Your message

Dear Sadiq,

I wholeheartedly support your proposal to reform planning laws to allow more housebuilding in London.

The housing shortage is a blight on our society and our city. It needs to be addressed as a matter of urgency. If the status quo persists, I am worried that my children will struggle to afford basic shelter when they grow up.

Unfortunately, you will face a lot of vocal opposition to the proposals, from across the party political spectrum. Many people don't want development in their area, regardless of the need. In the short term the policies may be unpopular, but if they succeed in bringing down the cost of housing (to rent and buy) in the medium term, even more people would be immensely grateful (myself included).

Therefore I urge you to resist calls to water down the proposals, and deliver on your manifesto commitment to provide housing for the people of London.

I will strongly voice my support during the consultation and encourage others to do the same.

Regards,

Indrek Sepp
