In most areas there are streets which are rundown and an eyesore. I would support regeneration there by compulsory purchase to create homes, schools, medical centres and parks. I do not support the idea of creating homes and pushing people into communities with lack of facilities to cope with the influx.

We have too many empty shops in Sidcup. Something needs to be done to encourage village/town businesses to help them succeed and be part of the community.

How many houses have been purchased in elite parts of London by overseas investors or Companies and remain empty? This is unjust and should be tackled by those in power to utilise for proper community housing.
