, the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) set out its commitments and aims of the Olympic and Paralympic Ticketing programme which were:

- to raise over £500 million towards the cost of staging the Games;
- to fill our venues; and
- to offer affordable and accessible tickets.

These commitments were met.

Tickets Stats

In total 10.99 million tickets were sold out of a total 11.3 million tickets available. 8.21 million of these tickets were Olympic Games tickets and 2.78 million were Paralympic Tickets.

A total of £659 million was raised for LOCOG's operating budget to stage the Games.

319,000 tickets (263,000 Olympic and 55,000 Paralympic) were unsold, the majority of these being early rounds for Olympic Football.

76.3% of all Olympic and 91% of all Paralympic tickets were sold through the UK application process against a target of 75%. This amounted to an unprecedented 8.8 million tickets sold (6.24 million Olympic and 2.53 million Paralympic through the UK application process).

Highlights include:

- 33 consecutive morning and evening Athletics sessions sold out – this has never happened at a previous Games
- 1.9 million Football tickets sold – the biggest Football tournament ever seen in the UK
- 278,000 tickets were sold for Handball – a sport which had never sold a commercial ticket before in this country.

- 340,000 Ticketshare tickets were distributed to school students and other good causes.
- 80,000 tickets were sold for a Women's Football match at Wembley, compared to international fixtures in this country with average attendances of less than 10,000.

The athletes, National Olympic Committees and International Sporting Federations commented on the incredible and unique atmosphere in the venues. Athletes competed in stadia full of passionate sports fans which was a promise we made to the Olympic and Paralympic movements in 2005. Pre-Games pledges on availability, affordability and accessibility were met or exceeded.

LOCOG commitments:

- £20 tickets available for every sport. A total of 2.5 million Olympic tickets at £20 or less and 2.1 million Paralympic tickets at £20 or less.
- Two thirds of the tickets at £50 or less. In the case of the Paralympics 97% of the tickets available were priced at £50 or less.
- 90% of tickets available at £100 or less. This was achieved for the Olympic Games tickets and 98% of Paralympic tickets were available at £100 or less.

There were 657 ticketed sessions for 26 Olympic sports each with between three and five price points. Price points varied by sport and within each sport also varied by session, resulting in 3,285 different ticketing products. There were 306 ticketed sessions in the Paralympic Games for 20 Paralympic sports. Each session had tickets at between two and five price points. In the same way as the Olympic Games, price points differed for each sport and each session within a sport, resulting in over 1,000 separate ticketing products. Across both Olympic and Paralympic Games over 4,825 different ticketing products were available for the UK public to buy.

To illustrate the complexity of the ticketing data we have analysed the most high profile and Athletics events.

- 946,752 tickets were made available for Athletics, of which 68.3% (644,915 tickets) were sold to the UK public.
- The percentage of tickets sold to the UK public across the 15 different Athletics sessions ranged between a high of 78.6% (50,072) tickets sold to the UK public for AT008 (Usain Bolt 200m qualifier); 73.6% (46,546) tickets sold for AT003 (Jessica Ennis Long Jump & Javelin); 60% (37,737 tickets) for AT015 (Mo Farah 5,000m Gold Medal) to the lowest percentage of 51.1% (31,618 tickets) for AT005 (for Men's 100m Final).

Appendix I attached provides a breakdown of Olympic Games capacity and sales to the UK public by sport. Looking at specific sessions across the most popular sports information is as follows:

Boxing – on average 81% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Boxing (BX017) – afternoon session – 87.4% of tickets sold to the UK public

Boxing (BX028) – afternoon session (Anthony Joshua Team GB Gold) – 59.4% of tickets sold to the UK public

Cycling – Track – on average 47% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Cycling – Track (CT004) – afternoon session (Women’s Team Pursuit Team GB Gold) – 51.6% sold to the UK public

Cycling – Track (CT007) – afternoon– (Men’s Sprint Team GB Gold Jason Kenny) 39.5% of tickets sold to the UK public

Equestrian (Eventing) – on average 83.2% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Equestrian (Eventing) (Cross Country) (EV003) – All Day General Admission – 90.9%

Equestrian (Eventing) (Individual and Team Jumping – Team GB Silver) (EV04) - afternoon– 73.5%

Football – on average 90.9% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Football – (FB003) – evening Hampden Park Glasgow – Women’s GB v New Zealand - 96.3% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Football final – (FB042) – evening Wembley Stadium – Brazil v Mexico - 78.2% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Hockey – on average 78% of tickets were sold to the UK public

Hockey – (HK031) morning – ( Women’s Hockey - Japan v South Africa, Korea v Germany) 91.6% of tickets sold to the UK public

Hockey – (HK042) evening - (Men’s Hockey Final – Germany v Netherlands) - 49.8% of tickets sold to the UK public

Swimming – on average 51.8% of tickets sold to the UK public

Swimming – (SW013) – morning heats – 64.4% of tickets sold to the UK public

Swimming (SW002) – evening – 39.8% of tickets sold to the UK public

Accredited Seating

There were no tickets for accredited seating. These seats were for people working at the Games, and a number of people rotated through an accredited seat within a session. This was not tracked or measured.

The seats were made available in each venue for use by four client groups; broadcast journalists, press journalists, athletes and Protocol (VIPs, Olympic Family, Sport Federations, Judges and Coaches). Accredited members of these four client groups could attend without prior notice. The number of seats set aside for accredited areas was worked out months in advance through discussions and negotiations with these groups.

During the first few days of the Olympic Games it was clear that these seats were not all being utilised at several sessions. Plans had already been developed to mitigate the potential for empty seats by downsizing accredited areas at Preliminary sessions and by implementing the 'Key Seat' programme in Park venues where London school and college students would fill seats.

The 'Key Seat' programme was established by LOCOG in anticipation that there may be some variance in accredited seat demand in some of the early rounds of competition. The programme allowed young people from London to use approximately 400 accredited seats per day, free of charge, throughout the Olympic Games. A total of 6000 seats were allocated in this way. Additional steps were taken to reduce the accredited areas further, selling more seats to the UK public (over 90,000 tickets were sold in this way) and by offering seats to the military and volunteers in recognition of their service to the Games. Between 300 and 600 seats were offered to military and volunteers per day throughout the Olympic Games with approximately 7000 seats allocated in this way throughout the Games.

Ticketshare

Tickets for school students and other good causes funded through the hospitality programme. The scheme delivered 175,000 tickets to schools through the London 2012 'Get Set' Education Programme, including 125,000 to London schools. A further 25,000 tickets were distributed to good causes through the BOA, BPA, Tickets for Troops and Sport England. There was an additional uplift of 140,000 tickets to the scheme for regional Football matches. In total, 340,000 tickets were distributed through the Ticketshare programme.

Accessibility

Tickets for wheelchair users included a ticket for a carer or companion and the Ticketcare scheme saw additional tickets for carers at no cost for those ticket holders with high dependency care needs. 2,134 tickets were allocated through the Ticketcare scheme throughout both Games.

35,767 Wheelchair and companion seats were allocated for the Olympic Games, and a further 31,040 were allocated for the Paralympic Games.

In addition, during the Olympic Games wheelchair and companion seats were allocated on the day to approximately 250 customers per day. This figure was approximately 200 per day for the Paralympic Games.

Easy access seats and enhanced amenity seats were made available and facilities such as enhanced audio commentary were put in place for blind spectators. 'Changing Places' toilets were also installed in almost all venues, and a Games Mobility Service was in place for disabled people that included free wheelchair and scooter hire.

Pay Your Age

For the first time at an Olympic Games a concession programme was introduced across all sports. This saw young people (aged 16 and under) pay their age and people aged 60 and over pay just £16 for a ticket. For the Paralympic Games, concession tickets were £5. This proved extremely popular. A total of 639,777 concession tickets were sold for the Olympic Games and 802,391 concession tickets were sold for the Paralympic Games.

Re-sale

All customers could re-sell their tickets through LOCOG, at face value. This enabled people whose circumstances had changed to get their money back without resorting to the black market. 180,000 tickets were re-sold in this way.

Re-cycle

Re-cycle was introduced at the Olympic Park and at Wimbledon for the Olympic Games. Spectators leaving early had their tickets scanned and these were then re-issued to other people waiting who could then enter the venue for the remainder of the session. 15,944 tickets were re-cycled in this way.

Olympic Games ticket prices

Tickets for the London 2012 Olympic Games are available at a wide range of prices starting at £20. There are also special prices for young people and seniors across all Olympic sports. Young people who are 16 years old or younger (at 27 July 2012) will pay their age for a ticket. Seniors aged 60 and over (at 27 July 2012) will pay £16. These 'pay your age' ticket prices and senior ticket prices are available in more than 200 sessions. The price of a ticket for a wheelchair space includes a companion seat located next to it.

The full breakdown of ticket prices for each Olympic sport is shown below. All ticket prices will provide a great Games experience.

Olympic Games tickets go on sale in March 2011. You can make a start by signing up to register your interest at www.tickets.london2012.com
