A huge mistake is being made by packing in as many houses as possible in a small area. It will ultimately destroy a community and put pressure on resources that are already stretched.

I have chosen to live in this area - it is not up to a politician living miles away to decide on how my area will change and actively facilitate its decline.

By all means build on brown sites - of which there are many- but don't allow high density building in such small areas and destroy what it's residents hold dear.
