EU Londoners Hub

The Mayor, Sadiq Khan, has been clear that EU citizens living in London belong and are welcome in our great city.

To make sure EU citizens and their families have all the information they need about living in London after Brexit we have created this hub. We have launched a few resource sections to give you clear and impartial information and, if required, guide you to further support and advice. This page will continue to be updated.

Brexit: what this means for EU Londoners

The UK voted to leave the European Union in June 2016. Below we have provided answers to some of the questions you may have about this decision and how Brexit impacts you.

What is Brexit?
Brexit is the popular term for the process of the UK leaving the EU, as a result of the referendum held on 23 June 2016.

In March 2017, Prime Minister Theresa May gave official notice to the EU of the UK’s intention to leave the EU, the so-called Article 50 notice. This was the start of a two-year negotiation process to agree the terms under which the UK would leave, and what its future relationship with the EU would be.

The UK has been a member of the EU since 1973. This means that many structures, arrangements and agreements currently in place as part of the UK’s membership of the EU will become redundant when the UK leaves the EU. New structures, arrangements and agreements will need to replace these, which will come under UK law, not EU law.

What is the impact of Brexit on European Londoners?
Londoners, from whatever background or nationality, are resilient and resourceful, able to adapt to change and welcome new opportunities. But not all change is easy and desired, or even in our control. Whatever your thoughts on Brexit, it will have a significant impact on everyone’s lives.

This will be true of those who hold passports of the other 27 European Union (EU) countries, as well as citizens of non-EU countries like Norway, Liechtenstein and Iceland (also known as EEA countries) and Switzerland, as well as their family members who settled here under Freedom of Movement rights. Europeans resident in the United Kingdom (UK) under Freedom of Movement will see their residence status change when the UK leaves the EU. The UK Government has agreed with the EU a new status for these residents, to allow them to continue living and working in the country. This new residence status is called Settled Status.

Except in a few cases, if you are an EU, EEA or Swiss citizens resident in the UK you will need to apply for Settled Status through a process managed by the Home Office of the UK Government. This may also apply if are not an EU, EEA, or Swiss citizen, but your family member is.

The Mayor of London has no legislative powers over this process as it is within the remit of the UK’s national government. However, he wants to ensure that Londoners from the EU, EEA and Switzerland, as well as their families are able to remain part of, and make a full contribution to our community.

These guidance pages are intended to give you access to clear and impartial information and, if required, guide you to sources for further support and advice. The pages do not provide legal advice and the GLA is unable to do so.

What will be the future relationship between the EU and the UK?
Much of this has yet to be agreed and several scenarios have been discussed widely in the media, including the prospect of leaving the EU with no agreement, or ‘no deal’. This would have a serious impact on organisations, businesses and individuals who rely on EU regulations and arrangements agreed under EU treaties. We have set out in a section below what may be different in case of no-deal.

However, the UK and the EU have stated that they want to avoid that situation arising and have said that whatever happens it is a priority to protect to rights of EU citizens resident in the UK. It is the intention of the UK Government to implement the Settled Status scheme, whatever the outcome of the negotiations.

In their ‘Statement of Intent’ issued on the 21 June 2018, the UK Government states:

“Securing the rights of citizens has always been our priority in negotiations with the European Union (EU). We have delivered on this commitment and reached an agreement with the EU guaranteeing the rights of EU citizens living in the UK and of UK nationals living in the EU. EU citizens living in the UK, along with their family members, will be able to stay and continue their lives, with the same access to work, study, benefits and public services that they enjoy now. Existing close family members living overseas will be able to join them here in future.”

As part of the UK leaving the EU, the UK Government has negotiated a deal which sets out the terms of the UK’s withdrawal. This is called the Withdrawal Agreement and was finalised between the EU and the UK Government in November 2018. Within this agreement are details on how those who have benefited from free movement within the EU will be protected when the UK leaves. However, the Withdrawal Agreement must be approved by the UK Parliament and it was rejected by the House of Commons in several votes between 15 January and 29 March 2019. There were various elements which MPs on both sides of the House did not agree with, including arrangements regarding the border between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland.

The UK government agreed an extension with the EU to allow time for the Prime Minister to seek agreement with Parliament on a way forward and to try to secure a majority for the agreed withdrawal process in the House of Commons.

She failed to do so and resigned as of 7 June 2019. Boris Johnson was elected by the Conservative Party membership as her successor. He renegotiated aspects of the deal, in particular those related to the border between the North and the South in Ireland, but also failed to secure support in the House of Commons. After the House secured an amendment that prevented the UK leaving without a deal, a General Election was agreed on.

Following the UK General Election on 12 December 2019, which returned a large Conservative Party majority, the Withdrawal Agreement has now passed through the Houses of Parliament ahead of the 31/01/2020 deadline and has also been ratified by the EU parliament.

The date for the UK leaving the EU is therefore 31/01/2020. This has no impact on the end date of the transition period or the deadline for applying to the EU Settlement Scheme, which remain the same 31 December 2020 and 30 June 2021 respectively.

What does this mean for EU citizens in London?
This means that you will be able to stay in London and you will be able to live your life pretty much as you do now when the UK leaves the EU. Your current residence status will be protected, you will be able to work as now and access services and healthcare. However, you will have to apply for a new residence status, which confirms that you live in the UK and have the right to do so. This is called Settled Status or pre-Settled Status.

What does this mean for EEA citizens from Norway, Liechtenstein and Iceland, or Switzerland?
The rights of citizens from other EEA countries, Norway, Liechtenstein and Iceland, as well as those from Switzerland have now been agreed in separate agreements between the UK government and the governments of these countries. Citizens of the EEA countries and Switzerland will have the same rights as citizens of the EU27 countries and can apply for Settled Status and pre-Settled Status.

What are Settled Status and pre-Settled Status?
EU regulations for Freedom of Movement will no longer apply to the UK after December 2020, so the UK Government is making it compulsory for EU, EEA, and Swiss citizens, along with their family members, who wish to remain legally in the UK after 31 December 2020, to apply for a new residence status. This is called Settled Status and it grants Indefinite Leave to Remain to successful applicants.

The UK Government and the Home Office have stated that they expect that the vast majority of applicants will be successful, with only very few exceptions related to convictions for serious crimes. You will have to provide evidence that you have lived in the UK for five consecutive years (continuous residence) to be eligible for Settled Status when you apply. If you can’t, but have entered the UK on or before 31 December 2020, you may be granted pre-Settled Status. If you have pre-Settled Status you can apply for Settled Status once you have five years of continuous residence in the UK.

There are some exceptions, for instance for people who hold Permanent Residence (PR) or who Indefinite Leave to Remain, which is explained in the section ‘What if I already have Permanent Residence or Indefinite Leave to Remain or Indefinite Leave to Enter status?’ below.
Why would you need to apply for Settled Status or pre-Settled Status?
Settled Status guarantees your right to reside in the UK after 30 June 2021, the end of the six months grace period after 31 December 2020 for applications to be submitted. If you are an EU citizen and you want to continue to live and work in the UK, to have the same access to benefits, public services and healthcare, the right to study and rent accommodation after 31 December 2020, you will need this new status. If you are a family member of an EU citizen, or a citizen from Norway, Liechtenstein and Iceland, countries also included in the EEA, or of Switzerland this will also apply to you and you must apply, even if you yourself are not a citizen of any of these countries.

Who needs to apply?
If you and your family members are EU, EEA, or Swiss citizens and live in the UK, you will all have to apply. This includes Third Country nationals whose immigration status is dependent on an EU, EEA or Swiss family member.

This does not apply to Irish citizens, or EU, EEA or Swiss citizens who have Indefinite Leave to Remain (ILR) or Indefinite Leave to Enter the UK (ILE), but they may still want to apply.

People with a valid Permanent Residence (PR) document will need to exchange this for Settled Status as their document will become invalid after 31 December 2020. You can find further information under the Eligibility section.

The Home Office has stated that if you hold British nationality in addition to that of an EU, EEA or Swiss country, which is known as Dual Nationality, you will not be able to apply for Settled Status, although certain rights protected under the Withdrawal Agreement may still apply to you. Close family members being able to join you in the UK and family members of so-called Lounes dual nationals can apply under the scheme. Campaigning organisations are still contesting this and we will update this section if there is any change.

What are your rights as a settled EU citizen after Brexit?
With Settled Status you will broadly keep the same rights as now. You will be able to stay in the UK as long as you like. You will be able to work in the UK, use the NHS, study and have access to public funds such as benefits and pensions, if you are eligible for these. Existing close family members living outside the UK will be able to join you here in the future in the same way they can now. Future spouses or family members, with the exception of children born to you or adopted by you, will be subject to future UK immigration law after 31 December 2020.

Some rights, such as the right to vote and stand as a candidate in local and regional elections are still to be confirmed in England. Scotland and Wales have now adopted legislation that guarantees voting rights for all eligible foreign residents in Local, Scottish Parliament and National Assembly for Wale elections.

With Settled Status you can also leave the UK for extended periods of time, but if you are absent for five years or more, you will lose your status and can only return as a new immigrant, subject to the new immigration laws.
Settled Status also allows you to apply for British Citizenship, provided you meet the criteria for this. The route to do this through Permanent Residence is also still open during the Transition Period.

The arrangement for EFTA (Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein) and Swiss citizens are covered by separate agreements with these countries, however, almost all rights are the same. For Swiss citizens the right of return is four years, not five.

What if there is no deal when the UK leaves the EU?
Since the Withdrawal Agreement has been approved by all parties, this is now highly unlikely. However, we advise you to apply to the EU Settlement Scheme before 31 December 2020. Although the ‘grace period’ allows you to apply up to 30 June 2021, it is unclear at present how landlords and employers can distinguish between EU Citizens resident in the UK before 31 December 2020 and new arrivals within that period. They may therefore refuse to accept EU passports as the only proof of eligibility to work and rent. Settled Status or pre-Settled Status will give you the certainty that you will not be refused employment or tenancy.
Settled status: application process

We strongly recommend you apply before 31 December 2020, although applicants have until 30 June 2021 to apply. Applications received after 30 June 2021 may still be considered, for instance if you are joining a family member with Settled or pre-Settled Status.

The following guidance will help you find out about your status and what you and your family members will need to complete an application.

We will regularly update this hub with new information as soon as we are aware of any changes.

Can I apply for Settled Status or pre-Settled Status?

If you have lived in the UK continuously for five years or more (and at least six months in any 12 months period), you can apply for Settled Status. In the application process you will be asked to confirm your identity, provide evidence of the length of your stay in the UK and be asked to declare any criminal convictions.

If you have lived in the UK for less than five years by the end of December 2020, you will be able to apply for pre-Settled Status. Once you reach five years of continuous residence, you will then be able to apply for Settled Status.

What if I already have Permanent Residence or Indefinite Leave to Remain or Indefinite Leave to Enter status?

Settled Status is in effect Indefinite Leave to Remain. People who have Indefinite Leave to Remain or Indefinite Leave to Enter the UK have already the right to remain in the UK. However, they might wish to apply for Settled Status to obtain the additional rights agreed under the Withdrawal Agreement, such as the right to a five-year absence and the right to be joined by eligible family members. Some people might also find it easier to demonstrate your right of residence with Settled Status than with ILR.

People who hold a valid Permanent Residence document will have to apply for Settled Status, as the Permanent Residence status will become invalid on 31 December 2020. The document however may still be relevant, as evidence of the nationality of British born children, for instance, so needs to be retained by you. During the application process you can indicate whether you have Indefinite Leave to Remain or Permanent Residence.

If you held Indefinite Leave to Remain and cannot provide proof of this, for instance you have lost your documents or they have been destroyed for some reason, and you arrived in the UK before 31 December 1988, you may also be able to apply under the Windrush Scheme.
You will need to declare that you have not been absent from the UK for any periods of more than 2 years (Indefinite Leave to Remain or Indefinite Leave to Enter) or 5 years (Permanent Residence). However, you will not need to provide evidence of the length of your stay in the UK.

If you are uncertain about your rights, always seek independent legal advice. Resources available to you in London can be found on our support services page.

Does this also apply to Irish Citizens?
Irish citizens have a right of residence in the UK that is not reliant on the UK’s membership of the EU and are considered ‘settled’ from the moment they took residence in the UK. They will therefore not be required to apply for the new status under the scheme, although they are not excluded from doing so if they so wish. Family members of Irish citizens who are resident under freedom of movement rights will need to apply for Settled Status.

Eligible family members of Irish Citizens living in the UK will be able to obtain Settled Status under the scheme without the Irish citizen doing so.

And what about Children?
All family members will need to apply individually, although parents or guardians will need to complete the applications on behalf of children in their care. Children under the age of 21 of parents with Settled Status, will be eligible for Settled Status upon application, even if they have lived in the UK for less than five years. A full application is required, but if parents have proof of their continuous residence, it will be presumed that dependent children will have this too. This applies also to children who arrive in the UK after 31 December 2020.

Applications for looked after children will be submitted by the authorities in whose care they are placed.

Children born in the UK with one parent who is already a UK citizen, or has Permanent Residence or Settled Status when they were born, are British citizens and do not need to naturalise or register. Some exceptions may apply to this. You can find out more information about whether a child might already be British.

For children who have been adopted a legal adoption document that is recognised in the UK will have to be provided. Children born or adopted after 31 December 2020 will also be protected.

Read examples of how Settled Status and pre-Settled Status applies to different families.

What about people who need more help?
The Home Office is aware that there are many reasons why people will not have easy access to information, or are not able to understand or navigate through the system without assistance. They may not have access to computers or know how to use one, they may have a limited understanding of the English language, they may have a disability or other health issues that prevent them from engaging with the application process easily or without support. For people who are unable to access online services, or find this difficult, an Assisted Digital service will be offered. Assisted digital support can include telephone support, face-to-face support at selected libraries or at home for anyone unable to access either of these services.

The Home Office has consulted with user groups that represent a variety of communities, however, this remains an area of particular concern and individual conditions and circumstances of applicants may demand specific support. Through its £9 million Community Fund, the Home Office is funding 57 organisations that are identifying and reaching out to those eligible to apply for Settled Status, as well as offering specific support to them with making their application. This includes people in care, people that are hospitalised for a longer period and elderly, as well as travelling communities (Roma) and those with no fixed address. The Mayor is also funding organisations to provide this support in London.

The Home Office have a dedicated help line and other services. Any questions about an application made during the pilot, the EU Settlement Scheme Resolution Centre can be contacted via 0300 123 7379 (inside the UK) or +44 (0) 203 080 0010 (outside the UK). Details of charges can be found here www.gov.uk/call-charges. You can also ask a question using the online submissions form eu-settled-status-enquiries.service.gov.uk.

We have identified independent support and advice services in London that may be able to assist.

What if you have Dual Citizenship?
For EU, EEA and Swiss nationals who also have a British passport nothing will change. As you are a British national, you will continue to be able to access the same rights as now without the need to apply for Settled Status. However, you may still retain the rights agreed in the draft Withdrawal Agreement although the UK Government has not yet provided details of how dual citizens will prove their entitlement. See the next section for more details.

Can I apply for British Citizenship?
If you hold a valid Permanent Residence (PR) document or have Indefinite Leave to Remain (ILR), you may also be able to apply for British Citizenship. You can also do this once you have been granted Settled Status, although you will have to wait 12 months before you can submit this. However, not all nations allow their citizens to hold a passport of another country, or only under specific circumstances, so you may have to lose your current nationality.

If you are eligible for British Citizenship and want to apply for this, it may be good to check first with your embassy whether you can retain the passport of your country of birth and under what conditions. Find out how to apply for British Citizenship and find contact details of the EU27 embassies in London.
What about non-EU, EEA or Swiss family members and dependants?
Proof of your relationship to your EU, EEA, or Swiss citizen family member (for example, a birth, marriage or civil partnership certificate) can be scanned and submitted through the online application form. You will also need to provide evidence of your family member’s identity and residence, if they have not yet obtained Settled Status themselves, and your fingerprints and a photo of your face at an application centre in the UK, unless you already have a biometric residence card.

EU, EEA or Swiss Citizens who are resident in the UK by 31 December 2020, can be joined by current family members, even if these are not EU, EAA or Swiss citizens themselves. This is also the case for those who obtain of have obtained British citizenship in addition to the citizenship of the country of their origin. They will retain the rights that allow them to be joined automatically by a current non-EU, EEA or Swiss family member after 31 December 2020. Close family members are, in this case, dependent parents and grand parents, as well as children under 21 or dependent children over 21. This follows the judgment in the so-called Lounes case. UK citizens may not have this automatic right.

This does not apply to British Citizens who have obtained an EU, EEA or Swiss passport (including Irish), to enable them to retain the right to Freedom of Movement in the EU, but still reside in the UK. As they did not immigrate into the UK and are not considered to have exercised their treaty rights and will be treated as a British citizen for this purpose.

If you are not certain about the status of dependents and family members, you may want to ask for independent advice. Organisations in London that you may want to ask for independent advice.

EU citizens temporarily living outside the UK
Currently you can live outside the UK for a maximum of two years, before you lose Indefinite Leave to Remain or Permanent Residence. Under the draft Withdrawal Agreement agreed between the EU and the UK, this will be extended to five years for Settled Status.

If you are currently living abroad and intend to return, you may want to consider doing so before the cut-off date of 31 December 2020 to apply for Settled Status or pre-Settled Status.

There may be circumstances under which you cannot or need not return by that date, but are still be eligible to apply. You can now apply from abroad using the ID verification app. However, if you cannot use the app, it may be difficult or even impossible to send your documents securely from your country of residence, which will prevent you from making the application.

EU citizens arriving after the cut-off date (post Brexit immigration rules)
If you arrive after the cut-off date of 31 December 2020, your right to stay in the UK will be considered under any new immigration rules to be put in place after Brexit. So, unless anything else is agreed between the UK and EU and you are not a close relative of an EU, EEA or Swiss family member with Settled Status or pre-Settled Status in the UK, you will be treated like any other national arriving here and the immigration legislation relevant at that time will apply to you. An exception to this may be people who qualify for pre-Settled Status, but did not return before deadline to apply.

Nothing of what I’ve read so far fits with my particular family circumstances. Where can I find further advice?
There are a number of other cases in which, for instance, children or carers can derive rights from EU citizens who reside or have resided in the UK, or where the non-EU carers of EU citizens in the UK can derive rights from those the care for. Free Movement has more information on both.

If any of this applies to you or you are in any way concerned your rights or the rights of your family members, it will be good to ask for independent advice. We have compiled a list of accredited organisations and other resources in London that may be able to help.

How can I apply? (mobile app, online, paper, library)
The EU Settlement Scheme involves an identity check as part of the application. The easiest and quickest way to complete the identity section of your application is using the EU Exit: ID document check app, which is now available on both Apple iPhone 7 or newer models and Android 6.0 and above. You will be able to scan your passport and it can read the chip with biometric data.

There are also ID document scanning services are available at a number of centres (charges may apply).

It is possible to submit paper applications in specific cases and after receiving approval and the required form from the Home Office.

For people who are unable to access online services, or find this difficult, an Assisted Digital service will be offered. Assisted digital support can include telephone support, face-to-face support at selected libraries or at home for anyone unable to access either of these services.

What documents and other information do I need?
You will need a valid passport or biometric national identity card. A biometric document contains a chip (like a bank card has a chip) that holds information on you.

You will need proof of residence in the UK, unless you already have a valid Permanent Residence document, or Indefinite Leave to Remain or Indefinite Leave to Enter the UK. If you have paid tax through work or received benefits, you can use your National Insurance number to help confirm that you have been residing in the UK.

If there is not enough information held on national databases, such as HMRC or DWP, you will be asked for further evidence to prove your continuous residence. This could include:

- P60s or P45s
- payslips
- bank statements
- utility bills, Council Tax bills, phone bills (mobile and landline, as long as they have your name and address)
- annual business accounts
- employer contracts or letters confirming employment
- letters, invoices or certificates from accredited educational organisations
- passport stamps confirming entry at the UK border
- airline or train tickets confirming travel into the UK
- letters from care centres, GPs, or hospitals, as well as medical appointments

There are currently limitations on the number of documents you can scan and upload. The Home Office will arrange for applicants to submit via other methods should they not be able to stick to the limit, however methods for this have been varied. You will not need to provide evidence of your entire residence in the UK, only for the period that proves you are eligible for Settled or pre-Settled Status.

If you are from outside the EU, any of the other three EEA countries or Switzerland you will need to provide evidence of your relationship to a family member from the EU, EEA, or Switzerland living in the UK.

If you are not able to provide any further information or proof of residence, the Home Office has stated it will engage with you further to help determine your residence in the UK.

There is a useful checklist of documents and information that you can use to help support your preparation to apply.

Criminality checks
You will be asked to declare any criminal convictions that appear in your criminal record in the UK and overseas, or that of any children between the ages of 18 to 21, who you are submitting an application for. These will be checked against the UK’s crime databases. You do not need to declare any of the following: convictions that do not need to be disclosed (‘spent convictions’), warnings (‘cautions’), alternatives to prosecution, for example speeding fines.

You may still be eligible to apply for Settled or pre-Settled Status if you have and convictions and they will be assessed on a case-by-case basis. However, it may well be a good idea to seek independent legal advice prior to making your application, especially if you have had more than one conviction or a custodial sentence of 12 months or more. We have provided a list of independent legal advisors.

Is there a cost?
It’s free to apply for the scheme.

Initially the Government announced that a fee would be charged (£65 for adults and £32.50 for children under 16). However, in a statement to the House of Commons on 21 January 2019 the Prime Minister announced that this fee requirement was withdrawn and that applications are now free of charge. Those that acquired status under the scheme prior to this announcement will get a refund.

Costs may still be attached to other parts of the process, such as the use of the document and ID checking service in dedicated centres, usually around £14 per applicant. Some applicants may also need to use the UKVCAS as well as immigration and legal advice, if your specific circumstances require this.
Additional information

Applying from abroad
Applications can now be made from abroad, using the ID scanning app and online application process. If you cannot scan your passport or ID card, you may be asked to send these to the Home Office. However, do check whether local laws permit you to send ID documents by post and contact the EU Settlement Resolution Centre if you are in any doubt.

Do I get proof of Settled Status/pre-Settled Status?
If you are granted Settled Status you will not get a document to prove this. However, if you are ever required to provide proof of your status, for instance for a new employer, landlord or other health practitioner, you can provide them with an access code and web link, so that they can confirm electronically your status. They will not have access to any other information about you through this link.

Can I Appeal the Home Office’s Decision?
There are several reasons why you may wish to appeal the Home Office’s decision. The most common reasons are:

- You are granted Pre-Settled Status but believe you are eligible for Settled Status;
- You believe the Home Office has mistaken your identity; or
- You have been refused Settled Status or Pre-Settled Status

The EU Settlement Scheme does not have a traditional appeal process, such as through a tribunal or independent complaints body. However, there are some things you can do if one of the above applies to you.

If you are granted Pre-Settled Status but believe you are eligible for Settled Status, you will first be able to confirm whether or not to accept the offer given to you by the Home Office. At the start of your application, you will also be asked how long you have continuously lived in the UK. In general, you should not accept Pre-Settled Status if you think you should get Settled Status; instead, first try providing additional evidence of your 5+ years of continuous residence.

If you do not have additional evidence at this stage, you may choose to accept Pre-Settled Status in the first instance. You could then apply for Settled Status if you discover further evidence that can prove your residence. Before doing so, you should contact an immigration adviser or the Home Office’s EU Settlement Scheme Resolution Centre.

Alternatively, you may wish to apply for a review of the decision. This is also the case if you think there has been a mistake of identity. This is called an administrative review. A request must be submitted within 28 days of the date of the decision. An £80 fee applies but will be refunded if: a) the application is successful, or b) if the application is rejected because it is invalid. The fee will not be refunded if the review is successful because you have submitted additional information. You can request a review through an application form.

So far, the Home Office has only refused applications completely on the basis of ‘suitability’; where the applicant has serious criminal convictions. In these cases, a challenge to the Home Office’s decision can only be brought via judicial review. You should seek independent legal advice if this applies to you.

It is expected that a full statutory right to appeal will be introduced if the UK leaves the EU with an agreement in place. However, as this is currently unclear, we will update these pages as soon as further information emerges.

Finally, the establishment of an independent authority to oversee the process has been agreed in the draft Withdrawal Agreement and during the Transition Period the European Commission continues to have oversight. Similarly to the previously mentioned statutory right of appeal, we will update these pages as soon as further information emerges.

Conditions for retaining Settled Status once granted
To retain Settled Status you should not leave the UK for more than a continuous period of five years, or be convicted of a serious crime. Otherwise there are no barriers that we are aware of to retain your Settled Status and to remain in the UK as you are now.

Future rights
Much of this will depend on the final nature of the settlement between the UK and the EU and the arrangements for oversight that are agreed, but your rights will become part of UK law. The Withdrawal Agreement will form the basis of any challenges and events around this are developing. We will update this section when further information becomes available.

Support services for European Londoners
This hub provides independent guidance to EU27 citizens and citizens from Norway, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Switzerland and their families who live in London.

The aim is help you prepare for your Settled Status application. If you require more information than what is on this page, you can search our list of support services for access to reliable, accredited and trusted sources of further support and information.

We’ve also provided a glossary to help explain some of the terms on this hub. This information does not amount to legal advice and should not be relied on exclusively.

You can also sign up for updates on the Home Office information site.

EU treaties

The EU is founded on a series of legal treaties between its member states. For example, freedom of Movement rights for EU citizens were established as part of an EU treaty and governed by EU directives.

Family members

The following can be considered as direct family members of an EU/EEA citizen: their spouse or civil partner, direct descendants of the EU/EEA national or their spouse or civil partner who are under the age of 21, dependent direct relatives in the ascending line of the EEA national or their spouse or civil partner.

Family Visa (EEA Family Permit)

EEA Family Permit is a visa to enter the UK for non-EEA family members or extended family members of EEA citizens.

Free movement

Free movement and residence of persons is the right of EU and EEA citizens and their family members to move and reside freely within any country of the EU. This is a fundamental principle enshrined in Article 45 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union. EU citizens are entitled to:

- Look for a job in another EU country
- Work there without the need for a work permit
- Reside there for that purpose
- Stay there even after employment has finished
- Enjoy equal treatment with nationals in access to employment, working conditions and all other social and tax advantages
