

My comments

Page: Chapter 1 Planning London's Future \(Good Growth Policies\)

Section: 1.0.1

Whilst developments without parking seem like they're helping the environment, they're just pushing parking issues to the surrounding areas. The simple fact is that people still drive cars in London and need to for varying reasons, and providing zero car parking causes the rest of us headaches. Until we have a transport system that fully means we don't need vehicles, this isn't viable for the rest of us living in London.