3. Amy Lamé– Night Time Economy and the role of Night Markets

3.1 Amy Lamé is the first appointed Night Czar for London with mission to support London as a vibrant 24-hour city. Amy presented an overview of the challenges London currently faces in terms of its night time economy but also highlighted the numerous opportunities that London’s distinct and vibrant offer presents. Amy’s work has taken an interdisciplinary approach to change the perceptions around night time economy and to build a lively nightscape for London to become a vibrant night time city as per numerous other cities worldwide.

3.2 Amy has been meeting with key partners, holding regular night time surgeries in hospitals, fire stations and homeless centres. As part of the Mayor’s commitment to make London safer for women and girls, she is hosting the first Women’s Night Safety Summit in parallel with the creation of a Women’s night safety charter.

3.3 Amy stated the significant role markets play in contributing towards London as a 24-hour city. One example includes the creation of night time markets and the potential for more work to be done addressing opening hours to allow a broader range of users to access markets.

3.4 Amy invited LMB members to attend the next Night Time Economy Borough Champions Network meeting. The network will allow opportunity to reiterate messaging around markets and the night time economy.

3.5 Amy communicated the restrictions of the current local authority regulations which monitor and regulate the night time economy, which are unintentionally restraining the promotion of more activities at night. The GLA will be making recommendations to boroughs to promote the importance of a night time economy strategy. There are good example precedents such as LB Westminster and LB Enfield who will develop a night time strategy to create a stronger focus on social inclusion. Amy and the Borough Champions Network are also considering the legislation and licencing around night time and how can that be progressed.

3.6 Joe Harrison (advisor) highlighted that if market operators are to be encouraged to create more night time markets, the markets should not simply limit the interventions to extending the opening hours but instead look to curate and think more creatively about a bespoke evening offer which is suited to the local context and needs. A more curated night time approach for markets may also create opportunities for new traders including young people. Mercato Metropolitano in Elephant and Castle was pointed to as a good precedent.

3.7 Joe reiterated the opportunity for market operators to think outside the box in terms of their offer and to utilise the skills and diverse talent found amongst London’s diverse traders to achieve this.

Decisions:

a) GLA officers will continue to liaise with Amy and work together to integrate the night time economy as a key topic as part of the 10th International Public Markets conference being held in London in June 2019.

b) GLA to circulate the next meeting dates for the Borough Champions Network.

5.3 The Board were in general agreement with the overall budget distribution but raised the LMB would like to see a further developed proposal for the Youth Market project which outlines the objectives and states its intentions regarding sustainability, training, location and frequency and whether a toolkit can be developed to support the youth market model.

5.4 Diane Cunningham reiterated the importance to support young enterprise and for the Youth Market project to be developed in a partnership approach instead of establishing something new.
